County Democrats Turn Out In Record Number For Vote

A record turnout of more than 8,000 Democrats and Republicans voted throughout the county Saturday on campaign issues of segregation and education.

The previous record for a primary vote in the county was in 1950 in the Frank Graham-Willis Smith race for U. S. Senate.

Statewide winner Terry Sanford carried every precinct in Chapel Hill and five rural precincts to establish himself as the county's favorite in the gubernatorial race.

Mr. Sanford polled 3,060 votes throughout the county—well over half of them in the five Chapel Hill precincts.

But segregationist candidate Beverly Lake trailed Mr. Sanford by only 570 votes. He ran up a total of 2,490 votes in the 21 precincts and carried 11 precincts.

Although the majority of his votes came from Carrboro and the three Hillsboro precincts, plus some rural areas, he also had a surprising strength in Chapel Hill.

The five Chapel Hill precincts gave him 451 votes—98 more than he received in Carrboro and 66 more than he received in his strongest precinct, West Hillsboro.

His support in Chapel Hill appeared evenly spread among the five precincts—from 81 votes in Precinct One to 102 in Precinct Four.

Candidate Malcom Seawell failed to carry a single precinct in the county, but fairly heavy support in Chapel Hill and a smattering of votes elsewhere in the county gave him 1,446 votes and third place in the county voting. He was clearly the second choice among Chapel Hill voters, but consistently remained in that position.

Fourth choice for governor among Orange County voters was John Larkins, who polled 710 votes. He, too, failed to carry a single precinct in the county, but he was the second choice behind Mr. Lake in two of the three Hillsboro precincts.

Even in the rural precincts where he did not get the highest vote, Mr. Sanford polled a good share of the votes. His best total in any one precinct was White Cross, where he received 32 of the 177 ballots cast.

Next to the governor's race and the Congressional seat at stake, Orange County voters showed the keenest interest in the Senatorial race among all the non-local offices to be decided.

Incumbent Sen. B. Everett Jordan swept all but two precincts in his bid for election to his first full term in the Senate to which he was appointed by Gov. Hodges two years ago.

Challenger Addison Hewlett carried only the small Cedar Grove precinct, by a margin of 20 votes. The two candidates polled 50 votes each in Cole's Store precinct.

Sen. Jordan had a total county vote of 4,415 votes and Mr. Hewlett polled 2,902 votes.

The two other candidates for the Senate polled about 600 votes between them.

Second Primary Unnecessary Stanford, Bennett Win Nomination To County Board Of Commissioners

Wilson Is Third, Schinhan Fourth

Incumbent Donald Stanford and first-time candidate Harvey Bennett piled up clear majorities Saturday in the four-way contest to select two Democratic candidates to the Board of County Commissioners.

Mr. Stanford led the ticket with 4,051 votes. Mr. Bennett was close behind him with 4,019 votes.

Their majorities thus ruled out the possibility of a second primary to decide the party's choices. They will face Republican candidates Louis W. Sparrow and M. J. Walker in the November election.

Third man in the four-way race was Hugh Wilson, who polled 3,408 votes—just short of the required 3,521 votes needed for a majority.

Phil Schinhan, the fourth man in the race, polled 2,602 votes. Mr. Stanford and Mr. Bennett obviously found strong support throughout the county—both in the rural and urban precincts. But Mr. Schinhan got most of his support from the Chapel Hill voting and Mr. Wilson was a heavy favorite in the small rural precincts.

Mr. Bennett carried Precincts One and Four in Chapel Hill plus the Carrboro Precinct and two rural precincts, Mr. Stanford carried Precincts Two, Three and Five, and Mr. Wilson received the highest precinct totals in all other precincts, with his heaviest support coming from the three Hillsboro precincts.

The commissioner race was considered one of the chief factors in the record turnout of 7,966 Democratic voters, but the 14,080 total ballots cast for commissioner candidates is 1,732 fewer than could have been cast.

