

UNC Tries End Run to Solve Traffic Problem On Football Weekends

By Chuck Hauser

While the State Highway Patrol fumbled with excuses for last Saturday's football traffic tie-up, the University stole the end run around the problem.

The excuse for the bad traffic situation on Saturday: It was impossible to funnel two lanes of traffic at a reasonable rate from the Raleigh Road into Country Club Road to be directed into parking areas on Navy Field and Fetzer Field.

The proposed solution, arrived at by Highway Patrol officials and the University administration: Construct a special access road from a point on the U. S. 15-501 bypass to Navy Field.

The University's end run. While work on the access road is pending, construct a temporary connecting alley, two lanes wide, to funnel traffic from the Raleigh Road at an angle across the southeast corner of the intersection of the Raleigh Road and Country Club Road.

The temporary road would permit traffic to flow easily to a point behind the new Institute of Government building, where it would move onto the trails leading into the two parking areas.

The University was prepared to begin work on the short cut-off alley as soon as permission could be obtained from the owner of the land, Joseph Greer of Chicago. As soon as the access road is completed, the temporary cut-off would be abandoned and the land restored.

The access road from the bypass can be completed in two to three weeks, but no one could guess when the work would begin. The University had expected it to be completed before this fall. A number of conferences were held last year in which the State Highway Commission agreed to tackle the project (or at least the University thought the Commission had agreed).

The scrap paper drive of the Chapel Hill Jaycees will be held Sunday afternoon.

Everybody who has saved old newspapers and waste magazines should place their bundles of them on the curb by 1:30 o'clock that afternoon.

The site of the proposed road is a short distance south (in the direction of Pittsboro) of the point where Kings Mill Road enters the bypass highway. The new road would cut through property belonging to the Coker estate to reach University land nearby. It would extend through the woods to the southeast corner of Navy Field.

While the Highway Patrol stoutly denied that there was anything wrong with its much-touted "blueprint" for handling traffic at last Saturday's game, something certainly went awry. The Patrol apparently underestimated the size of the crowd which would pour into Chapel Hill, and it undoubtedly missed the bottleneck features of the Raleigh Road-Country Club Road intersection.

Even if the Patrol could have figured to the last man how many persons would attend Saturday's game, it might have missed on its estimate of the number of cars it would take to transport them. A car count Saturday revealed that each car coming to the game carried an average of only 2.2 persons, in contrast to the 4.1 persons carried by each car back in the big football years of the middle and late 1940's.

Meanwhile, something has to be done before October 13. That's the next home game, with Carolina meeting Georgia down at Kenan Stadium.

Chapel Hill to Play Southern Tonight

Chapel Hill High School's football team will travel to Clements Field in Durham County this evening, (Friday) looking for its third win in four tries as it takes on Southern High, which has yet to win a game. Southern High has no football field. Clements Field is at Northern High. The game which was originally scheduled for Saturday evening in the Durham Athletic Park, was changed because Chapel Hill's coach, Bob Culton, is not in favor of Saturday night games. Northern High, the site of Clements Field, is about six miles beyond Bragtown on the Roxboro Road.

This fall the Southern High team, coached by Fred Smith, changed over from the T-formation to the single wing. In its three games so far it has lost to the Oxford Orphanage, 31-6; to Hillsboro, 14-0, and to Cary, 6-0.

Chapel Hill, on the other hand, has won two games and lost one. The wins came over Selma, 27-13 and Cary, 12-0; while the loss came last week to Northern High's Knights, 19-13.

Of the Northern tussle, Coach Culton said that "In the first half we didn't play any football, and we were overconfident. However, I did like the way we came back after being down, 12-0. We lost to a good team."

Coach Culton says that you can see by the scores that "Southern is improving every game. They're bigger than our boys and are getting more accustomed to their new single wing system all the time. We'll

Chapel Hill Chaff

L. G.

George B. Cutten, former President of Colgate University now living in Chapel Hill, once attended a public dinner at which he was seated next to a woman whom he thought he recognized as a celebrated writer on etiquette. "Aren't you Emily Post?" he asked. She said yes, she was. "Well," said Mr. Cutten, "maybe you'll be interested to know that you've eaten my butter."

