POULTRY SHOW AT HILLSBORO

Will Take Place Probably About the Middle of February.
Webb Lands Building

MUCH INTEREST IN PLAN

Plans are being made to hold a poultry show in Hillsboro for the farmers of Orange county. Probably it will take place about the middle of February.

Cheshire Webb, the Hillsboro merchant, has offered to let part of one of his buildings on Hillsboro's main street be used for the show.

The plan is to have no more than one coop brought by each exhibitor. The State's greatest poultry experts will be on hand to act as judges.

R. P. Harris, the agriculture teacher in the Chapel Hill school, has been going about the county these last few days enlisting the help of the farmers to make the show a success. They have expressed enthusiasm about the idea, and are anxious to show specimens from their flocks.

There will be White Leghorns, Brown Leghorns, Buff Orpingtons, Wyandottes, Barred Rocks, Rhode Island Reds, Plymouth Rocks, Cornish Games, and perhaps other breeds on display.

New Cafeteria

Miss Johnston Takes Over Place
Near Post Office

Miss Frances Johnston, who has been running the Y. W. C. A. Cafeteria in Durham for three years and a half, has bought out Nick Moules's Carolina Cafeteria next to the Post Office, and it will open under her management within the next three or four days. Miss Johnston came from Tennessee. She received her training in colleges in that State and in New York City. She announces it as her ambition to make her new place the best cafeteria in the South. She is not a stranger to Chapel Hill since many people of the town have patronized her cafeteria in Durham.

Paul Green Jr., at Home

Paul Green, Jr., who was born in Watts Hospital about two weeks ago, came and took possession of his Chapel Hill home, the R. L. Strowd place, Sunday night.

Eyes Getting Better

Two citizens of Chapel Hill, Miss Laura Ward and Mrs. A. A. Klutz, have been suffering considerably with their eyes, and both have been under treatment by Dr. McPherson in Durham. They are getting better. Mrs. Klutz' trouble started with a cold, Miss Ward's with some foreign substance that became lodged in the left eye.

