

O. K. Rice Visits Science Gatherings

UNC Kenan Professor of Chemistry Oscar K. Rice last month participated in a week-long Gordon Research Conference in New Hampton, New Hampshire. The conference, sponsored by the American Association for the Advancement of Science, was concerned with "The Chemistry and Physics of Liquids."

On the same trip, Dr. Rice visited the Brookhaven National Laboratories on Long Island, and served as a consultant and gave seminars at two other research laboratories: the Avco Everett Research Laboratory at Everett, Massachusetts; and the Ballistic Research Laboratories at Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland.

This week Dr. Rice is in Salt Lake City, Utah, attending a symposium on "Unimolecular Reactions in the Mass Spectrometer and Related Topics." The symposium is sponsored by the Division of Physical Chemistry of the American Chemical Society and the U. S. Army Research Office (Durham) with the Office of Naval Research. Dr. Rice is to deliver a paper on "Energy Exchange in Unimolecular Reactions."

Corvair 700 Club Coupe

The hardest part about parking a Corvair is finding a nickel

That may be a slight overstatement, but such jamtiness comes easily when you're a Corvair owner.

And you can usually back it up—as easily as you can back up a Corvair. You'll find yourself doing that occasionally, if only to adjust the brakes—they're self-adjusting. That's all there is to it, and that's a good example of how delightfully easy Corvair is to own, drive and maintain.

But since we began by talking about driving, let's stick with that awhile. A large factor in the fun of driving a Corvair is the location of its engine in the rear. Why the rear? It gives Corvair extra traction on any road surface. It provides a nearly flat floor for more useable interior space. Best of all, it produces steering so light, so responsive, you wonder why no other American-made car thought of it.

Corvair's engine is also air cooled, we might add, which means there's no antifreeze or water for you to add. Ever.

All that pleasure from something so practical almost makes you think Corvair is unique among American cars. Which isn't surprising, because it is!