Postmaster Paul Cheek called me on the telephone last Friday morning and said: "I'm sorry I let you down the first night, on getting the newspapers put up in the boxes."

I had published a piece in our Friday issue, which got to many of our readers Thursday afternoon, saying that newspapers from New York and other cities in that distance range would be put up in subscribers' lockboxes henceforth on the night of the day of publication.

And so they are when they come in, as they do more often than not, on the day's last mail arriving at 7:30.

Newspapers from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and Richmond come on the Seaboard Air Line railway to Raleigh, are transferred there to a westbound Southern railway train, and are taken off at Durham and brought by truck to Chapel Hill. That's how it goes when the Seaboard runs on schedule. But sometimes it is late and misses the connection with the Southern at Raleigh. That is what happened on Thursday of last week and caused Thursday's newspapers not to get here that night.

Carrboro PTA Hears Plea for 'Love, Tolerance, Patience, and Cool Heads'

More than 200 persons attended the first meeting of the Carrboro Parent-Teacher Association Tuesday evening and heard the Rev. Henry B. Stokes make a plea for "tolerance, patience, love, and cool heads" in the face of racial tensions and integration troubles in the South.

Mr. Stokes, pastor of the Carrboro Baptist Church, opened the PTA program with a short talk on the importance of education. He asked the group to examine the question, "Are we going to have education in the future?"

"In some places in the South," he said, "maybe our children will have to do without education for a while. I hope the action we took in voting on the Pearsall Amendment is going to be a means of guaranteeing that we'll continue to have schools in every community."

(The Pearsall Amendment, approved by North Carolina voters on September 8, authorized state tuition grants to parents who object to sending their children to integrated schools, and gave local school districts the power to close schools in the face of "intolerable situations" brought about by court-ordered integration.)

"Whatever our stand on that matter," Mr. Stokes said, "I hope we'll all do everything we can to see that in our community our school never closes its doors. That would be the greatest tragedy that could happen."

Two Local Firms Are Incorporated

A second local firm incorporated this week was the Chapel Hill Poultry Farm, Inc., the principal listed stockholders of which were L. J. Phipps, Alice Oldham and Elvis Thompson. The firm is authorized, among other things, to produce eggs for hatching purposes.

Flossy Delivers Chapel Hill A Wet Taste of Her Temper

Tropical storm Flossy, leaving her hurricane force winds behind her in Florida, gave Chapel Hill a taste of her temper as she cruised up the North Carolina coastline this week.

Flossy was felt in this area, but compared to her big sister Hazel, who screamed into Chapel Hill in October, 1954, Flossy was just another wet baby. Hazel struck with feminine fury on October 15 two years ago, toppling trees and disrupting telephone and power service throughout this area.

About all that the latest storm left was a record of heavier than usual rainfall. Max Saunders, superintendent at the University filter plant, reported that nearly two and a half inches of rain fell between 8 o'clock Wednesday morning and 8 o'clock Thursday morning.

Mr. Saunders said the rain showed up on his measuring equipment for the first time on Tuesday morning. The 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. had seen 57 inches fall. In the next 24 hours, another 46 inches hit Chapel Hill. Then it really started to rain.

From 8 o'clock Wednesday morning to 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, the rain reached 1.32 inches. Another .53 inches fell between 1 p.m. and 7 p.m., and .56 inches came down between 7 p.m. and 8 o'clock Thursday morning. That made a total of 2.41 inches for the 24-hour period.

Some winds accompanied Flossy's heavy rainfall, but the strongest gusts in this area reached only 45 miles per hour, and no damage was reported.

Grey Culbreth, director of utilities for the University, said the heavy rainfall had caused a break in a new water line running from Greenwood to Ridgefield, but the trouble had been quickly corrected. The rain washed away the earth under the pipe, and the extra strain produced the break.

