

Chapel Hill and Carrboro Merchants Plan Welcome and Open House for New Students

One of the most extensive welcomes ever given to new University students by the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association is now being planned by the 152-member Association.

A classified directory of the Association members and a letter of welcome will be sent to all new students before the University opens for the fall semester.

Banners saying "Welcome Students" will be displayed in the store windows. Campus quiz contests are being printed for distribution to all member stores. Members of the Association have been asked to pick up this material on September 10 or during that week at the Association office.

Prizes will also be awarded to some of the individual store winners by the stores themselves.

The students will be invited to visit the Association office for maps and any other information they might want.

New students will also be invited to establish credit in Chapel Hill-Carrboro stores by getting their parents to authorize charge accounts with any Association member, and the credit bureau here will handle all the arrangements, according to Mrs. Jane Whitefield, executive secretary of the Association.

The classified directory that will be sent out and also distributed after the new students arrive has been prepared by Mrs. Whitefield under the supervision of the Public Relations Committee of the Association. It will give an alphabetical list of Association members and then a classified alphabetical list of members according to the goods they sell and the services they offer. Also listed will be churches and civic clubs.

The student welcome program is being planned and supervised by the Trade Promotions Committee, of which Carlton Byrd is chairman.

Tomorrow Is Last Day for Registration To Vote in the September 8 Referendum

Tomorrow (Saturday) is the last day one may register to be eligible to vote on four important amendments to the North Carolina Constitution in the September 8 referendum.

Newcomers who desire to vote September 8 must have been a resident of the state of North Carolina for one year and of the precinct for 30 days.

To be eligible to vote, one either must register by tomorrow or have been registered for the 1952 general election or subsequent state democratic primaries. Anyone on those registration books may still vote provided they are still residents of the same precinct.

However, if one has registered only for special interim elections and referendums such as annexation and bonds, he must get his name on the proper books. Tomorrow is the time to make certain one is properly registered.

Hubbard Continues 'Rec' Discussion

The old Methodist Church building now being used as the Chapel Hill Recreation Center may be available for several more months, but even that is not certain, according to the Rev. Charles S. Hubbard, a member of the N. C. Recreation Commission and pastor of the University Methodist Church.

Continuing his discussion of the local recreation problem before the Kiwanis Club at the Carolina Inn Tuesday night, Mr. Hubbard said the University Methodist Church proposes to launch its building program as soon as sufficient funds become available. When that is done, the "Rec" will have to find new quarters.

The amendments to be voted on propose education expense grants for private education and a local vote to suspend local schools; allowing limited necessary compensation to members of the General Assembly; changing the convening date of the Assembly from January to February; and authorizing married women to exercise powers of attorney conferred upon her by her husband.

S. T. Latta, chairman of the Orange County Board of Elections, reminded citizens yesterday that absentee ballots may be used in the September 8 election. They may be obtained now or at any date prior to the election by any qualified voter upon application to him.

Chapel Hill Chaff

J. J.

Hubert Neville, born and raised here, has seen great changes in Chapel Hill. We broached the subject the other morning when we ran into each other at breakfast.

"Forty or fifty years ago the University's Commencement was the biggest event of the year," Mr. Neville said. "People came to it from miles around. Farmers would say to their children and hired hands, 'If we don't finish hoeing this tobacco we won't be able to go to Commencement.'"

"Everybody came and had a big time. It was like a carnival. The speaking was in old Memorial Hall and just across the street would be refreshment stands where vendors sold peanuts, candy, ice cream, and lemonade dipped from a big wooden tub in which a chunk of ice floated. Those fellows came here only at Commencement time, and one of them made the first ice cream cones I ever saw. He made them out of banana paste in a contraption something like a waffle iron. Chapel Hill youngsters were crazy about them."

"One of the high spots of Commencement then was the debate for the Mangum Medal. It was considered a great event. The hall was always packed for it, and the student who won the medal was as much a hero as today's halfback who makes a long run to beat Duke."

"There was an oak grove back of Memorial Hall where people hitched their horses to the trees and got their picnic baskets out of the back of their buggies and carriages. Children ran in all directions and dogs jumped around and barked while the band played and a cloud of dust hung in the air and settled on everything."

