Davis helps U.S. World University team win gold

North Carolina's Hubert Davis led the U.S. World University team in scoring with nearly 18 points per game as the Americans captured the gold medal at the World University Games in Sheffield, England in July.

In a 96-56 win over Canada in the finals, Davis and Indiana's Calbert Cheaney had 14 points each to lead the Americans. Wake Forest's Rodney Rogers had 12 points, George Lynch of North Carolina had 11 and Eric Anderson of Indiana had 10.

Against Israel in the semifinals, Davis scored 19 to lead the United States in an 89-59 victory. Davis was the tournament's top 3-point shooter, too.

Rozier, Harris leave UNC

Freshman Clifford Rozier and sophomore Kenny Harris announced April 26 their intentions of transferring to other schools after completing the semester at UNC.

Rozier, a 6-foot-10 forward from Bradenton, Fla., chose Louisville May 15 after playing in all 35 games in 1990-91 for fourth-ranked North Carolina. He averaged 4.9 points and 3.0 rebounds.

Sources around Rozier say he also considered Kentucky and Florida. Kentucky voluntarily withdrew from consideration after violating an NCAA regulation about entertaining prospects within a radius of 25 miles of campus. Harris, a 6-1 guard from Petersburg, tying him for fourth place overall. Second-team All-America Pat Moore finished 14th with a 293. Burton and John Aber both finished in the top 30 with scores of 294 and 296, respectively.

Scherrer, Aber and Burton earned honorable mention All-America.

Tuchi linked the technology enhancement fee to discussions of another possible fee, known as the "all-inclusive fee," that would be earmarked for a variety of programs.

Boulton said the all-inclusive fee was totally unrelated to the technology enhancement fee. The all-inclusive fee would lump the present fees together with funds for financial aid, the academic libraries and computers. Provost Dennis O'Connor said he hoped the technology enhancement fee would be pursued at a future date.

"We were very much in favor of these fees," he said. "I don't think (the moratorium) was necessary.

Heyd said the moratorium would freeze student activity fee increases UNC-CH students approved in February, one to support a.p.p.l.e.s. and another to adjust student fees for inflation.

The a.p.p.l.e.s. fee would have generated about $30,000 for the University from a 90-cent-per-student fee increase.

Lorsch said administrators could have focused on problems with higher priority than technology enhancement.

'Why they should pick this as the most pressing thing, I have no idea. There are a lot of issues that remain unaddressed - (teaching assistant) stipends, the libraries, cut class sections." Paul Bredderman and Mara Lee contributed to this article.

Financial aid officials will first distribute available funds to students who applied for aid by March I. Morris said. 'At this point we feel a commitment to those who applied by March 1 to be able to deliver a financial aid notification to them if they're eligible, in time to get funds at the beginning of school,"

The financial aid office has decided not to take calls from parents and students between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., to process paperwork.

Out-of-state students may not qualify for additional aid at all.

"Usually when the state appropriates money, it's not for out-of-state students,' Morris said.

Davis to Fork Union Oscar Sturgis, an All-America at Richmond County High School in Rockingham, signed an athletic grant May 24 to play football at UNC after meeting the NCAA's academic requirements for incoming freshmen. Sturgis, a 6-6, 245-pound tight end, played football last fall for Fork Union Military Academy in Virginia. He had committed to North Carolina after his senior season but failed to meet the NCAA Proposition 48 minimum score on the Scholastic Aptitude Test. Sturgis found out he met the requirements when he received his most recent SAT results in the mail.

Meanwhile, Larry Davis, one of two UNC basketball recruits for 1991-92, did not meet NCAA requirements for eligibility as a freshman. He will attend Fork Union this fall. Davis, the South Carolina high school player of the year, passed up his final chance to take the SAT in June.

Top grid prospect commits to UNC

Marcus Jones, the top rising senior football prospect in North Carolina, verbally committed to enroll at UNC in the fall of 1992 in June.

Jones, a 6-6 1/2, 246-pound defensive lineman from Southwest Onslow High School near Jacksonville, informed the Tar Heel staff of his decision June 20 while attending the Carolina/Mack Brown football camp. He cannot sign a binding letter of intent until February.

Jones is one of only two major prospects from the state in the last eight years to announce his intentions before his senior season. Center Lance Johnson of Charlotte Myers Park committed to Notre Dame in the fall of 1988.

UNC linebacker Hollier breaks foot

Tar Heel linebacker Dwight Hollier suffered a broken foot July 15 and missed the beginning of practice this month. The 6-3, 239-pound senior injured himself at his summer job and the foot was placed in a walking cast.

The leading tackler in the ACC last season, Hollier is expected to be ready for the season opener.

5 All-America performances earn Track 10th at NCAAs

By Jeff McKinley

Led by five All-America performances, the North Carolina women's track team earned its highest finish ever with a 10th-place ranking at the NCAA Championship meet in Eugene, Ore., held May 29-June 1.

The Tar Heels, which finished second in the ACC, tallied 18 points and tied Arkansas for 10th place at the University of Oregon's Hayward Field. LSU finished first with 78 points.

Four Tar Heels earned individual All-America status based on their performances at the championship meet, as did the 4x400 meter relay team. To become an All-American, an athlete must place eighth or higher in an event.

Senior Sharon Couch completed her spectacular career by earning All-America honors in the long jump and competing in the 100-meter hurdles. She placed sixth in the long jump with a 20-foot, 6 1/2 inch leap but did not qualify for the 100 finals.

Couch is familiar with the distinc-tion of being an All-American. In 1990, she obtained the honors for both the long jump and the 4x100 relay.

Junior Tisha Waller, Nicky Hudson and Penny Blackwell also received

All-America honors. Tisha Waller's 6-3 3/4 jump placed her second in the high jump and gave her All-America status in that event for the second time in her career.

First-time All-American Nicky Hudson finished seventh in the heptathlon with 5,349 points. She owns the ACC meet record with 5,504 points, set in April at the ACC Championships.

Blackwell's wind-aided jump of 41-8 placed her seventh in the triple jump, making her an All-American in that event for the second consecutive year. Blackwell also competed in the long jump but did not reach the finals.

The 4x400 relay team consisting of seniors Kendra Mackey and Sonya Thomas, junior Rebecca Russell and sophomore Euba Wilkerson ran to a sixth-place finish with a time of Other Tar Heels who qualified for the NCAAs were senior Jeanne Peterson and sophomore Keith Mathis. Peterson competed in the 5,000, while Mathis, the only member of the men's team to compete, ran in the 800.
