Power Fails Near Church Mysteriously

What was described as "an extreme short circuit" of mysterious origin plunged a small section of the village into darkness twice last Thursday evening. The affected area centered around the Holy Trinity Lutheran Church on the corner of East Rosemary Street and Pickard Lane.

Members of the church were in the building at the time preparing for the service of dedication scheduled for Sunday. Suddenly the lights went out. The time was about 7 o'clock.

A work crew was dispatched from the University's power plant, and electricity was restored within a half an hour. The repair crew then was sent to Carrboro on another job. Just about the same time it reached Carrboro—7:45 p. m.—the lights in the section around the church blacked out for the second time. Again the cause was unknown. The crew returned, and by 9:30 p. m. had power restored for good.

Grey Culbreth, superintendent of utilities for the University, said that whatever caused the trouble "blew a fuse of considerable magnitude—one that wouldn't have blown except in the case of an extreme short circuit."

Mr. Culbreth said the same thing had happened once before in the past year, and at that time there was also considerable activity going on in the church. But no cause for the short circuit could be determined for either incident.

Actually, Mr. Culbreth explained, the 7:45 blackout last Thursday blew several fuses up and down the nearby power lines. He said utilities employees are still searching for the source of the trouble.

Lenten Services at Episcopal Church

Lenten services this week at the Chapel of the Cross will be as follows:

Ash Wednesday February 15, Holy Communion at 7 a. m., 10 a. m., and 4:30 p. m.; evening service at 5:15 p. m.

Half-hour service at 5:15 p. m. Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday.

Services next Sunday, February 19, will be at 7:30 a. m., 9:15 a. m., 9:30 a. m., and 11 a. m. and Bible study at 8 p. m.

Lent begins on Ash Wednesday. Easter Day will be April 1. Bishop Henry's visitation will be at the 11 a. m. service on March 18.

Henry Schulman Visits Here

Henry Schulman of New York, one of the country's leading dealers in rare medical and other science books, was here two days last week with Dr. and Mrs. Warner Wells. The Medical History Club, composed of physicians and students in the University's School of Medicine, gathered in the Wells' living room Friday evening to hear Mr. Schulman tell of old medical books and his experiences in finding them for collectors.

Vanstorsy Living Here

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Vanstorsy, who were married last month in Charlotte, are living at 59 Maxwell Road while Mr. Vanstorsy is studying in the University's School of Business Administration. He is from Greensboro and served in the U. S. Marines for two years. Mrs. Vanstorsy, the former Eugenia McCray of Charlotte, was graduated from the University here in 1953. She is a secretary in the University's School of Nursing.

Moves Here From Durham

Mrs. Roy W. Morrison, formerly of Chapel Hill, has sold her home in Durham and has moved from there to 10 Lanark Road in Glen Leno. She has resumed her teaching at the Hope Valley School after a six-week illness.

Mr. Cobb's a Busy Man Building Golf Courses

GEORGE COBB... HE'S TO BLAME FOR THE WATER HOLES

By Billy Arthur

For youthful George Cobb of 10 Brandon Road, this is a rapidly changing world in which much is happening, especially in golf.

Virtually unknown, except to Uncle Sam's Marines, eight years ago, yet touched with a sort of ambitiously-inspired vision and courage, Mr. Cobb has suddenly become one of the foremost golf architects of the generation. He has put new ideas, designs, efficiency, beauty and sport into golf courses by combining the knowledge of a landscape engineer with a love for the game of golf and the use of modern construction methods and equipment.

The result: Right now, he has 12 courses under way or on the drawing board. Under construction are courses at the University of Maryland, Glenn Dale, Md., Towson, Md., Greenville, S. C. and the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina and another at Greensboro. In the design stage are courses at Laurel, Md., Martinsville, Va., Isle of Palms, S. C., Greenville, S. C., Manteo, and LaPlata, Md.

