3 Agencies Ask Chest Membership

The Community Chest evaluation committee Tuesday night was requested to add agencies to the annual fund-raising campaign, heard from several organizations which are not in the Chest but would like to be, and heard from one agency which is not a member and has no desire to be.

The meeting was the final step in the committee's efforts to learn what the community wants before making its recommendations to the Community Council on the agencies or types of agencies to include in next year's campaign.

The group heard from Mrs. Jane Parker, former Orange County Superintendent of Welfare; Mrs. Clarence Heer, former Superintendent of Public Welfare; Dr. John Cassel of the University's School of Public Health and a former consultant of the Greensboro Community Council.

Representatives of three organizations which are not in the Chest now, but would like to be, presented their cases to the committee. They are Hardy Prather of Carolinas United, Dr. Nathan Womack of United Medical Research Foundation, and William L. Fleming of the American Social Health Association.

Expressing opposition to affiliation with the Chest was Mrs. Mary Nies of the North Carolina Heart Association. Joe Nagelschmidt, head of the Cancer Society, also indicated his opposition before the meeting. He had another engagement and couldn't stay to speak against it during the meeting, however.

Mrs. Parker urged the committee to consider recommending that a professional consultant be hired to learn what the community's real needs are.

She also suggested that the community needs: A family service information center for people who need some kind of welfare service, a visiting nurse and homemaker service, a school social worker, more foster homes, better housing for the lower income groups, better recreation, a YWCA, and a milk fund for those not eligible for welfare aid.

"I particularly want to leave you with the need for a school social worker and for a family service program," she said.

Mrs. Heer agreed with Mrs. Parker in the need for a visiting nurse service, a homemaker service and additional foster homes.

She also asked for a revolving fund for transients to supplement the hospital's fund. Many people rush to the hospital here because of an emergency and have no place to stay, she explained.

She also suggested an employment bureau in Chapel Hill. "It might keep many people who aren't financially able to go to the Durham Employment Office every day from having to apply for relief."

Dr. Cassel couldn't be present, but Mrs. Harold Walters read his statement. The community needs a coordinated organization for fund raising and particularly for program planning, his statement said.

He proposed that the community make an assessment of its unmet needs and of its existing resources and facilities. He called attention, also, to the inadequacies of Memorial Hospital in meeting the needs of the community. It is primarily a referral hospital, operated mainly for teaching and research, his statement pointed out.

Mr. Prather told the committee Carolinas United would like very much to be included in the Community Chest again, as it has in past years. He explained that the organization is "the State United Fund agency. It helps communities in planning and organizing fund-raising drives, and operates a state budgeting system, with state and national agencies asking for funds at the state level. Then the requests are distributed to the community groups on a quota basis."

Dr. Womack said the Medical Research Foundation, one of the agencies sponsored by Carolinas United, works in a category that can't be covered by national associations. Its money is used to finance pilot research in the "dreaded diseases" which makes requests for larger national grants valid.

"If there were no chronic illness we wouldn't be here tonight. But there is and we must do something about it," he declared. Mr. Fleming told the committee it "can't have its cake and eat it too." He said the community should be willing to give its fair share to the outside agencies which directly benefit it.

The Health Association, he said, is active in an educational program, research, repressing commercial prostitution, social health consultation and the prevention of venereal diseases.

Mrs. Nies said the Heart Association's independent fund raising policy was set at a national convention at the request of the Tar Heel delegation. She said the Community Chest should concentrate on its own needs here and let the national agencies support themselves.

Mrs. Robert Wettach, chairman of a committee which sent out questionnaires on the Chest, reported the results to the group. She said 122 replies were received from a random mailing of 300 questionnaires to subscribers to

Chapel Hill businessman Joe Page was the unanimous choice Tuesday night for the unexpired two-year Alderman's term left vacant by the new Mayor Sandy McClamroch.

Mr. Page was the only nominee for the post. He ran fourth in last week's municipal election.

