

Folk Festival Slated Today And Saturday

Folk singers, music-makers, and dancers from remote areas of North Carolina and other states will be heard and seen at the ninth annual Carolina Folk Festival, to be held here at 8 o'clock this (Friday) evening and tomorrow evening in Memorial Hall under the auspices of the North Carolina Folk Lore Council and the University's Extension Division. As in former years, the festival will be directed by Bascom Lamar Lunsford, the famous folklore expert from Turkey Creek.

Among the many participants will be string bands, ballad singers, cloggers, and square dancers. Two repeating groups who drew applause at the 1955 festival are the costumed Indian Dancers, composed of Boy Scouts from the Occaneechee Council, and the Scottish Dancers from Olivia.

Others to appear are a dance group from Glenn School in Durham County, directed by Mrs. Willis Wynne. Her group has won two State Fair Festival trophies. And Mrs. Stewart Bennett of Burlington will bring a group of teenage performers to the program.

George Pegram, the Iredell banjo-picker, will be on hand as usual for the annual program. Other perennial performers to be present are Mrs. Freda English of the Laurel River section of Madison County and composer Lamar Stringfield of Charlotte.

A newcomer among the 400-odd singers and dancers will be Pleaz Mobley, a lawyer from Manchester, Ky., widely-known as a traditional mountain folk and ballad singer. A performer at the annual Mountain Dance and Folk Festival in Asheville, Mobley has recorded many of the old folk songs for the Library of Congress collection.

Gilbert and Sullivan

Basingstoke Sextet Will Sing Sunday

Six Chapel Hill residents with a common interest in the operettas of Gilbert and Sullivan—the Basingstoke Sextet—will present their second annual concert of selections by the British comic opera masters at 8 o'clock on Sunday evening in the main lounge of the Graham Memorial on the University campus. The concert will be one of the student union's Sunday night "Petite Musicales."

In the two pictures beside this story, two members of the sextet are shown with costume and prop for solo selections. John Ludwig dons a nightshirt and sleeping cap to sing the Lord Chancellor's "Nightmare Song" from "Iolanthe." Mr. Ludwig is a University student from New Orleans.

In the other picture, Miss Lynne Zimmerman, a student from Marshall, leans on a bass fiddle (which she doesn't play) and sings "Silvered is the Raven Hair" from "Patience." The song is the lament of the fading Lady Jane who bewails the passing of her youth.

Other members of the sextet are Jan Saxon of Charlotte, Susie Roberts of Asheville, James Prueett of Mt. Airy and James Chamblee of Burlington. Walter Golde will accompany the sextet on the piano.

When I see a picnic nowadays it is, nearly always, beside a highway. The company engaged in it may be having a good time—and if they are satisfied, why should anybody else complain?—but, in my view, the closeness of the pavement, the roar of the cars whizzing by, and the fumes from the gasoline impart a taint of artificiality to the scene. The mechanical age is intruding upon nature. That sort of picnic seems, in short, sort of spurious.

There was something very different from this, and delightfully old-fashioned, about the gathering that my wife and I came upon when we went to Mrs. P. H. Winston's down near the east end of the village just before twilight last Saturday.

There under the trees, in the soft spring air with a clear sky above, the Winstons were having a family reunion: The company: the hostess, Mrs. Winston; Roger Goiran, Mrs. Goiran (the former Miss Carolyn Winston) from Washington, and their four children, Pierre, Philip, Anne, and Jo-Lucie; Mr. and Mrs. Pat Winston from Greensboro, and their daughters, Phyllis and Susan; and Mr. and Mrs. George Winston, their son Barry (with a pretty girl, name unknown to me) and their daughter Judy.

Mr. Goiran is in the U. S. diplomatic service and has served at many far-away posts. He is now stationed in Washington. Anne was born in Istanbul, Turkey, and Jo-Lucie, named for her two grandmothers, was born in Tehran, Persia. Pierre and Philip, born in this country, are attending a preparatory school in Delaware.

About three weeks ago the six Goirans set out from Washington in their station wagon for a vacation. They

Chapel Hill Country Club Proceeds With Plans For Expansion; Contracts to Be Awarded Soon

The Chapel Hill Country Club is moving ahead rapidly with its plans for expansion. Contracts for construction of the club house addition and the revamped golf course are expected to be awarded any day. The club membership will hold a meeting at the clubhouse at 8 o'clock Monday evening to vote on detailed plans for the building program.

