He attended a British missionary school when he was a boy in China, and later was at Cambridge. British schoolboys write weekly essays on their scientific work, not only as science reports, but also in a separate paper in plain English.

These matters were batted around, and the suggestion naturally presented itself: Why shouldn't each person have one number for every purpose? One's Social Security number would be the same as his telephone number and his automobile tag and his house number, the number on his insurance premiums.

Now, it's admitted the numbering might be too long for remembering.

But it seems the Univac could automobile license number. A he helpful in quick tracking of numbers. For example, feed a man's name into the input mechanism and push a button and all his numbers would be listed. Then the numbers could be crossindexed, so that if you knew a man's laundry number, or number for his G.I. life insurance policy, you would automatically be able to trace readily his name, and all kinds of numbers -or an all-purpose number-that fits him and no one else.

Admittedly there are flaws in this proposal. But these might be worked out by computer mathematicians, if they wanted to tackle it. At least it's a step in the right direction, as President Kennedy said as he quoted an old Chinese maxim that "a journey of a thousand miles begins with but a single step." Richard Dodson has taken that first step.

A newspaper in Macon, Ga., in commenting on numbers, has proposed that everyone be given a number at birth, and after that build on that number as a common denominator for each per-any specific alternative routes for the road suggested by anybody else, and said he had no particular ideas himself. "We just want to see what the highway people come up with," he said.

But he added, "We're afraid they'll use the money on some other project. It's hard to get money appropriated again if it's used for something else."

The Highway Department has budgeted $52,000 for the road, which would extend, as presently proposed, 2,492 feet from the present end of Pleasant Drive in Carrboro to an as yet undetermined point on Umstead Drive. It would be 60 feet wide.

Mayor Sandy McClamroch said last week he would meet with Town Manager Robert Peck and a Highway Department right-ofway acquisitions officer Friday concerning the Town's granting the State the necessary right-ofway across a corner of the Chapel Hill Cemetery, which lies in the proposed path of the road.

The road was originally proposed in the summer of 1960. At that time its feasibility was more or less demonstrated by publicity stunt in the form of a race between men on foot following the probable route of the road, and men in a car driving from the end of Pleasant Drive all the way through Carrboro, Chapel Hill, down the Airport Road, and along Umstead Drive to where the road would probably emerge. The men in the car won, but by a scant margin. Last year a more serious effort to have the road built was launched by the Chapel Hill School Board, which was concerned with the problem of school buses in heavy traffic. The School Board's request for the road was emphatically supported by the Carrboro Commissioners. The Commissioners are concerned with the steadily increasing traffic load on Carrboro's Main Street, particularly during morning and evening rush hours. The Pleasant Drive extension would relieve this traffic pressure.

Orange's Leaf Loss May Hit $1 Million

County Agricultural Agent Ed Barnes told the County Commissioners yesterday that Orange County's tobacco farmers may lose nearly $1 million in tobacco crop income this year. The reason for the income drop is the severe drought which hit parts of the County particularly in the north end, this

Mr. Barnes said a poll of tobacco farmers indicated an anticipated tobacco income twothirds to three-fourths the size of last year's.

The County has been designated an agricultural disaster area. Mr. Barnes said 54 farmers had applied for relief. He estimated that 30,000 to 40,000 bushels of grain will be shipped into the County under the relief.

The Commissioners declined to decide where to hang a portrait of the Earl of Hillsborough, for whom the County seat was nam-

The portrait, to be painted by a New York artist and financed by George Watts Hill, was suggested by Mrs. Robert Lester of ·Mrs. Lester wants the picture hung behind the judge's bench in the Courthouse in Hillsboro. Mrs. Lester explained that the portrait will be Orange County's observation of the North Carolina Tercentenary. As for hanging it behind the judge's bench in the courthouse, Mrs. Lester said that there was considerable precedent many counties in the State for hanging a namesake portrait in that spot. Chatham County is an example, she said.

But some members of the Hillsborough Historical Society want the portrait hung in the Orange County Historical Museum in the old courthouse.

The Commissioners hesitated to make a decision. They agreed to accept the painting, but they turned the matter of where to hang it over to the Historical Society. Because the Town and not the County is named for the Earl, it is possible the Hillsboro Board of Commissioners will want some say in where to hang

"Darn if it isn't harder to take money than it is to give it away," said Commissioner Gordon Cleve-

Welfare Director James Wight told the commissioners that the surplus food program for indigents during the fiscal year ending last July 1 brought 413,000 pounds of foodstuffs to an average of 1,753 Orange County residents. Total value of the goods amounted to more than $97,000, he said, with a cost to the County of around $2,000 for administration

Chairman Donald Stanford asked for recommendations of persons to serve in the newly created state militia, which will operate if the local national guard units are federalized. Appointments, which are made in conjunction with city and town officials, probably will be announced within a month.
