Most dogs hate to be left at home alone. One who has solved this problem nicely is Woo, a cocker spaniel belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Stancell, both of whom work.

The Stancell hacienda overlooks the second fairway of the Country Club's Lawson golf course. As soon as Mr. and Mrs. Stancell leave for the day Woo goes to the golf course to look for Jasper Minor, one of the two Negro workmen who take care of the course. He spends the rest of the day with him.

Dog and man go about the day's work together. If Jasper is mowing, Woo trots beside him, taking off now and then for brief explorations of the rough. Even then, he hardly permits Jasper to get out of his sight.

When Jasper stops to trim a green or cut a new hole and change the location of the pin, Woo lies down to watch the operation. The pause he likes best is the lunch break. Jasper brings his own sandwiches and he always has something for Woo. At such a time Woo doesn't object to the presence of Melvin Farrington, the other workman. But Jasper is his buddy.

Quitting time doesn't seem to bother Woo. He watches Jasper out of sight and then beelines it for home. Everything's all right now. His folks will be there when he arrives.

Traffic Accident, Shooting Reported

One traffic accident and a neighborhood shooting squabble marred an otherwise quiet Labor Day weekend in Chapel Hill. But both incidents occurred outside the town limits.

James L. Williams, 18, was charged with careless and reckless driving and driving without lights following the accident on Merritt Mill Road Saturday night.

The Williams boy was driving a borrowed car which smashed into a parked car in the yard of Mrs. Gladys Fikes. The driver was injured slightly, and both cars were damaged heavily.

Police reported that the Williams boy had run a stop sign on South Graham Street and when officers attempted to stop him he raced off in the borrowed 1955 Ford. After he cut out his lights to evade officers, he lost control of the car on a curve near Lincoln High School and hurdled onto a car parked PRESBYTERIANS AT HOME—Members of the Presbyterian congregation are shown leaving the worship service held yesterday morning in their new Student Center. It was the first service held on their own property since their church burned 18 months ago. The Student Center faces Henderson Street. To take this picture, the photographer stood on the back lawn of the Post Office.

Presbyterians Open Services Held For Mrs. Ullman

A house doesn't make a home but it helps, the Rev. Vance Barron told the members of his congregation yesterday morning in their new Fellowship Hall at the first service the Presbyterians had attended on their own property since their church burned 18 months ago.

Since then, Sunday services had been conducted in Carroll Hall on the University campus. Sunday school, which opened yesterday in another part of the new building, had been held in the Franklin Street Elementary School and elsewhere. In his sermon Mr. Barron thanked UNC and the school for their hospitality but added that it was good to be at home again.

The Fellowship Hall, packed for yesterday's service, is on the ground floor of the church's new Student Center, which faces Henderson Street. Sunday school was held in the new educational wing, which joins the Student Center at the latter's northeast corner and faces Rosemary Street. The two buildings were completed this month at a cost of about $375,000. The new sanctuary, to cost about a half million, will adjoin these facilities and will face Franklin Street, as did the church that burned. It will seat 700. Work on it will begin this fall and is expected to be completed by late 1960. Till then, two services will be held every Sunday morning in the Fellowship Hall at 9 and 11 o'clock.

In his sermon yesterday Mr. Barron assessed the church's wisdom in making such an investment in buildings. He said the buildings are a means to an end that justifies the expenditure.

No Arrests Made Yet

Safecracker Hits Gas Station

In Carrboro For $815 In Cash

A 200-pound safe containing about $815 and valuable papers was stolen during a break-in early Friday morning at Elmer Pendergraft's service station at the west end of Franklin Street. The robbery is believed to be the work of three unidentified Negro men who were seen running from the service station at about 12:30 a.m. Friday. A man who lives near the station said he saw three Negro men drive off at high speed along Merritt Mill Road. The men were reportedly driving an old model Plymouth car and a later model Chevrolet pickup truck. Carrboro Police Chief J. A. Williams and SBI agent Charles Whitman of Raleigh are investigating the robbery. No arrests have been made. Mr. Pendergraft has offered a reward of $50 for the return of the valuable papers, which included deeds and titles and various insurance papers. He said about half of the stolen money was covered by insurance. Part of the money belonged to Scott Coal and Oil Co. Mr. Pendergraft said the thieves cut through two strands of barbed wire and entered the building through a window in the alley between the service station and the Chapel Hill Ice Co. He said he is inclined to think the robbery is connected with a series of break-ins which have been made recently at Hi-Way Service Station about a block away. But Chief Williams and Mr. Whitman have indicated that the break-in was the work of professionals and is not connected with the previous robberies. Friday's robbery is the second one at the service station since about a year ago, when thieves carted off a dozen new tires. No arrests were made in connection with that robbery. Mr. Pendergraft said yesterday that last week's break-in emphasizes the need for a night policeman in Carrboro. He said he will ask the Carrboro Board of Commissioners to hire another policeman for night duty. "We could stop a lot of these break-ins," he said, "if we had a night policeman. It's a shame we don't have one already. The men we have now are doing a good job, but they just aren't enough."

Term Starts Tomorrow

Record Enrollment Expected In Chapel Hill Area Schools

Grade School Population Exceeds 2,000

School bells will ring again tomorrow, ending the summer vacations of an estimated 3,425 students in the Chapel Hill school system.

Students in all schools will report at 8:30 a.m. for brief orientation and assignment, and are expected to be released within two hours. The first full day of classes will begin at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday.

For some students the 1959 term will mean new classrooms and some new faces—among their teachers as well as their fellow students. For ninth graders it will mean another year in junior high school instead of the long-awaited advancement to senior high.