"Water is an old proverbial enemy of telephone lines," Mr. Culbreth told the Weekly, "and we had our usual share of trouble on that score."

"The rain will give us extra trouble with our telephone lines after an extended dry season, because the insulation on the lines dries out and cracks. When it rains, the insulation acts like a sponge and draws the water in, and we go out and start patching. Sometimes squirrels will cut holes in cables, and we won't know about it until we get a rain like the one this week." Giles Horney, superintendent of maintenance for the University, said the long rainfall had produced a few leaks in campus buildings, "but nothing like Hazel."

In Carrboro, school officials reported that the basement of the Carrboro Elementary School which was the scene of heavy flooding last year, was weathering the storm nicely after getting a complete waterproofing treatment during the summer.

Chapel Hill Police Chief W. T. Sloan said the wet weather and slick streets had caused no serious accidents in the community.

Wanted: One Gold Nugget

Wanted: One gold nugget by the Chapel Hill Exchange Club.

Exchange Club officials said yesterday that they have a man searching for a nugget which will be presented to the Boy Scout Troop having participated in the third annual Gold Rush on October 6.

The event will be held at the Philip Schinhan farm on University Lake Road, just beyond the former Roy Homewood Construction Co. site.

Sponsors of the Gold Rush are setting up nine stations through which the Scouts must pass, encountering various problems as they progress. Judging will be on the skill they demonstrate. Nuggets will be awarded at each station, and they will be cashed in at the end of the day, when prizes will be awarded for the greatest number of nuggets obtained.

Harpichordist and Violinist to Open Concert Series Here on Tuesday Night

Two internationally-known artists, Yella Pessl, harpichordist, and Mischa Mischakoff, violinist, will give a concert at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Hill Music Hall to open the Tuesday Evening Series for the fall semester. The music series is open to students and others without charge.

Tuesday's concert will mark the dedication of the Music Department's new Maendler Schramm harpichord, made according to the department's specifications by Maendler of Munich, Germany.

Miss Pessl is one of the best known of American harpichordists. She made her American debut at concerts of Schola Cantorum and the League of Composers of 1931. She was selected three times by Toscanini to appear with the N.B.C. Symphony; was in charge of programs of the Bach Circle, and has taught at the Eastman School of Music. Since 1938, she has been a faculty member of Columbia University and Barnard College.

Lewis Is Speaker At League Meet

Henry Lewis of the Institute of Government spoke at the first general meeting of the League of Women Voters Monday on the history of the United States' method of representation in government.

Because the method of representation within our own Orange County is now up for review, and perhaps for revision, this subject was extremely timely.

Mrs. William Friday emphasized this point in her talk concerning the needs behind the coming finance drive. The purpose of the league, Mrs. Friday stated, is to study government problems, and to inform its members as well as the community at large on as many matters of Government as possible.

Membership in the League is open to any woman of voting age. She may join by calling Mrs. Richmond Bond, 9-1656, or Mrs. James Ingram, 9-6666.

Mrs. Fred Cleaveland summarized the October Study, which will concern itself with the facts behind our present local school set-up, in the light of the recently passed Pearsall Amendment.

Mrs. Charles Burnett served as hostess at a delightful coffee hour following the meeting.

Soil Bank Cash

Ninety-three Orange County farmers will be paid $29,609.87 for taking 193.25 acres out of production under the government's soil bank program, according to A. K. McAdams, manager of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation office in Hillsboro. The checks are being mailed this week.

The soil bank payments are being made for tobacco acreage on 74 farms, wheat acreage on eight, and cotton acreage on 17. Total farms in the county growing tobacco are 938, wheat 700, and cotton 92.

Most of the acreage involved in the program had already been planted and had to be plowed up, according to Mr. McAdams.

Harland to Give Talk

J. P. Harland of the University's archaeology department will speak to the Young People's Service League of the Chapel Hill of the Cross at 6 p.m. Sunday in the church's parish house.