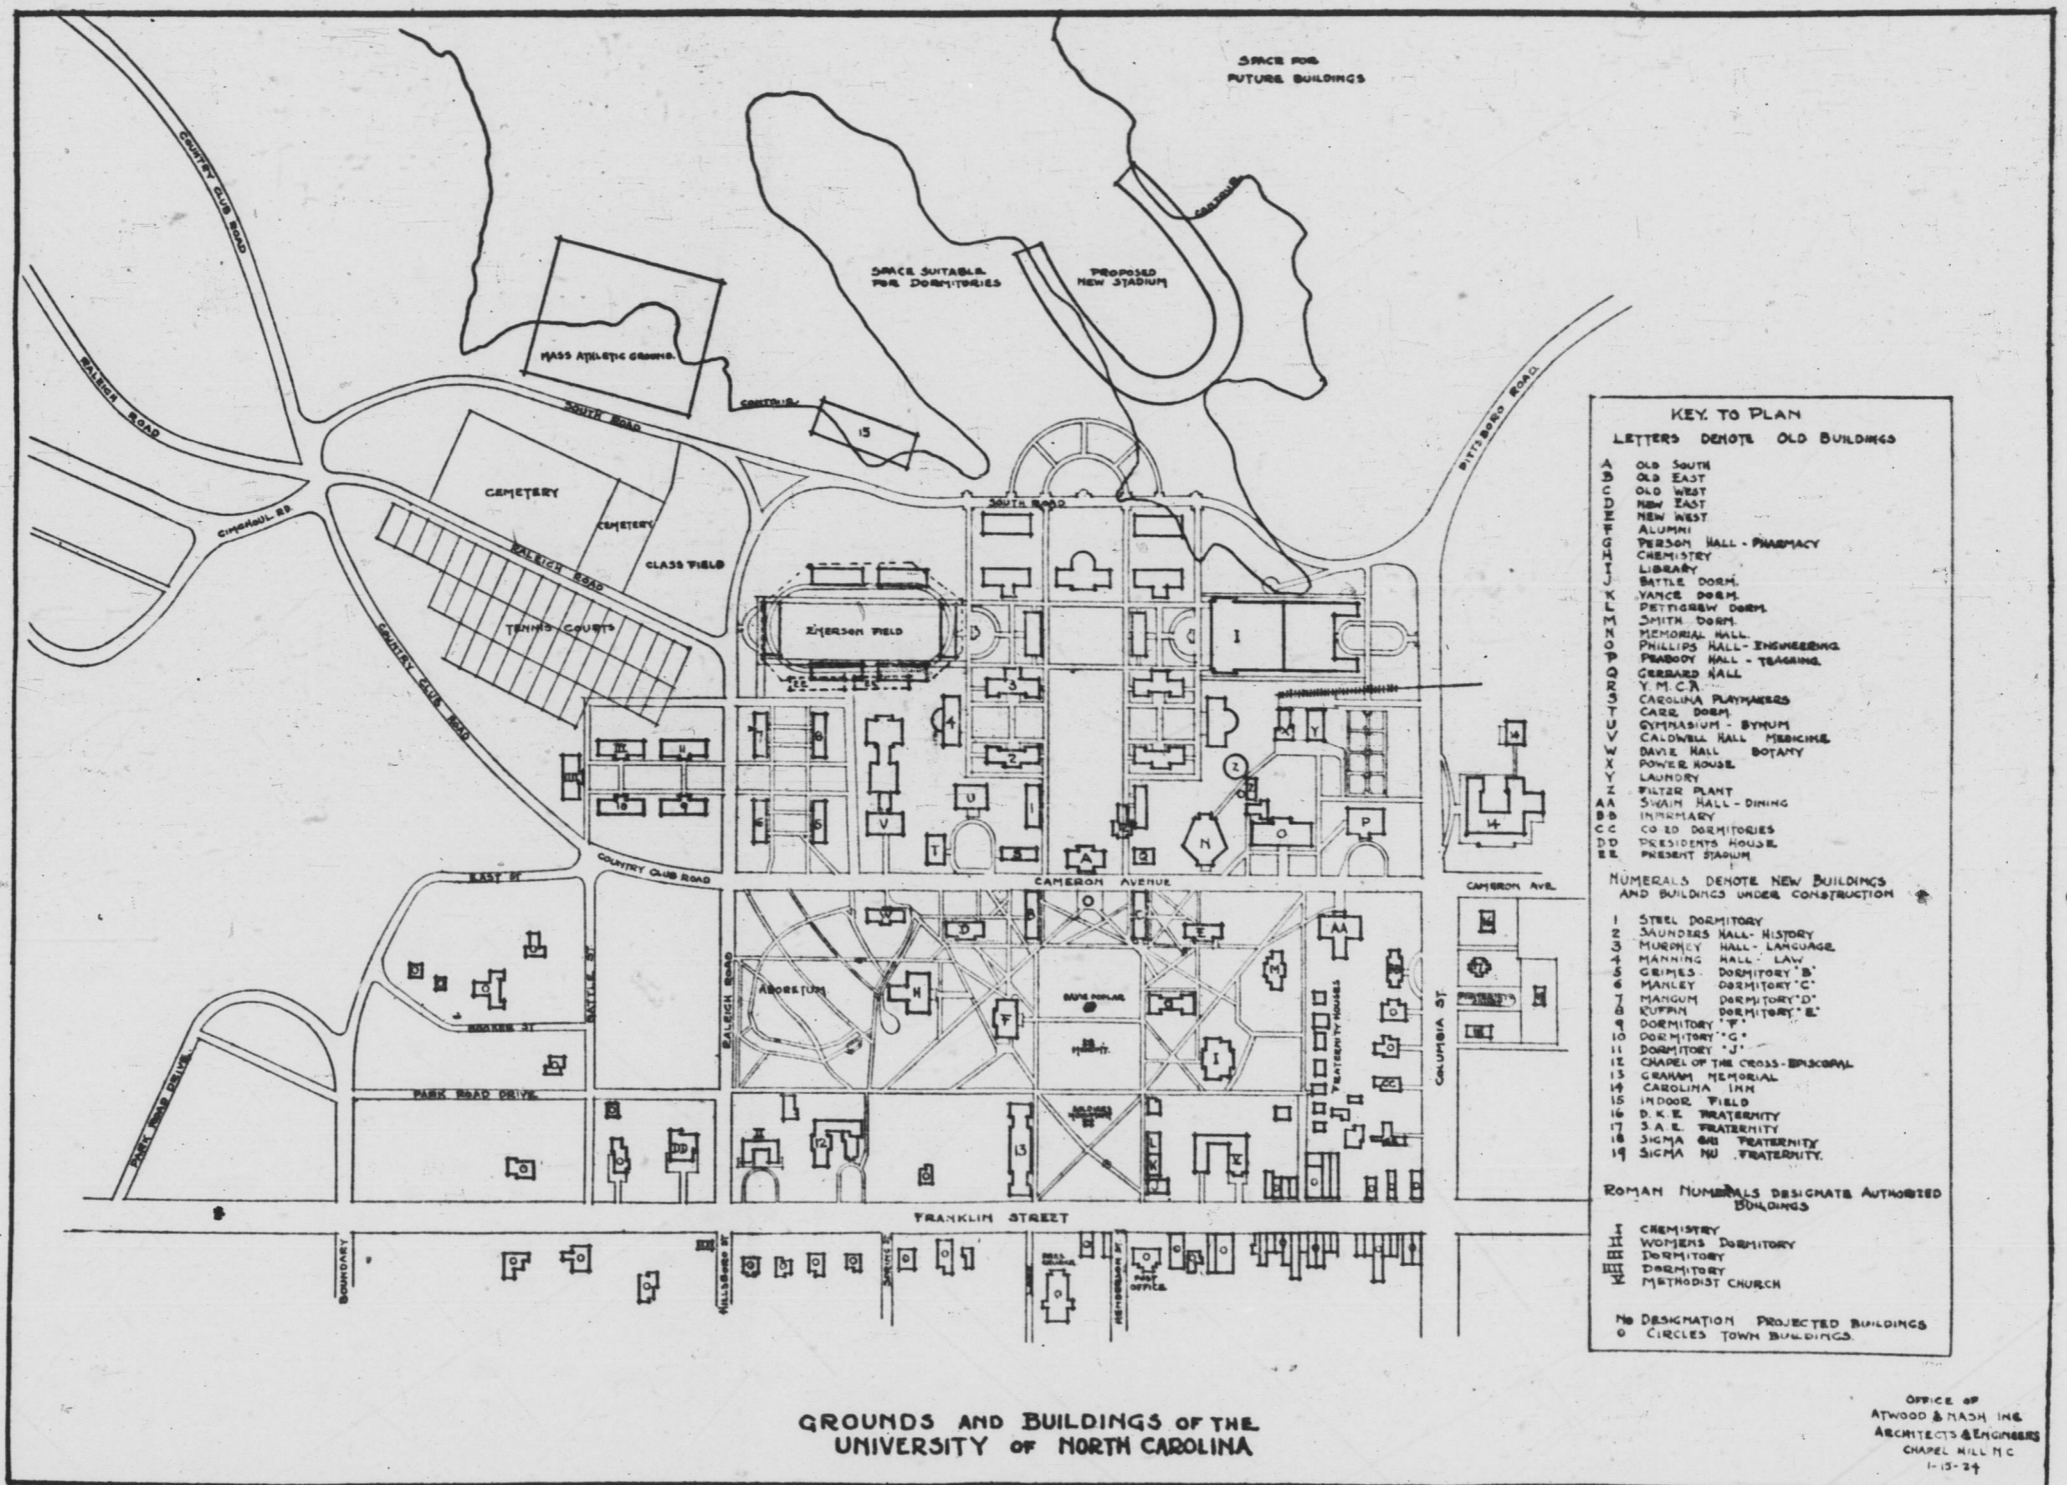

Carolina-Trinity Tonight

The University and the Trinity basketball teams will meet tonight (Thursday) in the new athletic building south of the campus.

New Map of the University Grounds and Buildings

Even people who live in Chapel Hill find it hard to keep up with the changes in the layout of the University, and those who have been away a long time become hopelessly confused when they attempt to form a mental picture of the campus from the descriptions they see from time to time. Here is a map prepared by Business Manager Charles T. Woollen, showing old and new buildings, those authorized but not begun, and those not yet authorized but included in the program of future construction. The map also shows roads and streets recently built or soon to be built.

"In writing my annual report," says Mr. Woollen, "I found it well nigh impossible to make it clear what I was talking about, not only because of the many changes but also because of the new and unfamiliar names for both buildings and roads. Therefore I decided to have this map made to go along with the report."

As you read the map, you are looking south from the main street of the village. Most of the recent construction has been beyond Cameron avenue and to the left—that is, to the south and east.

The furthest building to the south, indicated by the rectangle numbered 15, is the new athletic building built of metal plates and enclosing a space 310 by 110 feet. The students have nicknamed it the "Tin Can." This structure is not primarily for spectacles but for what is known as "mass athletics." Here hundreds of students take physical exercise every day. Five basketball courts are laid out in the middle of the floor and there is a running track all around.

The South road, back of the campus, connecting the Pittsboro-Pinehurst and the Raleigh roads, is completed and in use. The stretch back of the Cemetery, from the new athletic building to the junction of the new Country Club road and the Raleigh road, is not yet built but probably soon will be. Under way, and well on toward completion, is the road winding around the old Battle place. This connects with the Country Club road east of the campus, passes along the edge of the Park Place settlement (at the left side of the map), and is to be continued on to the main street between the Lawson and the Kennett homes.