And for some unfortunate students the new year will mean attending classes in sub-standard or temporary classrooms. That was the worst last week from Supt. Joseph M. Johnston after pre-school registration figures were tallied.

Mr. Johnston said enrollment in five elementary schools and the two high schools will be heavier by nearly 500 students than were enrolled here last year.

Actually there were 598 new students registered for the fall term, but 122 students were graduated last spring, which left an enrollment of 476 as of last week.

However, the new registrations were at least 100 more than school officials had expected. Mr. Johnston said summer registrations were the heaviest here in several years.

Because of the large influx of new elementary students, Mr. Johnston said classroom space problems will make it necessary to assign some students to schools outside their regular attendance areas.

He said the influx is spread rather generally over the entire school system, but Glenwood and Estes Hills appear to be getting more of the new students than the Franklin Street and Carboro elementary schools.

Mr. Johnston attributed the influx equally to the University's growth and to the development of the Research Triangle. He said most of the new students are from families of temporary residence, but many of them are children of permanent residents.

High school enrollment this year will total about 600, junior high enrollment is expected to be about 700, and more than 2,000 students are expected to be enrolled in elementary schools, according to Mr. Johnston's estimates.

PREPARATIONS—Buck Beal, maintenance superintendent of the city schools, and janitors Thomas Morrow and Clarence McCauley, carry armfuls of books to shelves in the Franklin Street Elementary School Sunday as Schools Superintendent Joseph M. Johnston directs preparations for the opening of the town's six schools tomorrow morning.

Here Is Schedule Of Fees, Activities

A schedule of fees and activities for the fall school term was released today by School Supt. Joseph M. Johnston.

The fall term begins Tuesday, and all students will report to their respective schools at 8:30 a.m. This first day has been set aside by the State Department of Education for the purpose of completing administrative matters connected with the opening of school.

Elementary students will be dismissed at 10 a.m. and junior and senior high school students will be released at 10:30 a.m.

The first regular day of instruction will be on Wednesday, when all students will follow their regular schedule. Lunch will be served in all cafeterias. The book and supply fee for grades 1-6 will be $5 per student. Other fees include:

Chapel Hill High School—Book fee $7.50, home economics $2.50, agriculture shop $3.50, chemistry $2.50, physics $1, biology $2.50, typing $10, bookkeeping $2.50, senior science $2.50 and locker rent 25 cents.

Chapel Hill Junior High School—Book fee for grades 7 and 8 will be $5, book fee for ninth grade $7.50, general science $1, home economics $2.50 and agriculture $3.25. Lincoln High School—Book fee for seventh and eighth grades $5, book fee for ninth through 12th grades $7.50, band $9, biology $1, chemistry $1, home economics $2, physics $1, physical education $3, typing $5 and vocational agriculture $2.

Other information released by Mr. Johnston:

Insurance: The Chapel Hill Schools are once again offering a voluntary plan of accident insurance. The program this year will be underwritten by Mutual of Omaha and will be available to those who desire it at a premium of $2 per student per year. Further information about the coverage and the payment of the premium will be distributed to all students on the first day of school. Premiums will not be due the first day and should not be sent or taken to the schools.

Cafeterias: The cafeterias in the Chapel Hill Schools will be operated during the coming school year on the same basis as the past. A plate lunch will be served for 25 cents. As noted above, the cafeterias will begin operation on Wednesday, Sept. 9. Instruction will be given on

UNC Enrollment To Hit New High

An all-time high in enrollment is expected at the University here when it opens for its 109th year in mid-September. The previous top in the numbers of students came eleven years ago when World War II veterans flocked to the University—the 1948 enrollment was 7,603. That number will be exceeded this year, according to estimates here.

This largest enrollment will find the University's accommodations set for unprecedented demands—in academic instructional staff, in library facilities, in other classroom and laboratory apparatus, in housing and in total care of students.

The demands on the University's housing facilities will be strong, but will be met, it was stated by James E. Wadsworth, housing manager of the University. There are 30 dormitories in which an anticipated 4,201 students will be housed. Fraternity and sorority houses have space for an estimated 900 other students. The University has 365 housing units for married students in Victory Village. An additional 200 apartment units for married students are being constructed, with 16 of them to be available in September, and the others ready by March, 1960. Other students will live in homes and apartments in Chapel Hill, or commute from nearby towns.

Rally Planned Friday

Orange County Young Democrats Elect Jim Taylor New President

Jim Taylor of Hillsboro was elected president of the Orange County Young Democrats Club Thursday night, succeeding Chapel Hill attorney Charles Hodson.

Mr. Taylor, an employee of a Durham piano company, will assume the presidency Jan. 1, along with other officers.

Miss Ruth Privette of Hillsboro was elected first vice president, and Chapel Hill attorney Robert Cooper was named second vice president. Attorney Jack Lasley, also of Chapel Hill, was re-elected secretary-treasurer of the club.

Following the election of officers, the club passed a resolution supporting the campaign of Mr. Hodson for national YDC committeeman.

The resolution provides that all club members attending the YDC state convention in Asheville Oct. 1-13 will be voting delegates. The delegation will be uninstructed on convention voting except in the committee race in which Mr. Hodson seeks a seat.

Also at the Thursday meeting, the county group laid plans for the YDC rally which will begin at 6:30 p.m. Friday at the Hillsboro Exchange Club Park on old Highway 86, south of Hillsboro.

Mr. Hodson said the club hopes to have Rep. Carl Durham and Sen. B. Everett Jordan as guests at the rally. The county's senior Democratic party will be represented by Judge L. J. Phipps of Chapel Hill.

Democrats from all surrounding counties have been invited to attend the informal rally, which will be an old-fashioned weiner roast.
