Wake Forest Is Carolina's Foe In First Match

Season's Opening Game Will Be Played Tomorrow Afternoon in Kenan Stadium

INJURIES CREATE GLOOM

The annual football game between the University of North Carolina and Wake Forest College will begin at 2:30 tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon in the Kenan stadium. It is the opening match of the season for the University and the second on the schedule for Wake Forest.

There is much gloomy talk about the contest among the fans here, the sources of pessimism being (1) the strength displayed by the Deacons against Duke a week ago in Greensboro and (2) the injuries to Carolina players.

Coach Carl Snavely, after seeing the Duke-Wake Forest contest, came back to Chapel Hill deeply impressed by the speed and resourcefulness of the Deacons. They made a better showing than the score of 26 to 7 indicates. At the end of the first half neither team had scored, and Duke's touchdowns were the result of sensational spurts rather than a sustained superiority. For all but about two or three minutes of play, when the Duke backs got away for long runs, the teams were playing on about even terms.

"Wake Forest is going to make it tough for the Carolinians," is the forecast of E. V. Mitchell of the Greensboro News, and the other sports editors of the state express the same opinion.

"Injuries have slowed up the Carolina practices," says a bulletin from the University news bureau, "and seem likely to hamper the play in the Wake Forest game. Herman Snyder (Continued on last page)"

Tar Babies' Schedule

Freshmen's First Game to Be Against Wake Forest October 12th

The opening game of the University's freshman football team, known as the Tar Babies, will be against the Wake Forest freshmen on University Day, October 12, in the Kenan stadium.

Other games on the schedule are: N. C. State, October 25, Greensboro; Clemson, November 2, Asheville; University of Virginia, November 15, Charlottesville; Duke, November 22, Chapel Hill.

One hundred candidates for the team have reported to Coach Lefty James.

County Borrows at 1½%

A 60-day Orange county tax anticipation note for $20,000 was awarded this week by the North Carolina Local Government Commission to the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company at an interest rate of 1½ per cent. The proceeds from the note will be used for paying school capital outlay expenses and county debt service obligations maturing October 1.

Jewish Holiday Tomorrow

Rosh Hashana, the Jewish New Year, begins at sunset today (Friday) and continues through Sunday afternoon. Many of the stores owned by Jews will be closed tomorrow in celebration of the event.

Chapel Hill Chaff

Friends of mine tell me that, at my age of 52, I ought to quit playing tennis. It is too violent, they say, and I had better switch to golf. Dr. Bullitt, when we were talking about it a few months ago, spoke of the severe strain imposed by such lively exercise as tennis upon the heart of an aging man. The Director, also, counsels me to be cautious. Her control over me is far stronger than that of even the most respected physician, and in obedience to her I do not ever indulge in the singles game. . . . Well, hardly ever.

What brings me and my tennis to mind at the moment is something I heard about an incident of the recent visit of Dr. Charles S. Mangum to Wrightsville. Clad in his bathing suit, he was standing near the water's edge when he saw two young men, University students of his acquaintance, sprinting across the sand. Now, back in the 1890's, Dr. Mangum was one of the University's champion sprinters. On this day last week he was feeling tip-top, and he was seized by the impulse to recapture his youth. He joined the young men, and together the three sped along the beach, the white-haired dean of the medical school keeping well up with his companions. But, alas! there was a hole in the sand—maybe where some child had been digging with a toy shovel—and Dr. Mangum's foot went into it. A ligament in his leg was torn loose, and Dr. Mangum sprinted no more.

When he came home and Mrs. Mangum saw him walking with a limp, and was told the cause of (Continued on last page)

Murchison's Prediction

He Expects 1929 Economic Level to Be Reached within 12 Months

In an interview with an Associated Press correspondent in Charleston, S. C., last week, Claudius T. Murchison, former member of the faculty here, predicted a return to the economic level of 1929 within the next twelve months. Mr. Murchison is director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce in the United States department of commerce.

"I can see no reason why we should not get back to the 1929 level in another 12 months," he said. "Eventually we will surpass that level."

"There is nothing fundamental in the way of full recovery. It takes time for everything in a tremendous economic system to function; but now conditions are rapidly and definitely swinging up. We hope they will not stop."

"At present the construction industry is better than at any time since 1931. The past automobile season was the best since 1929. Iron and steel trade is the best in five years."

The Old Rock Walls Will Be Saved

The old rock walls along the edges of the University campus and around the yard of the President's House will be saved. W. C. Coker, chairman of the faculty committee on grounds, is on the watch, and he is not going to let these century-old walls be reconstructed and slicked up with cement.