On the accompanying map, the old buildings—and by "old" are meant those that were standing before the present construction program was launched three years ago—are indicated by letters of the alphabet. For example, the South is marked A, Memorial Hall N, and so on. The newer buildings bear Arabic numerals—1, 2, 3, 4, etc. Buildings that have been authorized but not begun are indicated by Roman numerals. The chemistry building is I; the women's dormitory (on the lot next to the Episcopal church is II, the Methodist church is V. The buildings with no labels are not yet authorized, but are expected to come along in due time.

This map shows the symmetrical arrangements of buildings to the rear of the South. Four structures in this group—Steele dormitory, the Saunders and Murphey classroom buildings, and Manning Hall (the law building)—are completed and in use. The others are among the not-yet-authorized.

The horseshoe at the top of the picture is the "proposed new stadium." At present this is only an aspiration, but as an aspiration it is definite enough. The University's engineers have been scouting about for some time in search of a suitable site for the stadium that is bound to come, and they think this site a good one.

Claussen Coming

Great Mezzo Soprano Sings Here
Wednesday Night

Julia Claussen, Metropolitan Opera star and one of the world's greatest mezzo sopranos, will sing in Memorial Hall next Wednesday night at 8:15. She will be accompanied on the piano by Paul John Weaver. Mr. Weaver was asked to be her accompanist for her entire Southern tour but could not get away for that long a time.

Madame Claussen is a ward of the King of Sweden. He provided her musical education and set her on the road to fame. Within the last year her singing has won her decorations from two European nations.

Reserved seats for Wednesday's performance are priced at $1.50 and admission tickets at $1. Tickets can be obtained at once from Mr. Weaver and will be exchanged at Patterson's drugstore for reserved seats on Monday. The general sale of reserved seats will begin Tuesday at Patterson's.

Judge Clark's Address

Chief Justice Walter Clark of the North Carolina Supreme Court made an address to the Law School of the University Friday night. While in Chapel Hill he was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh.

Mr. Saville in Washington

Thorndike Saville appeared in Washington a few days ago before the Congressional Committee that is considering the proposed lease of Mussel Shoals in Alabama. The Greensboro News carried a front-page despatch telling of Mr. Saville's declaration that the Shoals should be developed not only for the making of fertilizers but also, and primarily, for the generation of power for manufacturing. He said that the water powers of North Carolina would be fully developed in a few years and that North Carolina, as the foremost manufacturing State in the South, would be in urgent needs of power transmitted from outside.

Chapel Hill Chaff

Freddie Patterson, aged eleven or thereabouts, handed Jimmie Ragsdale of South Carolina a hot one the other day. Jimmie, a student in the University, came along where Freddie was playing in the yard and began to tell of an acquaintance of his who had been on a bear hunt. Borrowing freely from Baron Munchausen, the narrator said that the hunter had been chased up a tree by a ferocious animal. "And just as the bear was about to get him," he concluded, "he stuck his arm down the bear's throat and turned the bear inside out." "Who told you that yarn?" asked Freddie. "Oh," said Jimmie, "a tramp from South Carolina." Whereat Freddie looked at him scornfully and remarked: "I asked you told you, not who told me."

Miss Booker Flattens Mouse

Julia Thruston Booker, 13 months old, is plump. To be exact, she weighs 24 pounds. The other day, when her mother lifted her out of the baby carriage and took up the pillow upon which she had been lying, a lifeless mouse was found underneath. It was mashed out flat, in the manner of animals that are used for floor-rugs.

Club's Big Party Tonight

Tonight, Thursday the 31st, is the night of the Country Club's big party, the Chinese Cabaret and Supper. The women of the club have got the house all decked out in gay colors, and the costumes are going to be a burst of splendor. Seven o'clock is the hour set, and a warning has been sent out that people had better be on-time if they want to see one of the best numbers on the program. Nearly two hundred tickets had been applied for last night. Two or three tables have been taken by Durham folks.

Carrboro's New Lights

Town Is Figuring on System of Illumination

It is likely that the town of Carrboro will have new street lights installed soon.

The board of aldermen have been consulting with Messrs Bennett and Graham of the University Power Plant and have been getting estimates of cost. No definite decision has been reached yet, one of the aldermen said yesterday.

The cost of the materials and the installation will no doubt be evenly divided between the town and the power plant, if the scheme goes through, and then the current will be charged for at the rate of $1 a month for each light, the same rate paid by the town of Chapel Hill. The idea is to have about a dozen lights, distributed about Carrboro where most needed.

Miss Emeth Tuttle spoke on "Mother's Aid" before the health section of the Community Club Friday afternoon.
