Carrboro Bigger By Four Acres

Carrboro is bigger. For the first time since its incorporation about fifty years ago, the Town of Carrboro annexed territory—4.1 acres of land owned by W. T. Durham adjoining the western boundary of the town.

The annexation was made official last Thursday night at a meeting of the Carrboro Commissioners. Having been presented with an accurate survey of the Durham property, the Commissioners voted the land into the town unanimously.

Town Clerk R. B. Todd said yesterday that Mr. Durham, who has been working hard for several weeks to have his land annexed, will now apply for a rezoning of the land to permit its use as a mobile trailer court.

Of Mr. Durham's total tract, about ten acres, the bulk was already inside Carrboro. Rezoning to permit the land's use as a trailer court could not be effected by the Town of Carrboro until the Town had jurisdiction over the whole plot; hence the annexation.

The land is bordered on the east by the old Carrboro line, on the west by Barnes Street, on the south by King Street, and on the north by another property owner.

Also at Thursday's meeting the Commissioners agreed to rearrange their financing of the recently completed Town Hall Two Town Hall notes of $30,000 and $35,000 were renewed for three months, and agreement was reached to sell another $15,000 in bonds on January 10, to come due April 25. On March 28, $80,000 in bonds will be sold to pay for all outstanding notes, which will come due April 25.

The Carrboro Town Hall now has an official driver's license examiner on duty there from 8:30 to 5:30 every weekday except Saturday.

Mr. Todd also reported that taxes may be listed at the Town Hall on Tuesdays and Fridays, beginning January 3 and continuing through January.

The Carrboro Fire Department is now located in its new quarters adjoining the Town Hall, but the Police Department is still located in the old Town Hall pending completion of its new suite of offices and jail next to the new Fire Department.

Southern College Enrollment Will Double—Folsom

Double enrollments in schools and colleges of North Carolina and the rest of the South by 1970, and triple enrollment by 1980 were predicted here yesterday by Marion B. Folsom, former U. S. Secretary of Health Education and Welfare.

Folsom was at the University to visit his son, Marion B. Folsom, Jr., a graduate student and instructor at UNC. He conferred with President William C. Friday, Chancellor William B. Aycock and others on a projected commission on "Goals for Education in the South" that is being sponsored by the Southern Regional Education Board in Atlanta. President Friday also is a member of the commission.

Mr. Folsom has just completed a study of educational reorganization in the State of New York. "I find that many of the problems you face in North Carolina are the same ones that are characteristic of New York," he said.

Among New York recommendations that may be applicable to the South is a planned expansion of community colleges and teachers colleges.

It was recommended that New York have also a main state university, such as the University of North Carolina.

"Having a central university, such as you have at Chapel Hill, is something that is lacking in the New York system, and will be remedied if the proposals are adopted," said Folsom.

A Talk With Harry Golden

BY J. A. C. DUNN

Harry Golden's house is on a quiet stretch of Elizabeth Avenue (number 1312) in Charlotte. At one end of the porch a sign says "CAROLINA ISRAELITE, Harry Golden, Editor." The front door is bright red.

Mr. Golden's study is a comfortable clutter. Bookshelves dominate two walls. On other walls are framed dustjackets from books, both Mr. Golden's and other people's ("one of them is John Ehle's 'Shepherd of the Streets'"). There is a phonograph, a TV set, an assortment of lamps, wooden Windsor chairs, leather-covered armchairs, a footstool, a bronze bust of Carl Sandburg, magazines and newspapers stacked on the tables, and a small bar.

"You want a drink?" said Mr. Golden last week. "Bourbon and water? You smoke cigars? So what else is new? You know this record? It's just come out, samples of 60 years of music in this country. No, that's not the 'Washington Post March,' that's the 'Stars and Stripes Forever.'

Formal Agreement Reached On Raleigh Rd. Four-Laning

16-Foot Median Is Out

Official agreement between the Town of Chapel Hill and the State Highway Commission was reached yesterday afternoon on right-of-way costs and utility adjustments in the Raleigh Road dual-laning project.

At a special meeting of the Board of Aldermen, attended by a quorum of five members late yesterday afternoon, a routine resolution drawn up by the State was passed unanimously.

The resolution stated, in effect, that any costs of moving telephone poles, water, sewer and gas lines in the process of widening the Raleigh Road between Country Club Road and the Country line would be borne by the Town, and that maintenance and control of traffic during the widening process would also be managed by the Town.

