Navy Game

"I think we could have scored in any game we've played," Chaump said. "We drove the ball in every game we've played. It's an interesting trivia thing, but I know we can score TDs."

The Midshipmen could have scored on their first drive against Virginia, but they turned the ball over. The Middies couldn't capitalize when they had decent field position against Rutgers or Boston College.

It looked like the same pattern would continue against UNC. Early in the second quarter, Navy drove to the UNC 23 only to miss a 41-yard field goal. The Midshipmen moved the ball later that quarter to the UNC 35 and 38, but they punted both times. In the third quarter, they had it at North Carolina's 23 and fumbled it away.

UNC recovered three of six Navy fumbles and intercepted Van Matre once.

"We made a lot of mistakes and we need to overcome them," Navy's quarterback said. "After going scoreless in the first three games, it's definitely a big step."

Navy held the ball 6 1/2 minutes longer than UNC. The Middies also outgained UNC's vaunted rushers by 60 yards.

"I was satisfied with the kids' effort," Chaump said. "We've got to be satisfied with the improvement of every phase of our game."

Navy is a program trying to avoid a long, difficult rebuilding period. It's not easy to recruit players to come to Navy, and it's only harder when the team is losing.

At least now it's scoring.

but that's something we have to do," said Means, who rushed for 112 yards. "I think we used a lot of emotion last week against State, and I think it showed on the field (Saturday), but we can't let that affect us."

After Tripp Pignetti kicked a 22-yard field goal late in the third quarter to put UNC up 20-0, the only questions that seemed to be left were how large the final margin would be and whether the Tar Heels could keep the shutout intact.

Navy came right back and scored on its next possession, however. Fullback Cleavon Smith's 9-yard TD run with 12:56 left closed out an 11-play, 63-yard drive. Three minutes later, Navy recovered an errant pitch by Tar Heel

"We saw them score, and it's like, 'We better get down there and get some points on the board,'" said Stanicek, who threw for 219 yards on 13-of-21 passing. "No one was scared because we knew we were just hurting ourselves. We couldn't get into a rhythm of any sort."

North Carolina controlled the first half, allowing Navy but a missed field goal attempt. Meanwhile, UNC outscored Navy 17-0 despite having the ball for only 10 minutes in the half. Means scored his eighth touchdown of the year on a 16-yard run in the first quarter.

In the second quarter, Randy Jordan caught a dump pass from Stanicek and ran 65 yards for a score.

After UNC went three-downs-and-out on its first possession in the third quarter, Brown lifted Stanicek in favor of Thomas.

"We had 17 points and we felt like we should have had 28," Brown said. "We wanted to play Mike some also because we'll need him later in the year. Also, there didn't seem to be much emotion in the third quarter; it seemed like it was dead."

With Navy blitzing on practically every down, the UNC offense went nowhere in the third quarter, gaining just two first downs. On the scoring drive that resulted in Pignetti's field goal, the Tar Heel offense moved only 9 yards.

"The third quarter was atrocious," Brown said.

Navy used its time-consuming wishbone offense for the second time all season. Injuries to Navy's top two quarterbacks forced coach George Chaump to move tailback Van Matre to quarterback in last week's game against Rutgers.

Navy abandons its traditional offense with Van Matre at the helm because his strength is running the option. For the game, Van Matre threw for 138 yards and ran for 70.

largest emitter of air pollutants.

"We want to be a good environmental neighbor, and we're working to change," he said. "No one wants to live in a dirty environment, not even companies."

Federal Paper Board Co. recently spent $38 million for equipment to improve air quality control, Carroll said.

Champion International in Canton, the state's fifth-largest polluter, also is making a tremendous monetary investment to reduce air pollution. The company, a paper-making industry, is in the process of a $300 million modernization that will result in air emissions reductions, said David Karft, director of public relations for Champion.

"Our largest single pollutant is chloroform, which comes from the chlorine used to bleach wood pulp for white paper," he said. "We're taking chlorine out altogether and substituting other bleaching agents. This will really cut back on our pollutants."

Champion's modernization efforts should be completed in early 1994, he said.

PIRG's reason for publishing the study is to make the public aware of pollution levels and to increase pressure on toxic polluters to reduce and eliminate harmful emissions, Blackledge said.

The other top 10 plants in the state for toxic air pollution in 1990 were DuPont in Leland, Cape Industries in Wilmington, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco in Winston-Salem, Shuford Mills Inc. Hickory Tape Plant, Hickory Springs Foam in Conover, Texasgulf Inc. Phosphate in Aurora and Weyerhaeuser Co. Plymouth Millren.

Athletes

"Student-athletes (at Wake Forest) have been excluded for so long, they didn't know how to take advantage of these opportunities," Creech said. "A movement such as the one at Chapel Hill can't take place at Wake Forest unless there was a real commitment on the part of student leaders at Wake Forest to involve student-athletes."

"It would take a major issue" for student-athletes to organize themselves independently, he said.

Willie Fleming, the director of African-American Student Development at Appalachian State University, said student-athletes at the university were "not as involved as we would like to see them."

Although some student-athletes at ASU are committee members in student government, athletes do not hold any leadership positions. Fleming said this was a result of student-athletes already being "overwhelmed" by trying to balance classes with practice.

While little debate at ASU has resulted from recent events at UNC, Fleming attributed this primarily to the distance separating the schools and the lack of communication between them instead of student apathy.

Janet Dickerson, who works at the Office of Student Affairs at Duke University, said she had not witnessed a student-athlete movement such as UNC's during her employment at the university.

"I have never seen athletes unify in support of a single political stance," Dickerson said.

Cancer

"The question for us to answer is 'how do these differences affect risk for breast cancer?'"

Hulka said the researchers not only hoped to discover reasons for higher rates of breast cancer in different ethnic groups but also ways of stopping breast cancer once it has been detected.

Researchers have found that many black women come into cancer research centers at a later stage of the disease than most white women, making treatment more difficult.

"Black women have a lower rate of contracting the disease, but a higher mortality rate," Pisano said.

"We are not sure why, but there are several possible explanations.

"Blacks could contract a different form of breast cancer, one that is more aggressive.

"Black women could also have less access to health care because of socioeconomic factors, lack of medical insurance and other reasons.

"It is probable that black women are getting screened less often than white women."
