

CHAPEL HILL CHAFF

By Louis Graves

I stated this fact in an editorial last week: D. D. Carroll, who has been appointed chairman of the new Orange County Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, is a teetotaler. Whether or not his colleagues on the board, Remus J. Smith of Hillsboro and G. M. Long of Cedar Grove, are also teetotalers I don't know, but their published biographies show them, as well as Mr. Carroll, to be devoted—churchmen. Thus the make-up of the board justifies us in expecting conscientious enforcement of the law. However, the public needn't fear that piety will be overemphasized in the management of the liquor stores. I have it on good authority that there is no intention on the part of the board to have the stores opened every day with prayer.

When K. B. Cole was in the Bank of Chapel Hill one day last week and a teller was writing down his name, he said:

"I've got royal blood in my veins — I'm a descendant of Old King Cole. But that's not all — one of my grandfathers was named Stuart and they tell me I'm descended from Mary Stuart, the Queen."

The way I happen to know about this was that Mr. Cole telephoned me to ask about an incident in the career of Mary Queen of Scots. I looked in a book to confirm what I thought I remembered about this bit of history and gave him the answer. This led us into a little talk. (Continued on Page 2)

James King Joins Faculty of U.N.C.

Dr. James B. King of Pittsboro has joined the faculty of the UNC School of Dentistry as clinical instructor in the Department of Pedodontics. He will also continue his practice in Pittsboro.

A native of Lonsburg, Dr. King received his A.B. degree from UNC and his dental degree from the University of Pennsylvania. He spent two years in the Army Dental Corps in Germany and has been in Pittsboro—three and a half years. He is married and has one son.

"Snow Make-Up Day"

Because of a teacher's convention in Asheville on March 21, the Chapel Hill schools will have their next "snow make-up day" Saturday, March 14. Other make-up days will be April 4 and June 6.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN MOTLEY MOREHEAD

University Benefactor Is Here To Make Scholarship Awards

By Pete Ivey
Mr. and Mrs. John Motley Morehead arrived here by plane yesterday from Rye, N. Y., and will preside over a series of functions here the rest of the week, culminating in the announcement of the annual Morehead Scholarship awards Saturday. They are staying at the Carolina Inn. Mr. Morehead will personally announce the winners at 7:30 p.m. Saturday over WUNC-TV, Channel 4, the University's educational television station. Sixty-four young men are now on the campus being interviewed in final screenings. Of that number, 42 are from North Carolina high schools. The other 22 are from preparatory schools along the Atlantic seaboard and from New England. Roy Armstrong, executive secretary of the Morehead Foundation, said the head administrators of six new preparatory schools in the Morehead program will be present. These are Don Gaebelein of Westminster School, Atlanta, Ga.; Russ Miller of Deerfield Academy; Greenville Benedict of Andover; Larry Noble of Groton; Herrick Macomber of Phillips-Exter; John Davis of St. Albans. Mr. Morehead has awarded scholarships in the program here since 1951, with 178 scholarship awards. The scholarships are worth $1,250 yearly, or $5,000 for four years. The scholars are carefully selected, with scholarship and leadership factors predominant. Need is not considered. Mr. Morehead is seeking "tall timber" among potential University scholars.

Azaleas And Kleenex To Be Sold By Jaycees

The Chapel Hill Jaycees will hold their annual fund-raising drive for their community projects throughout next week, from March 2 to March 7.

They have been selling advertisements for Monday broadcasts over WCHL and will handle the ads on the air that day. Between 6:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday they will conduct a house to house sale of Kleenex.

On Friday and Saturday they will stage an azalea sale at Fowler's Food Store and at the Glen Lennox Shopping Center. The proceeds of the week's activities will be used by the Jaycees for the work they do for the benefit of the community. Everybody is urged to cooperate with them in their Kleenex and azalea sale.

Henderson Honored At Film Showing

Archibald Henderson was guest of honor one evening last week in Durham at the showing of a motion picture which is sponsored for Teaching Film Custodians of New York. It was the second act of "The Doctor's Dilemma" by George Bernard Shaw.

Mr. Henderson was chosen as sponsor because of being Shaw's official biographer and intimate friend and the foremost authority on the great dramatist's career. He organized and is a former president of the Shaw Society of America. In the "Teaching Guide" issued by the Teaching Film Custodians the Henderson biographies of Shaw are cited as the chief historical source for the film.