Charles Shaffer, president of the club, said yesterday the new clubhouse extension will provide facilities for a total membership of 300. Membership is now 170. The construction program will cost approximately $100,000, which does not include funds for the building of a swimming pool—a venture planned for the future.

"These facilities will provide Chapel Hill with the type of country club the town can be proud of," Mr. Shaffer said. "Present plans call for approximately half of the money for the building program to be borrowed from lending institutions, but the remainder will have to be provided by present members of the club and other persons interested in providing these expanded facilities for Chapel Hill."

The new addition, to the clubhouse is expected to follow the rustic design of the present building. It will have sliding partitions which will allow the entire space to be utilized at one time, or broken down into separate rooms. Additional kitchen facilities are also planned.

The golf course will be 3,000 yards long, with the bad hills of the present course eliminated. Much new land will be utilized to extend the course, and a two and a half acre lake is slated to be built. The new course has been designed by Finley and Lovings, golf course architects, in cooperation with George Cobb of Chapel Hill.

Here is the addition planned for the Chapel Hill Country Club. The present clubhouse is the wing seen at the left side of the building. The swimming pool in the foreground is being planned for the future, with dressing rooms on the lower level of the clubhouse. Until the pool is built, the lower level will be used as a golf shop and golf locker room. An aerial sketch of the layout may be seen on page 7.

He was an observer for the Jewish Agency at the United Nations Charter Conference and has served as an aid to David Ben-Gurion. He represented Israel at the Rhodes armistice talks with Egypt and Jordan and at the 1949 Lausanne Conference between Israel and the Arab states.

He said he expects strong batting power from Will Frye, Maultsby and Keller, who were all members of last year's University varsity baseball team, and from Feno McGinty, who was a member of last year's UNC freshman squad.

Brown Company Is Building New Store

Work has begun on the construction of a new building for the E. A. Brown Furniture Company to be located on West Franklin Street near the Hospital Saving Association building. Victory Village Nursery Is Receiving Many Gifts to Replace Its Fire Losses

The property lost in the Victory Village Nursery fire a week ago last Wednesday is gradually being replaced through the efforts of various local organizations and merchants. The merchants Association announced last Wednesday that Rose's variety store had donated a box of toys to the Nursery, and the Glen Lennox Toy Shop has also given a box of toys. Sweaters and coats have been replaced by Berman's, Belk-Leggett-Horton, and the White Oaks department store of Carrboro.

Kemp's Record Store has given two record players, the Graham Memorial has given a check to help cover the expenses the Nursery incurs in replacing its equipment, and the Red Cross has given a check for the replacement of the Nursery's art supplies, which were lost in the fire.

As of Wednesday morning, P. L. Burch, director of Victory Village, reports that the fire insurance adjusters are working on an evaluation of the damage done to the building by the fire, but have reached no definite conclusion yet.

At the moment, the Nursery is doing well with its temporary headquarters in the basement of the Methodist Church, and enjoying fresh air in the playground to the rear of the church.

Post Office Pens On the Way Out

Postmaster Paul Cheek announced this week that Chapel Hill Post Office will be among the thousands of offices in the nation discarding the nationally-criticized post office hand-dip pen this year.

It will no doubt be welcome news to postal patrons to learn that the pen, which many know best as the "pen which never has ink and yet leaks" is headed for the "land of no return" and will be replaced by a modern pen—ball point in design.

Mr. Cheek said he didn't know exactly when the new pens would arrive. He said the postmaster general had just announced that competitive bids had gone out for 500,000 pens and 500,000 refills.

"They'll probably send them out to us, without our requisitioning them, after they're made," Mr. Cheek added. "All I know is that the pens are going to be changed."

experiments have been conducted for many months in the use of ball point pens at selected post offices in various sections of the country. The results proved so encouraging that overall use was recommended by the industrial engineers of the Post Office Department.

The public as well as postal employees favored the use of ball point pens because of their ability to produce greater legibility. At the same time, their use will mean important savings in custodial labor.

The Maddy's Anniversaries