The publication in this paper last week of an item in the list of proposed W.P.A. projects—"removing 1,700 feet of old rock wall on campus of University and building 3,400 feet of new rock walls, and rebuilding 375 feet of rock wall in front of President's House"—aroused keen interest among people who do not want to see the campus and village defaced by so-called "improvements" of the sort preferred by the modern town-booster.

Of course the W.P.A. item did not say that the proposed reconstruction involved the substitution of slick cement walls for the old walls, but the editor of this newspaper, from what his observations of wall-building here in recent years, knew well enough what a ghastly deed was in prospect unless somebody in authority interfered with the improvers.

The revelation of the menace inspired this comment in the Raleigh Times:

"The point made by the editor of the Weekly is well taken. Every one who knows a Chapel Hill rock wall will agree that it is no proper subject for a Brain Trust to be trusted with. The old walls have been in the village for more than a century. They were built by slave labor that knew its business and practiced an art that is gone. In (Continued on last page)"

New Music Professors

Swalin, Schinhan, and Hansen Are Newcomers in the Faculty

New members of the University faculty in the music department are Benjamin F. Swalin, Jan Philip Schinhan, and Peter Hansen.

Mr. Swalin is a violinist and orchestra conductor. He received his early training in Minneapolis, where he was a member of the symphony orchestra conducted by the late Emil Oberhoffer. After graduating from the Institute of Musical Art, where he studied under Franz Kneisel and Leopold Auer, and taking his master's degree at Columbia University, he went to the University of Vienna. There he received his doctor's degree. He comes here from DePauw University.

Mr. Schinhan studied harmony, counterpoint, and organ with the late Joseph Renner and Hermann Beuerle in Vienna; was graduated from the church music school in Regensburg; attended the Academy of Music in Munich; and became assistant conductor of the Ducal Opera in Saxony. Coming to America in 1913, he served as conductor for a Cincinnati opera company and later was connected with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. He became dean of the organ department of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music in 1916 and played with the San Francisco Symphony. He comes here from the University of California.

Mr. Hansen, who will teach piano and piano ensemble, was graduated from the University of California in 1931 and received his graduate degree at Eastman in Rochester, N. Y. He has appeared as soloist with the University of California Symphony Orchestra and the Rochester Civic Symphony Orchestra.

Plans of the Chorus

Rehearsals of Bach's Christmas Oratorio to Begin Monday

At the first meeting of the Community Chorus plans were made for the coming year.

Others on the executive committee are Mrs. George Lawrence, Jesse Parker, C. E. Preston (librarian and treasurer), Mrs. G. A. Harter (secretary), and A. M. White (chairman). H. People Wonder What Is to Be Done about Inn

Officials Study Problem, and Plan of Management Will Be Announced Soon

STEADY RENTALS NEEDED

What the University is going to do about the Carolina Inn is the subject of much speculation on the campus and in the village.

The reason all the talk is in the nature of questioning and guessing is that the University itself doesn't yet know the answer. President Graham, Business Manager Charles T. Woolen, and other officials have been studying the problem, and it is expected that within the next two or three weeks they will have something definite to announce.

John Sprunt Hill presented the Inn to the University at a trustees' meeting a few months ago.

It has been of general knowledge that the Inn has never been a profitable investment. Indeed, Mr. Hill built it not for the purpose of making money out of it but because of his interest in the University and his realization that one of the greatest needs of the Chapel Hill community was hotel accommodations for visitors. Though the venture was not profitable for him, it is thought that the University should be able to "come out on it" since there is no capital outlay to pay interest on and since, the ownership being in a state institution, there are no taxes.

There are rumors that the Inn may be conducted as a sort of combined hotel and alumni club, with a certain number of the rooms segregated as quarters for permanent residents. If that plan should be adopted, naturally those rooms would have to be let at rates below the level customary for transients. Since it was built about 10 years ago, many of the rooms in (Continued on last page)

Party for R. B. House

He Is Honor Guest at Madrys' Home in Halifax County

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Madry, parents of Robert W. Madry of the University news bureau, gave a party for Robert B. House last evening at their home at Scotland Neck. Mr. House is a native son of Halifax county, and the gathering was in the nature of a homecoming celebration.

As first planned it was to be a meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Scotland Neck with Mr. House as a speaker, but it was expanded to a joint assemblage of Kiwanians and University of North Carolina alumni, with other specially invited guests.

President Graham, J. Maryon Saunders, Robert W. Madry, and O. J. Coffin were among those who went from Chapel Hill.

Reception October 11

Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Graham and Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. House will give a reception from 4 to 6 o'clock Friday afternoon, October 11, in the Graham Memorial in the village. Members of the faculty and their wives, and all other citizens of the village, are cordially invited.
