Annual Camp For Girls Will Open June 30

The 2nd annual day camp for Chapel Hill and Carrboro girls between 8 and 12 years old will be held from June 30 to July 11 by the Junior Service League and the Girl Scout Council. With headquarters at the Recreation Center, it will be open from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. from Monday through Friday under the supervision of Mrs. Katherine D. Adams, director, and Mrs. Diane Joyner, assistant director. Senior and junior councilors will also be present.

The camp, named Camp Tiny Tar Heel, will offer arts and crafts, music, folk dancing, games and sports, hikes, nature study, dramatics, and training in citizenship. Credit will be given toward Girl Scout badges. The schedule will be arranged so that the girls enrolled in the University-sponsored swimming classes may continue during the camp period, with councilors to accompany them to and from the swimming pool.

The only cost is a $10 fee for the two-weeks camp period. Registration forms, available from Mrs. A. J. Altmueller, should be mailed with the fee to Camp Tiny Tar Heel, Box 374, Chapel Hill. Applications will be accepted in the order in which they are post-marked, and those in excess of the camp's quota will be returned and the fee refunded.

Each camper is to bring her own lunch daily. Milk or fruit juice will be provided. The camp is a non-profit venture, with expenses underwritten by the two sponsoring organizations. The Recreation Commission is donating the use of the center, and Mrs. Robert Wetach is donating the use of her nearby school as an arts and crafts workshop. For further information, call Mrs. Miles Fitch at 2-7391 or Mrs. N. J. Demerath at 5106.

Univ. Woman's Club Holds Spring Party

The annual spring party of the University Woman's Club was held Tuesday afternoon of last week on the lawn and terrace of Person hall, with wives of faculty members of the art department and music department as co-hostesses. About 150 attended. Perfect lawn-party weather contributed a lovely setting of sunshine and shadows.

Chairs and benches placed on the lawn were occupied by many who stayed on to chat with friends old and new. The refreshment table, decorated with greenery and sweet williams, and laden with punch, cake, and candy, was a topic of conversation and a center of gustatory pleasure. The occasion was made even more delightful by soft music from a mysterious source so well concealed that many guests still wondered where it was.

The guests were given a preview of the exhibit of student art work arranged in the Person hall gallery for Commencement. The pictures, many definitely in the modern mood, were explained to them by John Allcott, head of the art department.

The University's 158th Commencement

The celebration of the University's 158th Commencement will begin tomorrow (Saturday) with a luncheon for the members of the senior class and their parents. It will end Monday evening with the graduation exercises in the Kenan stadium. Sunday will be the day for the class reunions. All gatherings will be for both men and women.

J. Maryon Saunders, the alumni secretary, says that the letters he has received, asking for reservations for rooms and reunion dinner tickets, give promise of an unusually large attendance.

Alumni, their wives, and anybody else they want to bring along will be quartered in dormitory rooms. Most of them will be in the new Collier Cobb building. Some, heavily charged with sentiment for the scenes of their youth, have requested that they be allowed to occupy their old-time rooms, and that has been arranged. There will be a desk in the alumni office at which rooms will be assigned to all comers. More than 600 beds are being made ready.

The classes of 1940, 1941, 1942, and 1943 will have their joint dinner tomorrow (Saturday) evening. The old Students Club, composed of alumni whose classes left the University 50 years ago or earlier, will have a luncheon at 1 p. m. Sunday. Gatherings that night will be the dinner of the classes of 1902, 1903, 1904, and 1905, the dinner of the classes of 1921, 1922, 1923, and 1924, and the 1927 Silver Anniversary banquet.

The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered at 11 o'clock Sunday morning in Memorial hall by the Rev. Reginald Mallett of South Bend, Indiana, University graduate of 1915.

The Horace Williams Philanthropic Society will have a luncheon at twelve-thirty o'clock Sunday.

On Sunday afternoon there will be a band concert on the campus near the Davie Poplar, an art exhibit with a gallery talk, and shows at the Planetarium, and on Sunday evening the Chapel Hill Choral Club will sing the Brahms oratorio, "The German Requiem."

Monday, June 2, will be Commencement Day. A faculty reception at the Davie Poplar in the morning will be followed by the alumni luncheon. The Carolina Playmakers will present two bills of original plays in the afternoon. The final event on the three-day program will be the graduation exercises at 6:30 p. m. in Kenan stadium. The speakers will be Governor Scott and President Gray. Major General Edwin A. Pollock, USMC, will speak at the commissioning exercises of the NROTC and the Air Force ROTC at 3 p. m. Monday in Hill hall.