64 Young Men Being Interviewed Here For Morehead Scholarships

Sixty-four young men — 42 of them seniors in North Carolina high schools and 22 in top preparatory schools arrived on the University campus this week to be interviewed for Morehead Scholarships. Fetzer, resident secretary of the Morehead Foundation; Prof. S. S. Jones, Craig professor of political science; Fred Weaver, dean of student affairs; Claude E. Teague, business manager, emeritus, of the University at Chapel Hill; William D. Carmichael Jr., vice president and finance officer of the Consolidated University.

William Harris Nelson of Spray, secretary-treasurer of the Morehead Cotton Mills Company, is on the committee. An eighth member, Kenan Prof. William S. Wells of the UNC English Department is not participating this year. Serving with Chairman Morehead on the trustees board are John L. Morehead of Charlotte, his cousin, who is president of Leaksville Woolen Mills; Hugh G. Chatham of Elkin, president of Chatham Manufacturing Co.; Norman A. Coker of Charlotte, president of Duke Power Co.; and Robert M. Hanes of Winston-Salem, director of Wachovia Bank & Trust Co.

Each student who qualifies for a scholarship will receive $1,250 yearly or a total of $5,000 during his academic career at the University of North Carolina. Screening of applicants was held throughout the state during late January with seven district committees selecting six nominees each to come to Chapel Hill. The prep school students were nominated by their headmasters. The Central Committee interviewed 12 junior college nominees on Saturday, Feb. 21, and any students approved by this group will go before the Morehead Foundation trustees on Saturday, Feb. 28. Colleges represented were Mars Hill, Lees-McRae, Campbell, Charlotte, Wingate, Presbyterian Junior, and Chowan.

Thirty scholarships were awarded last spring to high school seniors, making a total of 179 recipients since the program was begun in 1951. The Foundation's scholarship fund is valued at approximately $3,000,000. Six more private preparatory schools in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Georgia and Washington, D. C. were added to the "eligibility list" this year. Previously participating were two private schools in Tennessee, three in Virginia, and North Carolina's Asheville School for Boys and Christ School at Arden.

Prof. C. P. Spruill, professor of economics, is chairman of the Central Committee, which includes these Chapel Hillians: Robert A.

Christian Science Services will be held at 11 a.m. this Sunday in 2 Carroll Hall. The lesson-sermon, entitled "Christ Jesus," will deal with the value (for today's world) of the works and words of Christ. Sunday school will convene at 9:30 a.m.

Shopping Centers Hot Topic

Shall giant regional shopping centers involving a minimum of 25 acres of land become part of the Chapel Hill environs picture or shall this community retain its relatively small uptown business district plus the previously designated five neighborhood shopping centers (one on the Durham highway in the vicinity of the WCHL Radio Station, one on the Airport Road in the Ranch House vicinity, one at Glen Lennox, one at the intersection of Pittsboro Street and the By-pass 54, and one northwest of the town at the intersection of the New By-pass 54 and the old Highway 54)? That question at a public hearing before the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen and the Planning Board of Chapel Hill and Environs became a bitter verbal battle last Monday evening. The issue was referred back to the Planning Board for further consideration.

The Planning Board had recommended an amendment to the zoning ordinance permitting such regional shopping centers. Thus the B. K. and R. Rentals Company, Inc., last August announced plans for a highway shopping center at the intersection of the Durham Road and the U. S. Highway By-pass 15-501 (at the radio station). This land had previously been rezoned for Business.

The Homes Security Company of Raleigh has announced that it was ready to make application to have Conner Ridge (land not far toward Chapel Hill from the B. K. and R. Rentals Company's land) rezoned from Residential to Regional Shopping Center District, should the amendment create such a district.

In angry tones Ralph Strayhorn, attorney for the B. K. and R. Rentals Company, Inc., said that the competition of a regional shopping center so near the "highway shopping center" that his clients plan to build would be ruinous. Like the famous UNC football lineman (Continued on Page 6)

HIS DEATH ENDS AN ERA — The book was closed on an era of Chapel Hill history yesterday when Fred H. Sparrow died at the age of 93. He had lived here practically all his life, and his memories went back to the village of the early post-Civil War days. This picture of him was made by his grandson, Bill Sparrow, proprietor of the Town and Country photographic studio here.

