seem to have that problem because they appear to be threatening to men."

The grind of making a TV series has helped her improve her skills, she said. "The schedule for this show, as hard as it is, is great for learning how to work," she said. "You get to practice your craft more than doing one or two pictures a year. We do eight pages of dialogue a day. In pictures, if we did three, that was pushing it."

Hemingway is the granddaughter of novelist Ernest Hemingway and made her movie debut at age 13 in "Lipstick." Her older sister, Margaux Hemingway, starred in the movie. But Mariel says she preferred living in Idaho — where she could ski, swim, hike and go horseback riding — to acting as a child.

When Hemingway was 16, Woody Allen cast her as his very underage girlfriend in "Manhattan." She received an Oscar nomination as best supporting actress. At 18, she played the lead in the movie "Personal Best" about top fe-
