

Congresswomen prepare families for term

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Karan English will be fresh from her honeymoon when she leaves husband and family to take up her new job as Democratic congresswoman from Arizona.

English, like many of her female colleagues going to Congress for the first time, will be a long-distance commuter. She'll try to fly home on weekends to be with her husband and their five children from previous marriages.

"They decided that the best thing was to have one stable parent," said English's aide Bronwyn Reynolds of her boss and Rob Elliot, who owns a whitewater raft adventure company in Flagstaff.

Most of the 24 new female House members won't be moving to Washington with spouses. Nine aren't married, and the husbands of others are staying behind to tend to families or their own careers.

The percentages are likely to be the same for the four new female members of the Senate.

"Right from the start, it was never a consideration," said Deborah Pryce, R-Ohio, whose husband will remain behind to run his real estate firm.

"It was not a tough call," said Marjorie Margolies Mezvinsky, D-Pa., who will try to spend Friday through Monday in her district near Philadelphia, where she lives with her husband Edward, an international trade attorney, and their 11 children.

There are no precise figures on how many members of Congress, both men and women, leave their families back home when they come to Washington. Commuting is the common lot for most women in the House, said Andrea Camp, press spokeswoman for U.S. Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo.

Eva Clayton, the first black woman ever elected to Congress from North Carolina, will be making the 3 1/2-hour drive to her home in Littleton to be with her attorney husband, Theaeus Clayton Sr.

"At least initially, she'll be getting a lot of mileage on her car," said aide Nancy Fish.

Patty Murray, the Washington State Democrat who successfully ran as "a mom in tennis shoes," will be moving to the capital with her husband and two teenage children, said press secretary Jada Berteaux.

Recycling

Environmental Action Coalition and of the Greek Recycling and Environmental Awareness Committee.

In October, the OCRP began offering multifamily-housing recycling services to fraternity and sorority houses, which originally participated in curbside recycling. GREAC lobbied the Chapel Hill Town Council last spring to bring about the change.

"People will participate more if it's easy to do," Busby said. "The curbside program just wasn't convenient (for fraternities and sororities). Once your bins got full in your house, it just piled up."

The OCRP provides 65-gallon recycling carts for multifamily houses. Regular curbside recycling bins hold 14 gallons. Most multifamily houses have about five carts, and smaller houses share recycling carts.

GREAC Co-chairwoman Laura Gaines said the new recycling system for fraternities and sororities also had made it more convenient and inviting to recycle cardboard. "(Before) we would have to take cardboard to the drop-off sites," she said.

More effective recycling programs with businesses also are emphasized because of the large amount of recyclable waste generated by businesses, said Paul Dunn, OCRP commercial recycling specialist.

The OCRP currently operates a commercial cardboard collection program for about 100 businesses in Chapel Hill, Carrboro and Hillsborough. In another commercial program, 50 restaurants and bars in Chapel Hill and Carrboro recycle glass bottles and aluminum, steel and tin cans.

"For the most part, we've saturated all the major glass producers that are willing to recycle," Dunn said. The same is true for cardboard producers, he said.

The real problem is making sure businesses recycle properly, Dunn said. Some businesses have been dropped from the recycling programs because they failed to sort their recyclable materials properly, he said. "They basically treated recycling as trash."

To encourage more businesses to recycle and to recycle properly, OCRP has plans in the near future to give awards and public recognition for businesses with outstanding recycling programs.

The recognition might encourage some customers to patronize those businesses, Dunn said.

Werner agreed. "Businesses will get better PR by being good corporate citizens than by being wasteful citizens."

Even with all the recycling, one big problem is marketing the recyclable materials, said Cristina Perez, co-chairwoman of the Tar Heel Recycling Program. "No matter how much paper we put out in our recycling bins and our curbside bins, it's useless if nobody will take it."

McGee said plastic collection already had been affected because of limited markets. The OCRP now is collecting only two types of plastic — milk jugs and soda bottles — at its drop-off sites. The private contractors hired by the OCRP want to collect only the materials that they can process and sell to multiple markets, she said.

The federal government can help increase the market for recyclable materials, McGee said.

"Hopefully, with the new administration in the nation will see a new turnaround for mandating more recycled materials and having more economic subsidies for plants and industries that use recycled materials."

But the ultimate responsibility for increasing the market for recycled materials rests on the consumers because capitalism works on consumer demand, Perez said. "If (manufacturers) won't accept the materials, it's the responsibility of the consumer to push the markets."

German efforts to halt neo-Nazi violence fail

The Associated Press
BERLIN — A refugee center in western Germany was firebombed Sunday as violence against foreigners continued despite a police crackdown on neo-Nazis and Chancellor Helmut Kohl's call for tolerance.

In Turkey, German flags were burned amid cries of "Down with skinheads!" and "Death to murderers!" at the funeral Sunday for three Turkish victims of the right-wing extremist violence in Germany.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli Cabinet denounced German racist and anti-Semitic attacks and demanded German officials fight right-wing extremism with "the full force of the law."

At least 16 people have died this year in some 1,800 extreme rightist attacks throughout Germany against foreigners and Jews.