Only poles and gas lines will be affected by the widening. The University has agreed to move any telephone poles necessary, and the Town has a standing agreement with the Public Service Co. that Public Service will bear the cost of any necessary gas line alteration.

The State's resolution also called for the Town to agree to share the cost of additional rights-of-way which may become necessary. Though the resolution does not specify the extent to which the Town would be required to share costs in such a case, town attorney J. Q. LeGrand said the Town was only bound to "come to an agreement" with the State and not to "agree to agree to" (Continued on Page 2)

Date Will Be Set For Bond Election

The Board of County Commissioners will set the date for the countywide $1.5 million school bond election at its regular meeting Tuesday in Hillsboro.

Before officially setting the date, the commissioners will formally approve distribution of the money between the Chapel Hill School District and the county school system. The Chapel Hill and county school boards have agreed on a 56-44 split, with the big end going to Chapel Hill. The commissioners are expected to go along with that agreement.

The bond election probably will be held around the middle of March, allowing time for legal formalities. Organized work in support of the bond issue probably will begin next month.

Money from the bond issue, if it is approved by the voters, will be used for the first phase of a 10-year school construction program.

The commissioners also are scheduled to meet Tuesday with the County Board of Elections and discuss pay for elections officials.

Clyde Carter, secretary of the Elections Board, has estimated that of 900 University students who registered for the election, some 600 got on the books through fraud or ignorance of registration requirements.

Mr. Carter proposed a crackdown which will force the students to remove themselves from the registration rolls or start paying county taxes. The crackdown would begin with the compilation of a list of student registrants in the Chapel Hill and Carrboro precincts. Names would be checked against county tax records and auto registrations to determine the accuracy of statements made by students when registering. Warning then would be sent to students suspected of registering illegally; they would be given the choice of listing poll and property taxes or requesting removal from the registration books.

An appropriation of about $200 is needed to finance the crackdown, and it is this the commissioners will be concerned with Tuesday.

The question of pay for election workers was raised shortly after the Nov. 8 general election. A delegation of registrars appealed to the commissioners for more pay.

Three Fires Marred Holiday Weekend

Three fires marred Chapel Hill's Christmas weekend. On Friday evening a defective flue in the Virginia Atwater house on McDade Street resulted in two badly burned rooms in the house.

At about 9 o'clock Christmas morning a fire in the chimney of George Barclay's house on Tenney Circle resulted from the chimney's having settled and pulled away from the wall of the house, leaving a crack.

And on Monday evening a student garage apartment at 444 Davie Circle started from the furnace and left the apartment a total loss.

The Police Department reported an abnormally quiet Christmas holiday; no break-ins, no shootings or knifings, a hardly noticeable scattering of drunks, and only one accident, a three car collision on Franklin Street at the Post Office which caused no injuries.

"Quietest Christmas I've ever seen," said Police Sergeant W. F. Hester.

Friends Society Moves Into New Meeting House

The Chapel Hill Meeting of the Society of Friends moved into its own meeting house last week—23 years after the group was first organized here.

Although the new building was not complete, the Quaker group held its first Sunday meeting in the house. The building had been expected to be complete about the first of the year, but the first meeting in it was moved ahead of schedule because of the University's schedule.

The local Quaker group has been meeting in Graham Memorial, but the building is closed for the holidays.

The building contractors, F. H. A. Thompson of Chapel Hill, is finishing up the job this week, and the building is expected to be complete by Sunday.

Furnishings, such as carpets and benches, will be added later. Formal dedication of the structure is expected to be held in late January or early February.

The Friends Society purchased a one and a half acre lot at the corner of Country Club Road and Raleigh Road in 1960 from the late W. C. Coker.

The building, expected to cost about $23,000 when it is completed, is a one-story structure of simple design. It resembles a residential building.

Including a full basement, the building has nearly 2,500 square feet of floor space, with an adjacent parking lot for the local meeting's present membership of about 35.

Dean D. D. Carroll is chairman of the building committee and Mrs. Claude Shotts is chairman of the furnishings committee. Adolph Firth is clerk of the meeting and Mrs. Shotts is secretary. Trustees are Dean Carroll and Claude Shotts.

L. Lyndon Hobbs was chairman of the building committee during much of the operation but moved away in September, when he was succeeded by Mr. Carroll. Other members of the committee are Dr. Stuart Willis, Claude Shotts, R. J. M. Hobbs, Miss Geraldine Foster, and Mrs. Mildred Ringwalt.