Miltos Tassos Accumulates Enough Wealth To Return Home to Greece and Retirement

MILTOS AT 59

By Billy Arthur

If American business continues to thrive and to pay cash and stock dividends, Miltos Tassos, former owner of Chapel Hill's Cafe Mouza, will stay retired this time. He's going back to Greece next month to do it.

And we'd say he's sufficiently well-heeled, because he laid on our desk records of stock purchases running into the hundreds of thousands of dollars and two envelopes of current uncashed dividend checks totaling possibly $1,000.

"Tell them I got stock in these companies! Copy 'em down and get 'em right," he said, leaving each check separately.

The firms were Gillette, National Distilleries and Chemical Corp., Borg-Warner, General Bronze, Hazel Bishop, National Mortgage & Investment Corp., Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Rockwell Spring and Axle, Eastern Stainless Steel, Pittsburgh Steel, and American Smelting and Refining Co.

"That isn't all," Mr. Tassos added proudly. "I

Fire District Ponders Proposition to Town New Pupils to Register and Schedules To Be Arranged on Wednesday Morning

The Greater Chapel Hill Fire District Commissioners are considering proposing to the Town of Chapel Hill that it assume both the assets and liabilities of the district and enter into some agreement with the district so that it will be safeguarded in the event that at some future date it will have to furnish its own fire protection.

The decision on the overtures to the Town of Chapel Hill came this week when the new district board met and elected Alex McMahon chairman, succeeding E. A. Cameron. The other two members are Gran Childress, recently appointed to succeed W. T. Hobbs, and Eben Merritt, one of the original commissioners. Messrs. Cameron and Hobbs became ineligible to serve on the commission when the areas in which they lived recently were annexed to the Town of Chapel Hill.

At this week's meeting, the commission ruled that it was without legal authority to refund any taxes collected in that part of the district which was annexed to the town. The decision came as a result of an inquiry by owners of Glen Lennox Development Corp. whether it was entitled to a refund in fire district taxes collected for 1955-56. It was pointed out, however, that former residents of the Fire District who were taken into the Town of Chapel Hill in the spring election will not be billed for taxes during the ensuing fiscal year.

The assets of the Fire District include a substantial amount of cash and an equity in the fire truck it has purchased. Its liabilities include the indebtedness on the truck. The commission now is inclined to propose that the town take both the town now needs another truck and furnish protection to residents of the area for a specified length of time during which the district would turn over to the town the taxes collected by the special fire district levy. The commissioners, however, propose a cancellation clause of sufficient time that would safeguard the district in the event it would have to work out its own fire protection at some future date.

All principal in the Chapel Hill School District will be in their offices next Wednesday, August 29, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon to register new pupils and adjust schedules, Supt. C. W. Davis announced yesterday in a prepared notice to parents.

The principals are now back at work and can be reached by telephone for any school information, Supt. Davis said.

"Parents who are new in the community and who need information on where to register their children should get in touch with the superintendent or the principal of the school the child is to attend."

The principals are Mrs. Mildred Mooneyham, Chapel Hill Elementary School; Wesley No-

Merchants Polled On Shopping Hours

The Trade Promotions Committee of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association went on record this week as advising the Association Board of Directors to set September 12 for local merchants to start staying open all day on Wednesdays. The date had originally been set for Wednesday, September 5.

A poll of the majority of the directors show that most of them favor waiting until September 12. It is expected that the recommendation of the committee will be accepted at the next Board meeting.

The formal opening of the Christmas shopping season has tentatively been set for November 23. The Christmas lights will also be turned on that day. These recommendations were put forth by the committee and will be subject to approval by the Board of Directors.

The committee also recommended to the Board that the merchants keep their stores open until 9 p.m. for Christmas shopping on November 23, December 14, and December 17 through 21.

A bid from Bob Rush for installing and putting up the Christmas lights and decorations was accepted. The only other bid received was that of several members of the Chapel Hill Fire Department.

The Christmas decorations will include a green wreath along with the candle used last year, several strings of multi-colored lights to be put at several intersections and lighted Christmas trees at various spots in the town.
