

Smith Act Obsolete, Says Pulitzer Prize Recipient

By Helene Ivey
The Smith Act is obsolete in dealing with the U. S. Communist problem, according to the country's foremost authority on Communism in America, Fred Woltman.

A TRIP FOR GEORGIA—Miss Georgia Faison, soon to retire as the University's reference librarian, is shown receiving a $2,000 check for a European trip being given her by faculty members and students whom she has helped look up facts at the Library. Making the presentation at a party given for Miss Faison at the Graham Memorial is Professor Werner P. Friedrich, chairman of the faculty committee which raised the funds.

Faculty Members and Students Express Their Appreciation of Georgia Faison

"Let Georgia do it," has been a watchword in the academic and research set at UNC for the past quarter of a century and more.

who is now a member of the UNC faculty, said that the disintegration of Stalinism took the ground from under the American Communists. The organizations subservient to a foreign power and any designed to overthrow the U. S. by force have dissolved, so that the Smith Act is now outdated.

Mr. Woltman, who is in Chapel Hill visiting his Pittsburgh University friend, Norman Mattis, Although Mr. Woltman won the Pulitzer Prize in 1947 for his article exposing Communism, he later wrote a series of articles exposing McCarthyism and its dangers.

Writing about the job McCarthy did on the Voice of America Woltman said, "It will go down as one of the most disgraceful, scatterbrained, inept, misleading and unfair investigations in Congressional annals." He added, "It was a mighty victory for the Kremlin." It was in this vein that he wrote in his New York World Telegram pointing out that McCarthy was aiding the causes of Communism. Thus the pro-McCarthy trend began to break down.

Mr. Woltman did not feel that his opinion on the Near East situation was worth much. "I just know what I read in the Times," he said. He added that he didn't think that there would be a war simply because he felt that Russia would not push matters that far. As for the Hungarian uprising, he was surprised that it took place.

While discussing our Foreign Affairs Mr. Woltman sounded like a card-carrying Democrat. "Mr. Dulles can't be trusted. He should have known what Britain and France were doing," he said. Mr. Woltman did not mention it and few people know it unless they read Robert Ruark's book, "I Didn't Know It Was Loaded," but Mr. Woltman is apparently known as a circus reporter among his colleagues. He likes circus animals and activities and likes to write about them.

After graduating and then getting his M. A. from the University of Pittsburgh in 1928 Mr. Woltman taught philosophy there for a year. The following year he began to write for the Scripps-Howard paper, "The New York World Telegram," and has been with it ever since.

At present he just wants to round out his month of rest. It is for that reason that he came here to visit his friend, Norman Mattis.

CHAPEL HILL CHAFF

By Louis Graves

I am late in going to bed and late in getting up. That is, in my final getting-up. Often I am awake for some time between 3 and 6 o'clock and take to reading to persuade myself back to sleep. It's a pity that I don't fling on a dressing gown sometimes and, instead of seeing what's doing in the skies. By not making this choice on Wednesday night (or, to be exact, Thursday morning) of last week, I missed a beautiful sight. But, thank goodness, my neighbor, Herbert A. Ellis, was more on the alert. He sends me this letter, which I am proud to share with the Weekly's readers:

First Phase of 'Shop in Chapel Hill' Will Expire at Midnight on Sunday

Don't forget: the deadline is midnight Sunday to enter the first phase of the $1,300 "Shop in Chapel Hill" contest. And, don't forget: there's nothing to buy. All one has to do is go to one of the merchants listed below, obtain an official entry blank, and write in 100 words or less why he or she likes to shop in Chapel Hill.

Also, don't forget: the letters must be addressed to the Chapel Hill Weekly and postmarked not later than midnight Sunday.

Further, the writer of the letter adjudged to be the best will be presented a $100 U. S. savings bond. Here is the list of places one may obtain an official entry blank:

All types of warm clothing are needed, especially for children and infants. Contributors are asked to give only garments that do not need cleaning or patching.

Those who wish to contribute are asked to take the clothing to the former Institute of Government building on East Franklin Street between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. today (Friday).