Last year alone he completed Army courses at Fort Eustis, Va., and Fort Meade, Md., Jacksonville, N. C., Sapphire Valley at Cashiers, N. C., and Lynwood Country Club at Martinsville, Va. Others he has done include Camp

Friedrichs Have Returned

Mr. and Mrs. Werner P. Friedrich and their daughter Niecey have returned from a year's absence during which Mr. Friedrich was a Fulbright lecturer, with headquarters at the University of Melbourne in Australia. While abroad they visited many countries in Asia and Europe. On their way home they stopped off for a visit in Thun, Switzerland. Mr. Friedrich's native town, Niecey has returned to school in Northfield, Mass. Mr. Friedrich is chairman of the University's Department of Comparative Studies.

Needlecraft Workshop

The Community Club's Needlecraft Workshop will meet at 10:30 a. m. today (Tuesday) with Mrs. Gilbert L. Kelso at 104 Carr Street.

Boy Scouts Celebrate 45th Anniversary

National Boy Scout Week marking the 45th anniversary of organized Scouting in America was observed last week in Chapel Hill and other areas of the Orange District with appropriate activities. The week's events were concluded on Sunday with Scouts attending special church services in their honor. The week's events included a three-day training course held in Chapel Hill for Cub leaders from throughout the county. Den mothers also sponsored a special session for den chiefs.

Scouts cooperated by arranging special window displays calling attention to the role of Scouting in the life of the community. Eagle Scout Montie Milner went to Raleigh to represent the district in a special Boy Scout Week program presented to members of the executive board of the Oconeechee Council.

Essay Contest Won By Eleanor Davis

Eleanor Dale Davis won first prize in the essay contest held at the Carrboro Elementary School under the auspices of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Tuberculosis Society. Other winners were Judy Ward, second, and Judy Bradshaw, third. Each girl received a science book as a prize. The prizes were presented at the school's chapel program one morning last week by Mrs. Sturgis Leavitt and Floyd Senter of the Tuberculosis Society.

After autographing the books, the prize-winners gave them to the school's library.

The war against tuberculosis was the topic of the essay contest.

Hamiltons on Visit Here

Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Hamilton were here at the weekend visiting Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Cameron. They were entertained Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norval Neal Luxon on Mount Bolus. Mr. Hamilton was here from 1942 to 1945 as head of the academic department of the Naval Pre Flight School. He now lives in Columbus, Ohio, and is an officer of the national organization of the Presbyterian Church.

Landscape Study Session

The third meeting of the Chapel Hill Garden Club's landscape study group will be held at 10 a. m. Thursday, February 16, at the home of Mrs. C. S. Logsdon at 204 Laurel Hill Road. William J. Brown of Chapel Hill, proprietor of the Mayflower Garden Service, will speak on "Erosion and Drainage and Problems of Paths and Drives." All members of the Garden Club are invited.

Lejeune and Cherry Point, Green Valley at Greensboro, Fort Jackson, Greenwood, S. C., Carmel at Charlotte, and Finley at Chapel Hill.

And all this came much about by accident. Mr. Cobb was graduated from the University of Georgia in 1937 with a degree in landscape architecture, and immediately went to work with the National Park Service. When the park service transferred him to Camp Lejeune, N. C., about the time the U. S. entered World War II, Mr. Cobb volunteered in the U. S. Marine Corps, but retained his membership in the American Society of Landscape Architects.

Lt. Col. W. P. T. Hill who supervised the designing of Camp Lejeune and who later was quartermaster general of the corps, got the "word," as the Marines say, of Mr. Cobb's landscaping knowledge and interest in golf; so it wasn't long before they were discussing building a golf course for the base. Mr. Cobb suggested that Fred Findlay, the dean of American golf architects, be called in. And Mr. Cobb worked with him on construction of the first 18 holes. "It was wonderful experience," he recalls. "I got basic training from him during that apprentice period."

So popular was the first course that another had to be built and Mr. Cobb was ordered—that's the way the Marines work—to handle it. Alone.