One reason for the difference in vote totals could be the result of "single shot" voting, in which the voter casts only one of the two votes (in this race) to which he is entitled—either because of disinterest, unfamiliarity with candidates, or the hope of piling up a higher vote for one candidate by detracting a vote from another.

To avoid a run-off primary two candidates each had to get one-fourth of the total number of ballots cast, or 3,520 plus one vote. Mr. Stanford and Mr. Bennett both received majorities well before the final precincts reported.

Mr. Stanford, who operates a dairy farm in the White Cross area, was nominated for his second four-year term on the board. He was first elected four years ago at the age of 30 and was one of the youngest commissioners ever to sit on the board.

Correction

The report of the school board's action on next year's attendance areas, which appeared in Thursday's edition of the Weekly, erroneously stated that Ridgefield children would be assigned to Estes Hills school next year.

School Supt. Joseph M. Johnston has pointed out that Ridgefield children will continue to attend Glenwood School.

Orange Voters Go For Murdock By Two-To-One

Orange County voters gave better than a two-to-one majority Saturday to District Solicitor William H. Murdock as the man they wanted to succeed retiring Rep. Carl T. Durham in Congress.

But Mr. Murdock's majority here and in two other counties in the Sixth Congressional District weren't enough to beat the heavy metropolitan vote in the Greensboro-High Point area.

As a result, Horace Kornegay of Greensboro, who is also a superior court solicitor, will carry the Democratic standard in the November elections. He will be opposed by Col. Holland R. Robb of Chapel Hill, the GOP candidate.

Mr. Kornegay's solid support in his home county, plus good percentages in Orange and Alamance, gave him a lead of about 4,000 votes throughout the district.

The Orange County totals were 5,636 for Mr. Murdock and 2,480 for Mr. Kornegay.

Although he failed to carry a single precinct in the county, Mr. Kornegay did make a fair showing in the Chapel Hill precincts. Precincts Three and Five gave him the highest percentages. Generally he trailed far behind Mr. Murdock in the rural precincts.

In the five Chapel Hill precincts, Mr. Kornegay polled 1,568 votes to 1,961 for Mr. Murdock. In Carrboro he received 150 votes to 515 for Mr. Murdock.

Improvements Suggested For Jr. High Curriculum

Tentative recommendations for improving science, mathematics and foreign language studies at the junior high school level were submitted last week by sub-committees making the junior high curriculum study.

The recommendations were included in the preliminary reports following two months of study.

Final recommendations will be presented by the seven-sub-committees Nov. 2 for subsequent consideration by the Citizens Committee for Chapel Hill Schools.

On the basis of these reports the citizens committee then will make its recommendations to the Board of Education.

The committee on foreign languages recommended that at least one foreign language be required beginning in the seventh grade which would form the intermediate stage of a continuous and permanent program of foreign language extending from the fifth grade through high school.

The committee suggested that foreign language instruction prior to the seventh grade be conducted on a "no-textbook" basis.

At the junior high level, the committee suggested, more than one foreign language should be made available to the student—one of which should be Latin.

In the field of science instruction, another committee report noted: "We doubt the value of general science as an independent subject, while recognizing the desire and necessity to survey 'science in general.' If general science as presently conceived is preserved we believe it would have more value in elementary grades, or as a survey course for the slow or disinterested student."

The report also noted that the committee examined currently adopted texts with some care and "we are distressed and disturbed by the many errors, the lack of rigor, and failure to develop fundamentals. We suggest that developed opinions on these texts be submitted to the State Textbook Commission. We would also suggest that a multiple-adoption policy be encouraged."

The committee on mathematics curriculum reported itself in agreement that it is "particularly important that greater substance and interest be given to the mathematics of grades seven and eight . . . to think of grades seven and eight not as the end of elementary school mathematics but rather as a foundation for work of the senior high school. The curriculum for these grades should include a sound intuitive basis for the algebra and geometry courses to follow."

10 CHHS Students Presented Awards

Ten students at Chapel Hill High School were singled out Thursday for athletic and scholastic excellence during the year.

Scholar and athlete Dave Henry capped his high school career with two additional awards to numerous other awards he has received previously.