Fred H. Sparrow Dies After His 93rd Birthday

Fred Hudson Sparrow, believed to be Chapel Hill's oldest resident, died yesterday at his home on Windy Hill. Only recently he had celebrated his 93rd birthday. He was born in this area and spent his entire life here.

A handsome patriarch with striking blue eyes and an impressive white moustache, Mr. Sparrow was a familiar figure to present-day Chapel Hillians as he took his walks about the village or sat on the wide porch of his rambling old frame house at 407 Hillsboro Street. He had lived there since 1914, in recent years with his daughter, Mrs. George Stewart. His wife died several years ago. Mr. Sparrow owned much land between Windy Hill and Mount Bolus and the Airport Road. For many years he operated a dairy there, with his barnyard and milk facilities at his home at the top of the hill. The big field at the foot of the hill beside Bolin Creek is still known as Sparrow's pasture. In the old days Mr. Sparrow also operated a grist mill and a cotton gin there.

Survivors include three daughters, Mrs. Charlie Martindale, Mrs. Paul Sparrow, and Mrs. Stewart, all of Chapel Hill; four sons, Sam J. Sparrow and Fred A. Sparrow of Chapel Hill; John A. Sparrow of Route 1, and Ernest Sparrow of Durham; 24 grandchildren, and 31 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted at 2:30 p.m. today at the Orange Methodist Church by the Rev. J. C. Alexander, the Rev. Charles E. Maddy, and the Rev. A. M. Fisher. Interment was in the church cemetery.

The main trouble appears to be that the North Carolina budget makers don't know what a university is.

The movement among trustees and others to have the missing items restored in the University of North Carolina budget is predicated on an assumption that members of the N. C. Advisory Budget Commission have failed to recognize what is required to maintain a modern state university.

In short, they don't know the difference between a college and a university.

That is the talk going the rounds in Chapel Hill ever since the budget recommendations were analyzed, culminating in a formal presentation to the trustees last Monday.

Faculty members, students and others here are planning a careful campaign to make the members of the Legislature aware of the actual needs of UNC, if standards of quality are to be maintained.

Fundamental in the approach is the "educational" nature of the effort—to let the assembly know the special differences between a college and a university.

The reason it is necessary to make that delineation, it is stated by some faculty here, is that the budgeteers have indicated that the faculty-student ratio, or the teaching work loads that faculty members should undertake, is the same for all tax-supported institutions in the state—without regard to the kind of institution. That is, the (Continued on Page 12)

WAITING FOR THE WEATHER — The machines shown above will go into action grading the premises of the Eastgate Shopping Center at the intersection of the Durham Road and the U. S. Highway 15-501 By-pass as soon as the weather permits. The B. K. and R. Rentals Company, Inc., has obtained a $800,000 building permit to construct buildings containing 81,000 square feet of floor space under plans that eventually call for more than 111,000 square feet.

$800,000 Building Permit Issued For Prososed Eastgate Shopping Center

The new shopping center to be built near Chapel Hill augurs the population and progress growth of the University town and the Research Triangle, it was divulged here today in announcement of details of what is to be built here during 1959.

The A & P supermarket in the "Eastgate Shopping Center" where the Chapel Hill-Durham road intersects the Highway 15-501 by-pass will be equal in size to the largest A & P supermarket in the state now, the A & P store in Greensboro.

A permit for the shopping center was secured here, indicating a cost of $800,000 for the stores and other facilities to be operated by the B. K. and R. Rentals Company, Inc.,

All Singers Are Invited To Join The Choral Club

Everybody who likes to sing is invited to join the Chapel Hill Choral Club, which is now rehearsing for its Commencement performance of Handel's "Alexander's Feast." Such persons may join by attending its next rehearsal session at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Hill Hall. There are no dues and no auditions.

The club is composed of from 50 to 100 persons and has been a significant part of the community's cultural life for more than 30 years. It is open to all singers in the Chapel Hill area, whether or not they are connected with the University.

The club's Commencement concert is its major annual performance. This year it will be given on May 31. Rehearsals began two weeks ago and are being held at 7:30 p.m. every Monday in Hill Hall.
