

Rev. John Ensign Accepting Call to Presbytery in Va.

The Rev. John Ensign, pastor of New Hope and Efland Presbyterian Churches for the past eight years, has accepted a call to East Hanover Presbytery in the Richmond-Petersburg area.

He will begin his new work around September 1 and will face a challenge comparable to that he had in Orange County.

The East Hanover Presbytery has embarked on a vast building program, including a camp akin to Camp New Hope which Mr. Ensign developed and directed in Orange.

In addition, New Hope Church has recently observed its 200th anniversary with dedication of a new church and manse, and Efland Church soon will begin an improvement program.

Mr. Ensign's work has brought national recognition to New Hope through a Saturday Evening Post article, books written by him and his wife, and the National Council of Churches which has selected Camp New Hope for the past five years for its Southeastern Regional Training Camp for Church Camp leaders.

Summerlin Tells Family About Disturbed Conditions in Argentina Before Rebellion

Just a few hours before, Sam Summerlin's Associated Press dispatch telling of the new rebellion in Argentina appeared in Monday's newspapers his parents here, Mr. and Mrs. Irl Summerlin, got a letter from him telling of the disturbed conditions in Buenos Aires. The air-mailed letter was written Saturday, June 2; the rebellion occurred Saturday, June 9.

In the revolution that overthrew Peron a year ago Sam was on the street close to where bullets were flying around; so, naturally, the Summerlin family here is made uneasy by news of violence in Argentina. But the latest dispatches, which tell of the prompt crushing of the rebellion by government troops, give assurance that Americans in Buenos Aires, even newspaper correspondents who seek out places where excitement runs highest, are not in danger.

Winter is now beginning in Argentina and the letter Sam wrote on the second day of June says: "Cold rain is splattering outside." Later in the letter he says: "This has been a most hectic week with a dozen newsmen

Fire District Poses a Legal Question

The Town of Chapel Hill is awaiting a report from the State Fire Rating Bureau, an engineer of which spent last week here, before going further into discussions with the Greater Chapel Hill Fire District on purchase of its truck and protecting its area which was not annexed recently.

A number of factors enter the picture. The town now has a temporary arrangement with the fire district to store its truck, respond to calls in the district, and share expenses of combating fires in the district.

When residents of the district created it, they also approved a tax levy of 10c per $100 valuation. Tax bills with that levy have been prepared and are ready for mailing. However, part of the district now is within the town and entitled to protection without that assessment.

Should Orange County collect the tax? If so, what should it do with the money? Can it legally instruct the tax collector not to collect from those residents now in town?

Residents of the district do not wish to pay taxes in the fire district and to the town too. But they remain, according to the statute, residents of the district they created. How can they get out? Some attorneys say by another election as clearly set forth in the statute. Others say it can be circumvented.

Residents of that part of the district not annexed feel as if the town should purchase the truck and serve them for the amount of money the 10c tax levy would raise.

What to do? What to do? What can legally be done? That, as County Commissioner Chairman R. J. M. Hobbs put it, would make a good bar examination question.

Something New Will Be Added to Yule Decorations

The Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association has contracted for something new in Christmas decorations this year.

The familiar candles of past years will still be used, but 51 sprays which extend four feet over the street and four feet high and which are lighted with 15 bulbs on each side will complement the candles. A big red bow is on the bottom of the spray.

The contract was negotiated by the Christmas decorations committee of the Merchants Association. Sandy McClamroch is chairman.

Rosemonds on Way To San Francisco

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Rosemond left Saturday to go to San Francisco, California, for the annual convention of Kiwanis International. At Greensboro they boarded a special Kiwanis train that was to pick up more carloads of Kiwanians along the way.

From Greensboro the train was to go to Chicago and then to Canada, where it would make some sight-seeing stopovers. It is scheduled to reach San Francisco next Sunday. The Rosemonds will fly back from California on June 22.

3,100 Students

As of Saturday, the University summer school registration was around 3,100 students. Registration was continuing yesterday (Monday). There was every indication the final figure, even with cancellations, would show attendance this year to be greater than for the first session last year.

Chapel Hill Chaff

L.G.

Mrs. William Meade Prince made her plans to take her Chihuahua, Happy, to Dr. Vine one day last week to have his throat treated. She had an appointment to dine with the Joseph Warrens that evening and she was to leave early the next morning for her cottage at Manteo on Roanoke Island.

On her way to the Warrens' she detoured with Happy and stopped at the Vine hospital. When she opened the car door Happy shot out and far away. She called and called. Behind the hospital is a deep ravine, a rank jungle of tangled vines and shrubs, and she thought he might be there. She called and called, but there was no answer.