I have waited till the end of this article to speak of what is really the most important part of Commencement. I mean the most important part as far as the returning alumni are concerned. That is, the aimless loafing and chatting, the chance meetings with old friends, on the campus, on the village streets, and in the Carolina Inn lobby and on the porch and out on the lawn. The scheduled gatherings are enjoyable—they have an appeal all their own—but at a college commencement, as on any other such occasion, the most fun comes from the casual free-and-easy personal contacts.

University Plans Children's Speech Clinic

The services of a laboratory speech clinic on the University campus will be available this summer to a limited number of children in the Chapel Hill area, without cost. The clinic will be a part of the school of education's program of special education.

After being diagnosed, each child will be given individual therapy, group therapy, and play activity about two and a half hours a day. Teachers who are taking the course in speech correction will help with this work. Conferences and group meetings with the parents will be held to enable the parents to understand the activities of the clinic and to enable the director to understand each child. Parents will be instructed on how to carry on speech correction in the home.

The clinic, to last from June 10 to July 15, will accept only children whose parents will assure regular attendance. Mrs. Charlotte White will interview prospective children and their parents from 9:30 a. m. till noon Monday, June 2, at the Chapel Hill elementary school. She will also answer parents' questions at that time.

The North Carolina Society for Crippled Children, with headquarters here, is cooperating in the organization of similar clinics at East Carolina College and at Western Carolina Teachers College.

Roes Entertain Chemistry Faculty

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Roe entertained at dinner for the members of the University's chemistry department last Friday evening at their home on Old Hillsboro road. On this occasion the colleagues of F. H. Edmister, who will retire in June, presented him with a gift in recognition of his long service in the department. F. K. Cameron, who retired from the department six years ago, and Mrs. Cameron, and Mrs. Sally Cleveland, Mrs. Edmister's mother, were among those present.

Dinner in Honor of Fussler

The members of the faculty of the University physics department gave a dinner at the Carolina Inn last Saturday evening in honor of Karl Fussler, who is retiring from active duty. Paul Shearin, head of the department, was toastmaster. He reviewed Mr. Fussler's career and paid a tribute to the high quality of his services to the University. Mr. Fussler, holder of the A.B. degree from Indiana and the Ph.D. degree from Pennsylvania, came here in 1929. One of his notable achievements has been the strengthening of undergraduate teaching in physics.

Award for Archibald Henderson

Archibald Henderson is this year's recipient of the Di-Phi Award from the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Assembly for distinguished service to the University, the State, and the Nation. The award was presented at a joint meeting of the two societies at a dinner in Lenoir hall. In his acceptance talk Mr. Henderson delighted the company with reminiscences that began with his coming here as a freshman 58 years ago. In the course of his talk he told of his associations with George Bernard Shaw and Albert Einstein.

Gordon LeGrand Elected

Gordon LeGrand was elected president of the elementary school's student council for 1952-53 at an election held day before yesterday at the school. He succeeds Sophie Martin. Other new officers of the council are Leigh Skinner, jr., vice-president; Patricia Hunter, secretary, and Gerry Ham, treasurer.

Chapel Hill Chaff

"Consider a few of your acquaintances who drink, a few who do not, then make your choice," says a person named Eva Carol Wheelers in a letter-to-the-editor in the Charlotte News. The lady's remarks preceding this invitation betray a decided partiality for the non-drinkers. Well, I've accepted the first part of her invitation; that is, I've considered the two categories. I haven't accepted the second part, about making a choice, and don't intend to. I have good friends among the non-drinkers, God bless 'em, and good friends among the drinkers, God forgive 'em. To all of both these companies I say, in the words of Rip Van Winkle's toast, May you live long and prosper.

There are times when I feel more disposed to fraternize with the drinkers, but there are other times when I like the non-drinkers just as well; for example, when in passing through the Eubanks drugstore I stop for a chat with Clyde Eubanks. I don't know whether or not he has always been a non-drinker but he certainly is one now. I first knew him when he was a newcomer from Chatham county about the year 1890 and in all those 62 years I've never seen him when he wasn't a model of sobriety. My conversations with him in the prescription sanctum are just as enjoyable to me as if we were talking across the table to the music of ice cubes tinkling against glass.

The last time I saw him, two or three days ago, he told me about having attended the druggists' convention at Pinehurst. When I asked him if the brethren at this gathering had done much drinking he said they had done a plenty. Or maybe what he said was more than a plenty. That was (Continued on page 2)

Contest for the Governorship Holds Spotlight in the State; Chapel Hill Candidates Are Durham, Hobbs, McClamroch

Join the 6 O'Clock Club

"Join the 6 O'Clock Club" is the plea to voters by organizations and individuals interested in relieving congestion at the polls and getting out a big vote in tomorrow's primary.