That did it. Mr. Cobb determined that when his hitch in the corps ended, he would continue as a landscape architect but concentrate on golf courses. And, that in planning and building courses, he would give them not only the professional approach of a landscape architect but also an understanding of the problems and feelings of the average golfer. That he could do, because he had been regarded as a promising golfer during his Savannah, Ga., high school days. He still shoots par.

World War II over, Mr. Cobb opened his first office in Greensboro, and didn't wait long for an assignment—to build the Green Valley course there. Then he was invited by the Army to plan and construct the Fort Jackson course at Columbia, S. C.

When that course was described by sports writers and Lt. Gen. G. H. Decker as "capable of accommodating any golf tournament in the world," Mr. Cobb was firmly launched on a new career.

The University of North Carolina next summoned him to complete the 18-hole Finley Golf Course, now one of the finest collegiate courses in the nation. But the Korean war broke out.

Suddenly, Mr. Cobb's career underwent a change. As a reserve major in the Marine Corps, he was recalled to active duty for three years of service. Out of uniform again in 1954, he was called by the veteran golf architect Findlay to supervise construction of the Chestnut Ridge Country Club layout at Baltimore. There followed in the next 12 months a series of assignments.

Dollar Days Set To Begin Friday

"Dollar Days" will be held in Chapel Hill and Carrboro on Friday and Saturday of this week.

It will be the first of eight sales promotion events to be held in the two communities this year, and merchants were reported yesterday to be united in their effort to make this week's event the greatest ever held here.

Sponsored by the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association, "Dollar Days" will bring out bargains in every member's store.

"What does this mean?" asked O. T. Watkins, chairman of the promotion. "It means simply that everyone will have a good opportunity to buy seasonal quality merchandise of all types at unusual savings from all cooperating stores."

Huge banners and posters will mark all cooperating business establishments in both communities, and newspapers and radios are cooperating in giving advance notice of the community-wide event. They will also carry advertisements later in the week from individual stores.

Sketch Course Is To Begin Tomorrow

A sketch class open to the public will be given this semester by the Person Hall Art Gallery. It will be held at the gallery from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. every Wednesday evening from tomorrow, February 15, through the next 13 weeks. The fee for the entire course, including payment for materials, will be $14. The teacher will be John Kacher of the University's Department of Art.

The class will be open both to beginners and those with some experience. To enroll, attend the first meeting of the class tomorrow evening.

At Flower Judges' Meeting

Mrs. W. C. Coker, Mrs. Roy Homewood, Mrs. Carl Pegg, Mrs. Dudley Cowden, Mrs. A. C. Shearer, and Mrs. Grey Culbreth, all of whom are nationally accredited flower show judges, were in High Point last Thursday at the annual meeting of the Piedmont Judges of the North Carolina Garden Club.

High School Sweetheart

Miss Betsy Fitch was crowned Sweetheart of Chapel Hill High School at the annual Sweetheart Ball held Saturday night at Carrboro School Auditorium. Runner-up was Miss Tina Demeritt.

George Livas Dies Unexpectedly Sunday

GEORGE LIVAS

George Livas, one of Chapel Hill's most popular businessmen, died unexpectedly of a heart ailment Sunday night in Durham. He was 52 years of age.

Mr. Livas fainted at a social at the Greek Orthodox Church in Durham Sunday evening, and died at Watts Hospital around 11:30 p. m. He had been in good spirits all day and in apparent good health.

A native of Greece, Mr. Livas came to the United States in 1921 and liked it so well that he remained. A year later he moved to Chapel Hill to work at the Carolina Confectionary, which was then operated by George Pavlakis on the site of the late Mr. Livas' present Carolina Coffee Shop.

Chapel Hill Chaff L.G.

When my wife and I were in England in the fall and were on a sight-seeing tour out of London, we stopped for a coffee break, or maybe it was for tea, at the little town of Bicester between Oxford and Stratford. There had come a nip in the air and our guess was that we were in for a cold spell. So I went into a shop and bought from the good-mannered, genial proprietor a pair of gloves. They were of gray wool, country gloves, the kind I like.

