Chapel Hill Chaff

L. G.

If I had not recently been informed to the contrary, I would have thought the city of Baden-Baden, Germany, would show some dignity and restraint in setting forth the merits of its famous baths and mineral waters. Now I have an official statement, on a card issued by the city, which reminds me of the extravagant claims proclaimed by the traditional patent medicine vendor at an old-time county fair.

The official card which Mrs. Irl Summerlin sends me from Baden-Baden is printed in three languages, German, French, and English.

The English section reads as follows: "Cures are effective against all rheumatism ailments (arthritis and similar ills included) neuritis, neuralgia, all illnesses of the motional apparatus, for example, those resulting from infectious diseases, such as poliomyelitis and diphtheria, accidents, sport injuries, ailments caused by old age, physical wear, modern civilization, some professions and war, as well as against catarrhs of the higher and lower respiratory tracts."

A decision by the University faculty in the fall of 1898 was a big help to Charles E. Maddy in his struggle to meet the cost of his education. A passage in his autobiography relates that, since he walked six miles a day between home and campus, the faculty decided to exempt him from the gymnasium fee.

Frank Winslow of Rocky Mount sends me a copy of the following letter he wrote to Roulhac Hamilton after reading a recent issue of the Weekly:

"I notice in Chapel Hill Chaff that you are bothered with poor circulation in your legs. The item reminds me

By Chuck Hesser
The possibility of a detailed Supreme Court decree outlawing segregation in the public schools prior to the convening of the 1957 General Assembly inspired a piece of 11th-hour legislation rushed to passage by Rep. J. W. Umstead, jr.

The new law requires the county commissioners, upon petition of 15 per cent of the qualified voters of the Chapel Hill school district, to call a special election on the issuance of school building bonds and on an additional ad valorem tax to bear the cost. The funds would be used entirely within the Chapel Hill district.

The bill was introduced in the House of Representatives on May 9 and enacted into law by the Senate last week.

Carl Smith, chairman of the Chapel Hill school board, said yesterday the board did not request the special legislation, but that it certainly had no objection to it. Mr. Smith said Mr. Umstead sponsored the measure as a "preparatory" step to meet any needs arising from a possible Supreme Court decree concerning segregation.

Mr. Umstead, in Roaring Gap on a business trip, was not available for comment. Mr. Smith said no plans existed at present to call such an election through petition. He said the question of whether county-wide consideration already, and he felt that would be "preferable" to issuance of local school district bonds. He said no decision is likely to be announced until July.

The bill does not specify the total amount of bonds which may be issued. However, it limits interest on them to 6 per cent, and specifies that their maturity date not exceed 30 years.

Provision is also made in the law for a new registration of voters prior to any special election called by a 15 per cent petition.