Voting begins at 6:30 a. m. and goes on 12 hours.

The plea is: Set your alarm at 6 o'clock and go to the polls right away. Voting places: north precinct, Town Hall; south precinct, high school annex.

If the combined vote in the two precincts is as large as expected, voters will have to pass through the polling place at the rate of from 2 to 3 a minute. This shows the need of a steady flow of voters all through the day.

(Information for voters who need transportation to the polls is given elsewhere on this page.)

Handbook Describes Local Government

A 26-page handbook on the local governments of Orange county has been issued by the Chapel Hill League of Women Voters and is available at Eubanks' drugstore. Designed to acquaint all citizens with the county's governing and political organizations and to "promote informed and active participation in government," it tells how to register and vote and how to join a political party. It describes town elections, the precinct, the county executive committee, the board of elections, and other boards and commissions.

One section of the booklet describes the duties of the county officials and of the Chapel Hill officials, policemen, and firemen and tells what their salaries are. There is a section on the public schools, and another section tells how the entire town and county tax dollar is spent. The book also includes an itemized 1951-52 Chapel Hill town budget, charts of the Chapel Hill and Orange county government set-ups, and a precinct map of the county.

Transportation for Voters

Arrangements have been made for transportation for voters who need it to get to the polls tomorrow, and these arrangements have nothing to do with candidates you are going to vote for. Transportation is provided and no questions asked. It's an all-day-Saturday service. The League of Women Voters says: Telephone either 5106 or 5706 and a car will call for you. Other numbers that can be called for the same service, are 4681 and 2-1531.

Joseph Fields Heads Band

Joseph B. Fields, director of the Chapel Hill high school band and a student in the University, was recently elected President of the University band for the coming year.

High School Photographs

Photographs of club and class groups as well as year-end activities at the Chapel Hill high school, taken during the past school year by Roland Giduz, are on display now in the show window of Sloan's Drug Store. Copies of these photos may be ordered at the drug store.

The Democrats of North Carolina will go to the polls tomorrow to choose their nominees for the election in November. For many years they have outnumbered the Republicans by such a wide margin that victory in the Democratic primary is generally assumed to mean victory in the election.

There are several contests in tomorrow's primary, but as far as public interest throughout the State is concerned the contest between William B. Umstead and Hubert E. Olive for the Governorship dwarfs all the others.

Most of the political observers who are impartial—that is, who are more interested in making a correct forecast than they are in the fortunes of either candidate—think that Umstead will win. They are cagey about estimating his majority. Some seem not to expect him to win overwhelmingly. You hear it predicted in some quarters, in a vague sort of way, that "Olive will get a good vote." But what is a "good vote"? Name your own figure.

Chapel Hillians are of course interested in the candidacies of their fellow townsmen: Carl Durham for Congressman and R. J. M. Hobbs and Roland McClamroch for the board of county commissioners.

John W. Umstead is unopposed for the county's representative in the legislature and therefore his name does not appear on the ballot.

There is only one Republican primary contest—William C. Lehw against Warren H. Pritchard for Lieutenant Governor.

The polls will be open from 6:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m. Polling places in Chapel Hill: north precinct, Town Hall; south precinct, high school annex.

There are so many persons qualified to vote in each precinct that there must be a steady flow of voters through the polling place in order for the whole number to cast their ballots. Therefore everybody should try to vote early.

Ruth Hay Is Named Altrusa President

Miss Ruth Hay was elected president of the Altrusa Club at a recent meeting at the home of Miss Elizabeth Branson. She succeeds Mrs. Lucy Sutton.

Other new officers are Dr. Mabel Gouge, vice-president; Mrs. Edith Brocker, recording secretary; Mrs. Eula Pugh, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Frances Davis, treasurer, and Mrs. Eleanor Mosher, board member.

The new officers, to be installed June 12, were unanimously elected after having been nominated by the following nominating committee: Mrs. Jean Heer, Mrs. Evelyn Smith, and Miss Mildred Mooneyhan.

Baseball Team Loses to Sanford

The Chapel Hill high school baseball team lost to Sanford in the Eastern Class AA championship series this week. In the two-of-three series, Sanford won the first game, 4-3, and the second game, 10-1. The Chapel Hill team, coached by Bill Grice, had won the regional title by beating Kinston twice. It won its last ten regular-season games.