This work will be continued throughout next week by the Chapel Hill Community Church assisted by other local organizations.

The High School Dance Club will hold its November party tomorrow (Saturday) from 8 p.m. until 11 p.m. at the Chapel Hill Country Club. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Roe, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Selden, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Knight, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Linker and Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Hill will be chaperones.

ing across about thirty degrees of the horizon and spreading upwards possibly forty degrees in a shape roughly fan-like. I first surmised that there was a big fire somewhere to the north of Durham, since the sky had precisely the look commonly associated with the effect of a conflagration at night. But while I watched, the glowing area seemed to shrink and change in shape until its eastern verge was a straight line perpendicular to the horizon. By this time, realizing that I was looking at the aurora borealis, which I had not seen since about 1940, I threw on a robe and went out onto the porch.

"The position of the stars at that time gave an easy reference for describing the location of the lights; for the pointers of the Big Dip-

About 40,000 Persons to See Duke - UNC Saturday

About 40,000 football fans will be here Saturday to watch heavily favored Duke play the University in Kenan Stadium. The kick-off time will be 2 p.m.

Although the University is the underdog, the Duke-Carolina game is always a hard-fought and interesting game, and, therefore, attracts fans from throughout the state, regardless of the team records.

One of the highlights of the day will be the reappearance on Kenan turf of the celebrated 1946 University team—the first that went to the Sugar Bowl. They have been invited back as guests of the University, and although some of the '46 players are scattered all over the country and globe, there are said to be about 60 acceptances, including wives, for the reunion.

The Duke and Carolina bands will put on their usual colorful half-time show, the Carolina card section has devised some special spectacular tricks, and the Victory Bell will be presented at the end of the game—all of which go to make up a very colorful, exciting and entertaining afternoon.

This year, the University team is beset with injuries as well as a record which is not as good as Duke's. But the Tar Heels have come along fast and played better on each succeeding week since the season opened. Can they do that Saturday with the team banged up the way it is is the big question.

First string quarterback Dave Reed has been hobbling around

'Football Road' Won't Be Ready

The "football road" will not be ready for the Duke-Carolina Saturday.

Inclement weather greatly delayed and frustrated hopes of the State Highway and Public Works Commission and the State Highway Patrol to have the dirt road to the Navy Field ready to remove a traffic bottleneck for the big game tomorrow.

The commission has had as many as 150 workers on the job at times and "has been doing a great job," said J. S. Bennett, University superintendent of buildings and grounds. "But it was just impossible to get the job done, with the bad weather they run into."

The road they were working on was primarily to serve N. C. Memorial Hospital from the N. C. 501 by-pass and connect with Pittsboro St. and Road at a point about 200 feet north of the entrance to Victory Village. It was to have a spur from the road into Navy Field, which would have eliminated a traffic bottleneck at N. C. Highway 51 and Country Club Road.

Will Give Papers At Clinical Meet

Two members of the faculty of the University School of Public Health will present a new procedure in the diagnosis of syphilis at the American Medical Association Clinical Conference in Seattle, Wash., next week.

The are Dr. Warfield Garson, director, Venereal Disease Experimental Laboratory and research professor and head, Department of Experimental Medicine, and Dr. Joseph Portnoy, assistant professor of experimental medicine.

on crutches, and if he throws them away by Saturday it will doubtless be for only a few spot plays. He injured his knee in the Notre Dame game, and Curt Hathaway took over. Although the sophomore quarterback played and called an excellent game, the play is more wide open with Reed in the line-up.

Senior Ed Sutton has a dislocated finger which Coach Jim Tatum doesn't think should bother him a great deal, and Wally Vale has been having trouble with his neck, but is expected to start. Mack Turlington, who turned in a good game at end last week, and center Fred Swearingen are hopeful recoveries in time to see action against Duke.

As of Wednesday, there were about 12,000 unsold tickets in the corners of the stadium and the end zones. So, it does not appear that the game will be a 44,000 person sellout.

MRS. HOPE SUMMERELL CHAMBERLAIN

'I'm Having Fun, Aren't You?'

