Wolfpack Mapps out revenge victory, 71-65

RALEIGH — If the 3,700 frenzied fans gathered in Reynolds Coliseum Wednesday night knew that the Duke and UNC men's teams were battling a few miles down Tobacco Road, they sure didn't show it.

The Raleigh rowdies had more important matters to attend to.

The hyper-charged crowd peered intently at the venerable Reynolds hardwood as Wolfpack All-America candidate Rhonda Mapp hoisted her State teammates on her back in a 71-65 victory against No. 21 North Carolina.

The 6-foot-3 Mapp was unstoppable down the stretch, scoring eight points in the final 3:08 to secure the win. In the last 14:01 of the second half, Mapp single-handedly outscored UNC 12-11. The win improved the struggling Wolfpack to 12-8 overall, 3-6 in the ACC. The Tar Heels fell to 16-4, 5-4 in the league.

Despite the loss, the Tar Heels' .800 winning percentage is the second best in school history after 20 games. The 1983-84 Tar Heels jumped out to a 17-3 start.

UNC head coach Sylvia Hatchell said she thought Mapp made the difference in Wednesday night's game.

"In the second half, we saw the Rhonda Mapp show," Hatchell said of the ACC's leading scorer. "She's a great player. I'm glad she's a senior."

Emily Johnson

After a sluggish first half in which Mapp hit only 3 of 9 field goals, the Asheville senior turned it up in the second half, finishing with 23 points.

Mapp said that in the early going she had been trying too hard. "I took some bad shots in the first half," Mapp said. "I knew I had to calm down if I wanted the team to win."

In a game where the intensity often resembled that of a gridiron clash, two touchdowns runs by the Wolfpack proved costly for UNC.

The second seven-point run began with 1:17 remaining and the Tar Heels clinging to a 65-64 lead. That's when Mapp took charge, sliding past North Carolina freshman Carrie Mckee on the right baseline to sink the go-ahead basket.

The Wolfpack added three free throws and a Teri Whyte layup to seal the victory. UNC did not score in the last 3:22 of the game.

N.C. State's initial 7-0 run came when it scored the final three points of the first half and the first four of the second period.

Emily Johnson, the Tar Heels' senior point guard, said N.C. State's defensive intensity in the second half made the difference.

"I thought our intensity in the first half was very good," Johnson said. "In the second half, State's intensity picked up, and defensively, they did a really good job. We just didn't step up."

The feisty Johnson was all over the court Wednesday, scoring nine points while dishing out seven assists and scrapping for five steals.

Tar Heel sophomore Tonya Sampson took team scoring honors, tallying 16 points on 6-of-18 shooting.

The Clinton native was held in check throughout the second stanza, though, mustering three points.

UNC freshman Charlotte Smith, whom Hatchell said was not feeling well the entire game, chipped in 12 points and grabbed a team-high eight boards. No other Tar Heel reached double figures.

The two teams played to a virtual stalemate for most of the first half, as the lead changed hands 16 times in the first 16 minutes.

The Tar Heels appeared to take command late in the half, starting a 7-1 run on a Sampson 3-pointer at the 2:00 mark.

But before the Tar Heels could run and hide, the Pack closed the half with three free throws to narrow UNC's lead to 44-39 at intermission. State continued the spurt in the second half, scoring two quick baskets to pull to within one.

From there, the Tar Heels held onto the lead until the 10:18 mark, when Whyte buried a turnaround from five feet away.

State head coach Kay Yow said Whyte — who had 10 points and seven rebounds off the bench — was the key in the final 10 minutes.

"All of a sudden, Teri wanted the ball," Yow said. "She started playing with desire and going to the boards."

"I think she was the difference."

In the early going, the Tar Heels must have thought they were seeing double. N.C. State's Jenny and Krissy Kuziemski, twins that were born five minutes apart, were on target throughout the first 20 minutes. The twosome combined for 14 first-half points on 7-of-9 shooting.

