

The Death of Nell Battle Lewis

Nell Battle Lewis, writer of the weekly column, "Incidentally," in the News and Observer, was found dead at about 6:30 Tuesday morning, in the yard of her home in Raleigh, by a newspaper delivery boy. She had come home late in the evening and a few moments after leaving her car had suffered a heart attack. Her car keys and pocket-book were clutched in her hand.

Miss Lewis, the daughter of Dr. Richard H. Lewis, the celebrated public health pioneer, and his second wife, Mary Long Gordon Lewis of Albemarle county, Virginia, was born in Raleigh 63 years ago. She attended the Raleigh public schools and was a graduate of St. Mary's School and Smith College. At Tuesday morning, in the yard of her home in Raleigh, by a newspaper delivery boy. She had come home late in the evening and a few moments after leaving her car had suffered a heart attack. Her car keys and pocket-book were clutched in her hand.

She went to work for the News and Observer in 1921 and during her years on the paper was general reporter, society editor, feature writer, and writer of "Incidentally."

From 1922 to 1924 she was publicity director for the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare. In 1929 she was licensed

Humanities Lecture To Be Held Tuesday

Everett W. Hall, Kenan professor of philosophy at the University, is to be the Humanities Division Faculty Lecturer for the fall term. The lecture, entitled "What Is It a Philosopher Does?", is scheduled for 8 p.m. Tuesday in Room 106 Carroll Hall.

Professor Hall joined the UNC faculty in 1952, after heading the Department of Philosophy at the University of Iowa for 10 years.

Currently president of the North Carolina Philosophical Society, Mr. Hall has written two books: "What Is Value? An Essay in Philosophical Analysis" and "Science and Values: A Study in the History of Ideas," published this year.

to practice law. Her principal case was her defense of the 16 adolescent girls who were indicted for arson at Samarand. Her exposures at the trial led to the correction of bad conditions there.

She taught English at St. Mary's for several years. She was a member of the State Historical Commission, a vice-president of the State Literary and Historical Society and of the State Folklore Society, president of the Wake County League of Women Voters, and a trustee of the Olivia Raney Library and the Richard B. Harrison Library.

She is survived by a brother, Ivey F. Lewis, retired dean at the University of Virginia, and by several nephews and nieces.

Miss Lewis's weekly column reflected her striking personality. She was a gifted writer in both light and serious veins. She displayed a delightful humor in her satirical comments on people and affairs, and a genuine eloquence in her championship of the causes to which was devoted. All her writing was characterized by frankness and sincerity.

Her column, "Incidentally," will be sorely missed by thousands of North Carolinians, and I