The board also elected Mrs. Harold Walters as mayor pro tem. Mayor McClamroch and the three re-elected Aldermen, Mrs. Walters, Dr. Paul Wager and Hubert Robinson, were sworn in for their new terms. Recorder's Court Judge William Stewart, elected last week to his sixth term, conducted the ceremonies. He was sworn in earlier by a notary public.

Mr. McClamroch appointed new committee members as follows: Cemeteries—Eugene Strowd, chairman, Mrs. Walters and Dr. Wager. Recreation, parks and playgrounds—Mrs. Walters, chairman, Mr. Robinson and Mr. Page. Streets, safety and health—Mr. Robinson, chairman, Roland Giduz and Mr. Page. And Finances—Dr. Wager, chairman, Mr. Strowd and Mr. Giduz.

No sooner were the formalities over than the board was brought sharply back to the down-to-earth problems of several delegations seeking relief.

Three oral petitions were presented, and a number of West Rosemary Street residents asked questions about the widening of the street.

The Aldermen asked the Chapel Hill Board of Realtors last February to appraise the property which will be needed in the project, based on frontage to a depth of eight feet, and to determine what the value of the property will be after the work is completed.

The realtors reported that, in their opinion, after the work is completed the property value will be greater than it was before.

"Does that mean we property owners will get no compensation?" a man asked. He was told it did.

"I don't think that's fair," a woman commented.

Mr. Rose told her that the report was just the recommendation of the Board of Realtors and the Town doesn't necessarily have to accept it.

The board agreed that it will appoint a committee to talk with each property owner about his special problems.

Most of the eight feet on which the appraisal was made will be used for a sidewalk, Mr. Rose said. The Town already has about enough right-of-way to widen the road.

Three Oakwood Drive residents brought their drainage problems to the board in an oral petition. Elmer Oettinger, speaking for his

Lodge Open House Scheduled Sunday

University Lodge No. 408 will hold an open house on Sunday, May 14, from 3 to 6 p.m. in its new home on East Franklin St.

The entire building will be open for all interested visitors to examine. Several Masons will be on hand to conduct guided tours of the main Lodge Room upstairs and the Lodge's other rooms downstairs.

As far as possible, questions about Masonry will also be answered.

Members of the Order of the Eastern Star will be on hand to assist with the serving of light refreshments.

WINDFALL—Chapel Hill Rotary Club president Dr. E. M. Hedgpeh presented a check for $1,000 to Mrs. Richmond Bond, chairman of the Chapel Hill Public Library Board of Trustees, Monday. The check was earmarked specifically for the purchase of books. From left are Mrs. J. C. Rotary Club Gives $1,000 To Library

The Chapel Hill Rotary Club this week presented a $1,000 check for books to the Public Library.

The gift equals the library's entire budget for book purchases last year.

Dr. Edward Hedgpeh presented the check to Mrs. Richmond Bond, head of the Board of Trustees. His only restriction was that the money be used to buy books.

Dr. Hedgpeh said he hoped this gift will lead the way for other community organizations to make contributions to the library.

Last year, the library received an appropriation of $300 from the Town for books, $500 from the Friends of the Library, and approximately $200 from the Mary Bayley Pratt Association for children's books. Mrs. Gerald R. McCarthy, librarian, said.

The $1,000 should buy approximately 400 books, Mrs. McCarthy said. The library now owns some 8,000 volumes and also has on deposit approximately 2,000 books from the Regional Library.

Mrs. McCarthy said she already has ordered $200 worth of children's books to meet the summer's demands. With the rest of the money, she said more children's books will be ordered in addition to books on hobbies, mysteries and science fiction.

The gift is a wonderful thing for the library, Mrs. McCarthy declared, "especially when we were wondering where we would get enough children's books to meet the demands this summer. We appreciate it very much."

J. B. Robbins reports very favorable reaction to the aluminum awning constructed this week in front of his House of Fashion on East Franklin Street.