By Nancy Suttle
There's an interesting household at 407 North Street. Mrs. Hope Summerell Chamberlain lives there. "I can't see, and I have to be pretty particular to hear," she says. About Aunt Katie Battle, "She belongs here."

And about Goldbug (the cat), "He speaks only to people he likes."

Mrs. Chamberlain, who is 86, says, "I've been around here a long while, but I've had a real good time." At one time an artist and writer, she has traveled in Europe and lived in southern France for some time. Although she stopped traveling when she settled down in Chapel Hill, and she no longer paints or writes because of her loss of sight, Mrs. Chamberlain is still having "a real good time." She is short and rather plump, with white hair cropped close to her head in little-boy fashion. And when I first saw her, she was sitting in a blue rocking chair. She held a cane in her right hand, but I realized later that she depended on it very little.

The purpose of my visit with Mrs. Chamberlain one afternoon was to read to her for a while. As a member of the Chi Omega sorority at the University I participate in a sorority service project which is to read to Mrs. Chamberlain several days during each week of the academic year.

In a short time I had learned that she knows four languages

Plan Consolidated Offices, Frat Court

The University Building Department hopes to have available in the near future rough drafts of proposed renovations of the former Institute of Government Building on East Franklin Street to house the offices of the Consolidated University.

When the rough drafts of plans are completed and approved by Consolidated officers, they will be turned over to the architectural firm of Raymond Weeks and Co. in Durham.

Too, the University now is awaiting action of fraternities on raising money for improvements of the proposed new fraternity court back of Victory Village.

The University has offered to lease the land, which would accommodate about 16 fraternities, provided they can get together and finance the improvements, such as buildings.

Faculty Club to Hear Sitterson

Professor J. Carlyle Sitterson, Dean of the University's College of Arts and Sciences, will speak on "Liberal Arts in the University of North Carolina" at a luncheon meeting of the Faculty Club at 1 p.m. Tuesday, November 27, at the Carolina Inn.

12 Churches in Yule Parade

Twelve Chapel Hill and Carrboro churches have agreed to sponsor floats in the December 16 Christmas parade. More may enter later.

They are: The Young People's Service League of the Chapel of the Cross, Chapel Hill Baptist, Aldersgate Methodist, Carrboro Methodist, Carrboro Baptist, Catholic Women's Guild, St. Paul's A.M.E. Zion, Church of the Holy Family, New Hope Presbyterian, United Congregational Christian, and First Baptist.

According to present plans, the parade will move off at 4 p.m. on December 16 from the Carrboro Elementary School, and proceed to the Morehead Planetarium parking lot.

The community sing will be held from the west steps of the Planetarium, starting about 5 p.m.

The parade, under the sponsorship of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Ministerial Association and the Junior Chamber of Commerce, will have as a theme, "Put Christ back into Christmas."

The street decorations are already being put up by Bob Rush and the lights will be turned on on Nov. 30. The Merchants Association furnished the decorations, and Miss Sarah Umstead's "Rec" girls aided in getting them ready to be put up.

Floats for the parade will be assigned by the ministers and Jaycee Committee and will all have a religious theme pertaining to Christmas.

The Rev. Maurice Kidder, president of the Ministerial Association, said that the parade will be a "motor pageant" with the theme of one float leading to the theme of the next. There will be some floats with choirs on them, singing carols that pertain to the float that follows.

The parade will include only religious scenes and will have no commercial appeal and no Santa Claus.

In all about 15 floats will be in the parade.

The parade will begin in Carrboro and end at Morehead Planetarium.

At the conclusion of the parade a community sing will be held near the Morehead Planetarium, which opened its Christmas program this week with the first presentation of "Star of Bethlehem." This is the seventh year that it has been presented by the Planetarium.

The Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association announced that stores in this area will start observing Christmas hours on Nov. 30 when they remain open until 9 p.m. The stores will remain open until 9 p.m. on Dec. 7, 14, and 17 through 21, but will observe regular hours on Christmas Eve. All stores will be closed on Christmas Day and Dec. 25.
