

Janis Klavins Beats Hill Hall's Heat

By STANLEY M. KURTZ

A large audience was on hand at Hill Music Hall Tuesday evening in spite of the stifling heat to hear Dr. Janis Klavins sing the Schubert song cycle "Die Schone Mullerin". Dr. Klavins was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Juanita White.

For those who have heard Dr. Klavins sing in the past, his sensitive performance of what is generally considered to be one of the loveliest examples of German "lieder" came as no surprise. The gamut of emotions of a young man in love, and finally jilted by a pretty maiden are expressed in both the poetry by Wilhelm Muller and music by Schubert. The challenge of projecting the feelings and moods of this work has become the life-long ambition of most lieder singers. Few singers feel that they ever attain the desired perfection. From the point of view of the listener, however, Tuesday night's performance left little to be desired. Dr. Klavins' sensitivity and technical ability were particularly evident in such sections as "Die liebe Farbe", and "Der Muller and der Bach" where his natural baritone voice scaled the tenor range with preciseness and smooth control of volume. The more robust passages were unfortunately marred by the acoustical characteristics of the Hall which tended to muddy the sounds of the piano and voice by its peculiar reverberation.

The final "Das Baches Wiegenlied" (The Brook's Lullaby) had an almost hypnotic effect upon the audience, as each verse was sung a bit more quietly, until its final phrase was drawn out like a fine thread.