The Wolfpack's Danyel Parker, the all-time leading scorer in North Carolina high school basketball history, played all 40 minutes for the second straight game.

The Clinton native could not get her shot going all night (4 of 13), but she made her presence felt in other ways. The 5-6 guard had 10 rebounds in the first half.

ket, Montross sat out two portions of the game, once to have a gash on the back of his head closed and in the second half for a cut under his left eye.

The head wound, he said, was from someone's tooth, and he later went to the hospital for treatment of the injuries, bloodied but happy.

"I'm basically tired of them and I'm glad we got rid of them," Montross said.

Calling it a rough game was an understatement. UNC's Kevin Salvadori took a few swipes at Duke players throughout the game, and even one of the Duke trainers had ice on her face at game's end.

Bobby Hurley, whose six assists gave him the Duke all-time career record, had ice on his right foot in the Duke locker room after saying he heard something pop.

"At times, there were some cheap shots on their part and maybe on our part, too," Salvadori said. "But it was just a good win."

Duke put on a 9-0 run in less than two minutes and appeared on the way to one of its offensive explosions. That first-half burst, however, would be the best the Blue Devils could muster.

Duke turned an 11-7 deficit to a 16-11 edge on a Thomas Hill layup following a turnover at 12:55. The Tar Heels clawed their way back, taking a 20-19 lead on a three-point play by Hubert Davis at 9:27.

The lead would be exchanged 10 more times down the stretch before Thomas Hill connected on a jumper from the right baseline with two seconds left before intermission for a 39-38 edge.

But it was the second half North Carolina run that spelled the end. "I think both teams have to be tired and bruised," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "We could probably all use a week off after that one."

Hubert Davis led North Carolina with 16 points. Montross and Salvadori had 12 and Brian Reese 10. Brian Davis led Duke with 17 points. Thomas Hill had 16, Laettner 12, Hurley 11 and Grant Hill 10.

Huskies defeat Cowboys

LINCOLN, Neb. — Nebraska point guard Jamar Johnson picked the perfect night for his best performance in a Cornhusker uniform.

The sophomore from Elkhart, Ind., who sat out last season under the NCAA's Proposition 48 rule, scored a career-high 25 points and handled the ball against Oklahoma State's pressure defense to lead Nebraska to an 85-69 upset of the No. 2 and previously unbeaten Cowboys.

"I thought he was brilliant, dominating. I think that's the kind of player Jamar is," Nebraska coach Danny Nee said. "I think he has the potential for this high level of play every night. And he did it against great players."

Johnson said his major concern coming into the game was hanging onto the ball against the tough man-to-man of Oklahoma State.

"I had time to think last night, before I went to bed, that I was not going to pass the ball and turn it over. I was going to keep dribbling and make the pass," Johnson said. "I was in the flow tonight. There was no mismatch with either of their guards. We're all about the same size."

Johnson, who hit 7 of 8 free throws, led a Nebraska parade to the charity stripe where the Huskers hit 25 of 31 shots for the game, 21 of 25 in the second half.

Women swim for ACC title

The North Carolina women's swim team will begin its defense of the Atlantic Coast Conference Championship today at noon in Koury Natatorium.

The three-day meet lasts until Saturday with preliminaries each day at noon and finals each evening at 7 p.m.

The Tar Heels, ranked 11th in the country at 11-0 and 6-0 in the ACC, are without standout Sarah Perroni, who left the team in December to train full-time in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., for the United States Olympic Trials.

Club volleyball wins

The North Carolina men's club volleyball squad moved its record to 5-1 with a defeat of Duke Tuesday night in Durham.

The Tar Heels were led by senior outside hitter Matt Dunlap and senior setter Brian Johnson.

North Carolina matches up with N.C. State Friday at 6:30 p.m. in Fetzer Gym and returns Saturday for a 1 p.m. tilt with William & Mary.