As it turned out, the weather stayed mild most of the time and I had no use for the gloves except for a day or so in Scotland. But after I got home I wore them many times and with great satisfaction. Then, as often happens with my gloves, spectacles, and other articles, I lost them. When I missed them I telephoned to all the places I had been since I remembered wearing them.

That is, I thought it was all the places. Last Friday I discovered it wasn't. I went to meet a friend coming in on the bus and was comfortably seated in the waiting room when H. C. Pearce, the bus station manager, walked from his office into the waiting room and handed me my gloves.

Mr. Pearce doesn't know what a good turn he did me by seizing upon and holding them. They are not worth much in money, but gloves or a hat or a garment or a picture or a trinket, or whatever it is that you have got when you are on a tour, has a sentimental appeal. In the case of these gloves it's a specially strong appeal because I think of how one of those cunning little sheep I saw

School Bond Issue Described As Stopgap Measure at Panel Sponsored Here by the PTA

Members of a panel to discuss the March 27 two million dollar school bond election in Orange County told the Chapel Hill Parent-Teachers Association last Thursday that the bond issue was "only a stopgap measure at best." The money, they said, would allow county and local schools to meet only minimum demands expected during the next five years.

Phipps Is to Head Legion Committee

Paul H. Robertson of Chapel Hill, state commander of the American Legion, has appointed Judge L. J. Phipps of Chapel Hill as chairman of the North Carolina Legion's special legislative committee that will work with the Legion's national leaders on the War Veterans Security Bill now coming up in the U. S. Congress. J. Addington Wagner of Illinois, the Legion's national commander, had requested Mr. Robertson to make such an appointment.

Mr. Phipps and his committee will work with the Legion's national special legislative committee, the members of which include Co-Chairman John Stelle of Illinois, past national commander, and Herman F. Luhrs of Michigan; George N. Craig, Governor of Illinois and past national commander; Earle Coker of Georgia, past national commander; Maurice Stember, adjutant of the Legion's New York department, and Michael M. Markowitz, director of rehabilitation of the Legion's Pennsylvania department.

European Journals Recognize Ullman

International recognition has come again to Kenan Professor B. L. Ullman, one of the world's foremost classicists, who heads the Department of Classics at the University. Journals in Italy, Switzerland and England are hailing Ullman's book, "Studies in the Italian Renaissance."

"Sensational" is the word employed by the "Bibliothèque de Humanisme et Renaissance" of Geneva, Switzerland, to tell of an Ullman revelation about the use of humanistic script by Poggio between 1402 and 1403. "Ullman climbs with greater sureness than any other living scholar from Classical literature to Medieval culture and to the humanistic schools," declares a European reviewer.

"He preserves in these difficult studies a sound good sense and rallies his readers with his humor," said the critic.

A "conditional prediction" is also made: "If Ullman succeeds in establishing with equal certainty other phases of this great migration from old Corbie to the Sorbonne, to the Italian humanists, his name can stand alongside that of the great masters: Mommsen, Delisle, Traube."

Chapel Hill High Wins Double Bill

Chapel Hill High School's basketball teams won a doubleheader from Oxford Orphanage here Friday night. The boys won 67 to 37 and the girls were victorious 48 to 34.

Dosher led the boys in scoring with 16 points. Other players and their points were Clark 7, Weaver 6, Neville 9, Teague 6, Schwenker 2, Goodrich 4, Burns 5, Blackwell 6, and Hocutt 6. In the girls' game Fitch was high scorer with 17 points. Others were Greenwood 5, Hackney 15, Royster 11, Yeager, Shepard, Laughon, Proctor, Evans, Whitehead and Davis.

Visitor From Ohio

A recent guest of Mrs. Nell Spear was Andy Vuksta of Alliance, Ohio, former Air Force lieutenant who was a bombardier on the plane on which Mrs. Spear's son, the late James Fenwick Spear Jr., was navigator. The two men flew together in 1944 when they were in the 388th Bomb Group of the Eighth Air Force, based in England.