She telephoned her hosts the reason for her delay and Mrs. Warren and Stafford hurried out to the hospital and added their calls to hers. Still no answer. They came home and ate dinner. The grieving guest had little appetite. Again the company went out to the hospital and again they shouted loud and long, all in vain.

The next-morning at five o'clock Mrs. Prince went back. She had decided to postpone her trip if Happy were still lost. She gave a hopeful call and out of the bushes dashed the runaway. Within an hour they were on the way to Manteo.

Pete Mullis, his three daughters, Jubie, Ellen, and Deane, and their neighbor, Shirley Patterson, are just about to end a ten-day trip to Cuba. They have traveled by automobile, by airplane, and by boat. They drove to Charleston and spent the night there; the next day went on to Miami, where they left their car and took a boat to Havana; and will fly thence to Miami to pick up their car and drive home.

Town's Needs and Problems Cited by Cornwell and Rose At Chapel Hill Jaycee Meet

Campbell Elected Citizens' School Council Chairman

Orville B. Campbell was elected chairman of the Citizens' School Council at its organizational meeting at the Chapel Hill High School Friday night.

Other officers named were Morris Mason, vice-chairman; and Mrs. Paul Shearin, secretary. The three officers and Mrs. Frederick Cleveland and W. E. Stone Jr. will compose the executive committee.

The full council will not meet again until fall, but the executive committee probably will meet several times to map what is expected to be a very active program for 1956-57.

Every school territory in the Chapel Hill School District is represented on the council, and about 20 members attended the Friday meeting. While the council has only advisory authority, it was approved and named by the Chapel Hill School Board to study problems and needs of the schools and offer suggestions and advice to the board.

The nominating committee which brought in the slate of officers was composed of Dr. J. Kempton Jones, chairman, the Rev. J. R. Manley, and Mrs. Clyde Hogan.

Chapel Hill People Invited to Exhibit

Chapel Hill members of the N. C. Art Society and their friends are invited to a preview showing of French impressionist paintings at 8:30 p. m. Friday, June 15, at the new N. C. Art Museum in Raleigh. An announcement of the showing says: "Mr. Byrnes, the museum's assistant director, has assembled a distinguished collection of paintings from private owners and museums, and the exhibit will cover the last quarter of the 19th century from Corot to Cezanne. The exhibit has been made possible through the generosity of a number of private collectors, including Governor Harriman of New York."

"Attendance at the museum has passed the 20,000 mark, which far exceeds expectations for the two months it has been open. Recognition has recently come to the museum through an article on Rembrandt in the May 26 issue of Collier's Magazine."

"Mr. Valentini, director of the museum, is in Italy for the summer working on plans for the growth of the museum. His broad contacts and experience in the world of art are proving invaluable in the development of the museum."

by Charlie Johnson
Needs and problems of Chapel Hill were surveyed in a panel discussion on town government at the meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at the Carolina Inn Thursday night.

Major points brought out were the town's money problems, the "hand to mouth" budget, proposed building of another fire station, traffic problem, and development of the newly annexed areas.

Town Manager Tom D. Rose were panel speakers and Jake Wicker of the Institute of Government was moderator.

Mayor Cornwell said Chapel Hill is unique. Its biggest problem is money because so much property in the town is owned by the state and does not yield income, he said. Yet the town has a nominal tax rate, and a "hand to mouth" budget with little room for expansion and planning in the future, he said, adding that a new fire station would have to be built soon to take care of the recently annexed areas.

Town Manager Rose said they hoped to build the new station somewhere near the new Institute of Government building. Construction of the new station would cost approximately $40,000, and the funds would come from a contemplated bond issue of $300,000 to take care of that and for other major town improvements.

Concerning the traffic problem, Mayor Cornwell said, the town does the best job it can. No income is derived from car property tax from students at the University. The students pay this tax in their home town, but yet Chapel Hill must handle the problem of too many cars.

Mr. Rose said 88 cents of every $1 of town taxes collected are spent in Chapel Hill either for payroll or services. Mr. Rose also said the town has just let a contract for $30,000 for construction of storm sewers and is about to let one for the same amount for curbing gutters.

The town's biggest problem now, he added, is absorption of the newly annexed area. He said the town would have to furnish the new area its entitled services before revenue will come from it. In regard to fire protection, the town can handle any area with the new truck it has, but a new fire station would enable trucks to get to certain areas more quickly. New hydrants are being installed on Country Club Road, and garbage collection has already been started in the new area.

A question concerning the town's buying the public utilities from the University was brought out. Mr. Rose said this would be quite a problem and would probably run into several million dollars. He said this would entail cutting the University from the power and water systems. It has been estimated this alone would cost $200,000. At the present, the University owns these two systems, and the town owns the sewer system.
