The Chapel Hill high school's commencement exercises will be held in Hill hall, on the University campus, at eight o'clock this (Friday) evening. Diplomas will be presented to 77 seniors by Carl M. Smith, chairman of the Board of School Trustees.

Alma Dykstra and Dan Carroll, members of the graduating class, will deliver the commencement addresses. These students were selected for this honor, after the members of the class voted to choose the speakers from their own ranks. Miss Dykstra is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Dykstra, and Mr. Carroll is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde H. Carroll.

Following the procession, the Rev. S. T. Habel will give the invocation. The Glee Club, under the direction of Milton Bias, will sing "Glorious Everlasting," and "You'll Never Walk Alone." Pianists will be Miss Kay Nell Maddry and Miss Beth Harris.

Dan Fowler, president of the class, will introduce Miss Dykstra and Mr. Carroll. Following the addresses, Mr. Smith will present the diplomas. The awards to leading seniors will be presented, and Mr. Habel will deliver the benediction.

Junior marshals at the exercises will be Teddy Moore, chief; Michael Alexander, Sarah Cole, Foye Andrews, Faye Andrews, Bonnie Lackey, and Joyce Ray.

Tomorrow the seniors will return to school and pick up their report cards. The baccalaureate service was given last Sunday night in the Baptist Church. Final examinations began Tuesday and ended Thursday afternoon.

Ruling by Supreme Court on Tuesday Brings Comment from School Officials

Two Chapel Hill school officials agreed yesterday they must look to the state Board of Education in Raleigh for initial reaction to the U.S. Supreme Court's Tuesday ruling on segregation in the schools.

The Supreme Court handed down a decision on Tuesday which placed first responsibility on state and local officials for finding ways to end racial segregation in the public schools "as soon as practicable." The decision ordered federal district courts to see that the integration process starts promptly and continues "with reasonable speed," giving full weight to varying local conditions and obstacles.

Lois Stooksbury Says One of Her Best Decisions Was to Settle in Chapel Hill

Mrs. Lois Stooksbury, the latest addition to Chapel Hill's ranks of businesswomen, likes to make snap decisions. She says one of the best she ever made was to settle down in Chapel Hill.

Mrs. Stooksbury attended the University of Tennessee, where she was president of the Sigma Kappa sorority. Then she spent three years working in Tullahoma before she came to Chapel Hill.

"My husband, Paul, and I were visiting my sister in High Point," Mrs. Stooksbury said. "We just happened to drive through Chapel Hill and we liked it so much that we're here to stay."

The store has received a corporation charter from the Secretary of State in Raleigh. The charter lists Mrs. Stooksbury as president, Bill Stooksbury as vice-president, and Mrs. Stooksbury as secretary-treasurer. The store has been equipped and a new stock of merchandise has been received. It will open for business today with a sale of all the merchandise.

Merchants Plan Free Fishing Trip for Fathers

Sixteen fathers from the Chapel Hill-Carrboro area will be treated to a free fishing trip on the North Carolina coast as a Father's Day present from local merchants soon after the celebration on June 19.

Monk Jennings, in charge of Father's Day promotion for the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association, said yesterday the recipients of the free trip would probably go to Harker's Island or Snead's Ferry for their holiday. The date for the trip has not yet been set.

Fathers may not enter the competition for the trips themselves. They must be sponsored by their wives or children, who should fill out application blanks available at all stores which are members of the Merchants Association.

Application blanks may be filled out in as many stores as desired, and it is not necessary to make a purchase in order to enter a father in the running.

At the close of the contest period, probably the Saturday before Father's Day, all the entry blanks will be pooled and the 16 names drawn. An individual merchant will sponsor each winner on the group trip to the coast.

Mr. Jennings said additional prizes might be awarded for (1) the first name selected in the drawing, (2) the biggest fish caught, and (3) the most fish caught.

Everybody is invited to the outdoor reception, concert, and swimming exhibition to be held at 9 o'clock tomorrow (Saturday) evening at Kessing pool as a part of the University's Commencement program. Edgar Alden will direct a musical program by members of a Commencement orchestra, and Ralph Casey has arranged an exhibition of swimming and diving by University students at 9:30 during an intermission in the concert.

People who work for newspapers, and no doubt many other people, know that the classified ads—lost and found, jobs wanted, household articles for sale and exchange, and so on—are one of the most eagerly read parts of a paper. I find an unusual appeal in those that have been appearing in the Raleigh News and Observer in response to the offer to publish, free, "Boys and Girls' Want Ads."

Here are a few samples from the for-sale-or-swap division: "2 cocker puppies and dog house, $5, or swap for Lionel transformer"—"3 cute honey-colored cocker spaniels, will trade for pony"—"will trade bow and arrow for coonskin hat"—"golden hamsters, $1.50 to $5 a pair"—"2 practically new evening dresses, one white, one blue"—"girl, 13, will make layer cakes; definitely homemade; no mixes used"—"will exchange young male parakeet for solid white kitten"—"36-vol Funk & Wagnalls Encyclopedia, will sacrifice for $35."

But it is the job-wanted ads that stir my special interest. Why that is, I will tell in a moment.

Here are some samples (the addresses and phone numbers given in the N&O being omitted): "lawn mowing, call Joe Moore, age 12, and Joe Tunnell, age 11"—"6th grade boy wants job during summer"—"wanted, odd jobs, mowing lawns, yard work, etc."—"boy, 14, will run errands, wash garden, walk dog, clean polish car"—"hard-working 16-year-old boy wants job for summer"—"experienced, dependable girl desires light housework or baby-sitting"—"girl of 14 wants baby-sitting job; loves children and people."