Neo-Nazis often have found support among those suffering economic hardship, particularly in former East Germany.

The government has taken measures to curb the violence, including banning a radical-right group but has been criticized for not doing enough.

In an attack early Sunday in Lingen, near the Dutch border, two firebombs were thrown at buildings housing 20 refugees, but no injuries were reported, and damage was minor. Officials offered a $3,100 reward for clues leading to the arrests of the attackers.

In Eberswalde, 25 miles northeast of Berlin, a fire at about midnight Saturday destroyed a barracks housing 60 refugees. A watchman suffered smoke inhalation. Police were investigating the cause of the fire.

In an interview broadcast Sunday on Deutschlandfunk radio, Kohl vowed Germany would use the full force of the law against "the radical right mob."

But he said proposed constitutional changes to limit the number of refugees and toughen Germany's asylum policy would not resolve the problems of racism and anti-foreigner violence.

He said Germany's prosperity would have been impossible without help from foreign workers such as the Turks, Germany's largest minority group, many of whom were recruited to work in labor-short Germany in the 1960s.

AIDS

the community.

"If our agency has done anything it is to bring attention to ourselves and then point to that great big hospital," Bolduc said.

Bolduc added that UNC Hospitals tracked more than 750 patients who were infected with the AIDS virus.

The AIDS Service Center of Orange County also is accepting applications for vacant positions on its board, which is elected every January.

"The first qualification is service and experience on community boards," Bolduc said.

"We're really kind of a fast-moving board. We depend on independent, self-directed people."

"We will give preference to any individual who is HIV-positive," Bolduc added.

Bolduc also added that the agency was looking to diversify by adding minorities to the board.

The agency provides community education, as well as a speakers' bureau to the community, Bolduc said.

Bolduc also said that the agency had put together a Chapel Hill-Orange County service directory that tells residents where testing, medical and legal services are available.

Bolduc said any other volunteers were welcome to help in other capacities such as fund-raising and operational activities.

The AIDS Service Agency of Orange County can be reached at 990-1101 or at P.O. Box 16574, Chapel Hill, N.C. 27516.

MARCEL MARCEAU

The Wordless Wonder

The Genius of Gesture

8 p.m.
December 9
Memorial Hall - UNC

Presented by
Carolina Union

Performing
Arts Series
1992-1993

Tickets:
$20 General Public
$18 Senior Citizens
$11 UNC Students
All Seats Reserved

Carolina Union
Box Office
962-1449
Visa & Mastercard
Accepted

MOTIVATED?

Consider Graduate Studies
in Signal Transduction
at Iowa State University

1-800-433-3449 for further information

Campus Calendar

MONDAY
10 a.m. Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity and Sonya H. Stone Black Cultural Center will sponsor a Black Film Series featuring "For Colored Girls Who Considered Suicide When The Rainbow Was Enuf" and "Boyz n' The Hood" in the BCC.
7 p.m. Tar Heel Recycling Program will meet in 517 Hamilton.

ITEMS OF INTEREST
Delta Sigma Theta Sorority invites all those interested in participating in the 2nd Annual Delta Star Search to call 914-7076 or 932-5147. Practices will be held from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday and Tuesday in the Union Auditorium and from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. Wednesday in 100 Hamilton.

UPCOMING
The Office of the Dean of the School of Public Health is presenting health education videos for World AIDS Day from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday in 331 Roseau.

The Umoja Dinner Series will present "Kwanzaa Karamu" at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Great Hall. Tickets are $4 and available from Delta Sigma Theta Sorority members.

Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller:
The Apple Computer Loan.

"Why should I wait in line at the computer lab when I can own a Macintosh for $15 a month?"

Kevin Campbell
Aerospace Engineering Major

What allowed Kevin to own an Apple® Macintosh® PowerBook™ 145 computer for such a low monthly payment? The Apple Computer Loan. Kevin knew that owning the power and portability of a Macintosh PowerBook for his full course load and his work in the Civil Air Patrol was a smart thing to do. And the Apple Computer Loan was the smart way to do it: easy application, fast turnaround and low, flexible payment terms. So Kevin went to the only place that offers the Apple Computer Loan, his Apple Campus Reseller.

Macintosh. It's more than a present, it's a future.

RAM Shop Computers
UNC Student Stores

Only currently enrolled students, faculty & staff may purchase from The RAM Shop of the Student Stores

© 1992 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo and Macintosh are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. PowerBook is a trademark of Apple Computer, Inc.
*Based on Kevin Campbell's Apple Computer Loan of $2,342.40, his monthly payment was $15 (interest only) as of 10/12/92. Principal payments may be deferred up to 4 years. The interest rate is variable, and is based on the average of the higher of the 30-day or 90-day commercial paper rates as reported in the Wall Street Journal, plus a spread of 5.5% (not to exceed 5.6%). The term of the loan is 8 years with no pre-payment penalty. The total finance charge on every $1,000 borrowed will be $543.38. Each applicant pays a $35.00 non-refundable application fee. Approved borrowers will be charged a 4% loan origination fee. The loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount and repaid over the life of the loan. For the month of October 1992, the interest rate was 7.6% with an APR of 8.6%.