Mr. Robbins said yesterday, as the 50-foot long section of awning neared completion, that a great many passersby had commented favorably on it, and that only four or five had not come right out and said they liked it—these, said Mr. Robbins, reserved judgment until the structure was finished.

The awning has been put up as a sample of what is currently proposed for construction on both sides of East Franklin Street between Columbia and Henderson Streets. On the north side it would extend the length of the block; on the south side, from Columbia Street to the University Methodist Church property.

The sample is painted aqua underneath with a silver ribbed panel along its front and end edges, and is supported by four round iron posts in front with metal braces above. White wrought iron decoration similar to that at Memorial Hospital was obtained for the posts as soon as possible.

An aluminum sign panel 12 inches deep and constructed to hold a store's sign can be attached to the lower edge of the awning's front panel.

Rain and melting snow drain off the awning through the hollow iron posts. The awning is constructed to withstand as much as 60 pounds pressure per square foot from above, as well as all forms of weather.

Cost of the sample is $25 per running foot. On the north side of Franklin Street, however, the cost would be less, since the sample, at 12 feet wide, is slightly wider than what would be installed on the north side.

New Corporation Buys Out Bowling Center In Eastgate

Major League Lanes, one of the first establishments to open in Eastgate Shopping Center, was sold today to All Star Bowling Inc., a new corporation with many stockholders in the Chapel Hill area. The sale also included Major League University restaurant, which is located in the same building with the bowling lanes. The sales price was not disclosed.

Negotiations for the sale were begun a week ago. The sale was completed today and the new owners will take over tomorrow.

Frank B. Smith of Gastonia, executive vice president of All Star and formerly an executive of Major League, said Lennie Rosenbluth will continue as manager of the bowling lanes. For the present, only changes in the decor and minor staff changes are contemplated. There will be no interruption of business.

The restaurant will become an entirely new operation, however, Mr. Smith said.

As general manager of Major League Lanes, Mr. Smith supervised construction of the bowling center here and its formal opening last fall. He became vice-president of Major League Bowling and Recreation following a merger several months ago, then helped form All Star.

Concerning today's sale he said, "We felt it would be mutually beneficial to the community and to the bowling center to have local ownership. We believe that we will be able to perform more satisfactorily with home ownership and a broader and more direct interest in the community."

All Star Bowling was incorporated several months ago and (Continued on Page 4)

Delay Hits Apartments

Progress toward the construction of a $1.1 million apartment housing project at the east end of East Rosemary Street has been delayed for the time being.

The building permit for ten of the project's 13 buildings was held up this week until zoning area requirements were met, and an appeal to the Board of Adjustment was made on construction of the other three buildings.

Both permits were issued May 4 by building inspector Howard Stewart to the Hunt Construction Co. of Durham. Principal owner of the housing project is to be Abe Greenberg of Durham, with Young and Wilkins Inc., the local agent.

The RA-10 zoning classification of the area in which the first ten buildings are to be constructed requires 405,000 square feet of land. After the building permit had been issued, a check disclosed that the tract obtained by the developers only contained 390,000 square feet.

Mr. Stewart offered the developers the alternatives of obtaining (Continued on page 4)

Board Backs School Closing

The Orange County Board of Education in a special meeting Tuesday night reaffirmed its decision to close White Cross School in June.

The action came as the result of a letter to the Board from W. Carson Ryan, Kenan Professor of Education Emeritus at the University.

The meeting was called to hear citizens interested in the selection of an architect for the new consolidated high school, but the Board also reasserted its stand on the White Cross School, discussed next year's budget and talked about employing a landscape architect.

Prof. Ryan's letter to the School Board is as follows:

"A number of us here in the Chapel Hill area are concerned over possible action with regard to the White Cross School. Would it not be possible to continue operation of this school—desegregated, as the parents request? As you know, of course, the Pearsall plan assures the right (Continued on Page 4)