He was presented the E. Carrington Smith award as the most outstanding senior athlete and the Jack E. Hunt sportsmanship award presented by Percy Quinlan.

The awards were made by Coach Bob Culton during the school's awards assembly Thursday morning.

Dave was selected for the Smith award by members of the senior class. The entire student body voted him the outstanding sportsmanship winner.

Previously he had been selected as the most outstanding football player and co-winner of the most outstanding track winner. He was all-conference in football and basketball and captain of the baseball, football and basketball teams during his four-year career.

He will enroll at the University in the fall as a Morehead Scholar.

Three trophies were presented to members of the girls basketball team. Sue Ham won the sportsmanship award, Joanne Lloyd received the most outstanding senior award, and Dawn Culton was named the most valuable player.

Lena Burch received the home economics award, and Vernon Davis, Warren Atwater and Carl Lloyd received the agriculture and shop awards.

Joe Straley was recognized for the Westinghouse award and as winner of the high school math contest.

Gail Ford was presented the Teenager of the Year award by Bob Cox of the Chapel Hill Jaycees. And Charo Garcigoy was presented a class ring from the school.

In the publications field, the new 1960 Hillife was dedicated to Miss Ola Andrews, and Susan Doak and Judy Winston, co-editors of the Proconian, received bound editions of their year's publications.

Chapel Hill
CHAFF
By Joe Jones

Taylor Greene, veteran Chapel Hill barber, has seen many changes in barber shop customs but none more pronounced than in the attitude of parents toward the treatment of small children in the barber chair.

"A shop I worked in years ago," Mr. Greene said, "had a barber with an unusually big strong hand. When a youngster wouldn't stay still he clamped that big hand over the top of the kid's head and it might as well have been in a vise. No matter how much yelling and squirming, he calmly went on with the haircut till it was finished. And I've seen more than one barber put a headlock on a troublesome youngster. Just clamp his head under one arm and keep cutting, no matter how much he hollered and kicked."

Mr. Greene says these methods have gone out. Most parents won't stand for that kind of stuff any more. Sometimes if the youngster even so much as cries they take him out of the chair and say they'll bring him back and try again later. It can be a real problem if the process is repeated and the little boy's hair keeps getting longer and longer while they wait for him to decide to submit.

Mr. Greene added there are still a few parents who believe in meeting force with force. Especially fathers.

"Once in a while," he said, "a man will come in and put his little boy in the chair and say, 'He's going to yell, but cut his hair, anyway. Hold him if you have to, but cut his hair.'"

Herbert Hechenbleikner, UNC graduate of 1931 and head of Charlotte College's science department, reported on his two fabulously old timber rattlers when he was here last week.

He said one of the captive snakes is now twenty years old and the other is twenty-one. The record for rattlesnake longevity, he added, is believed to be the twenty-one years and eight months attained by a specimen that used to be in the State Museum in Raleigh. He sees no reason why this record shouldn't be broken by his 21-year-old snake, which is apparently in perfect health.

Mr. Hechenbleikner says rat-

Nominations Still Open Fathers Of Year Named By Clubs

Six men from local civic clubs have been selected to represent their clubs in this year's Father of the Year activities which are sponsored by the Merchants Association.

These six will join three outstanding Fathers of the Year as honorees in a week-long program which will begin June 11 and continue until Father's Day, June 19.

The civic club fathers and the categories for which they were selected are J. Minor Gwynn, Citizen oldest father; George Poe, Exchange youngest grandfather; Sol Ellis, Jaycee youngest father; Baldy Williams, Kiwanis father with the most boys; Hubert Farrel, Sertoma father with the most children; and Erwin Langley, Optimist father who has the oldest son.

Two other civic clubs, Rotary and Lions, did not select a representative to the annual project this year.

The three outstanding Fathers of the Year, representing the Chapel Hill, Carrboro and University communities, will be selected after this week by a secret committee from the Merchants Association.

Nominations for the three honored positions can be submitted until the Wednesday deadline on nomination blanks available at most business establishments in town.
