

Moscow Orchestra Will play Friday

The Moscow Chamber Orchestra, under the direction Rudolph Barshai, will open the tenth season of the Chapel Hill Concert Series with a concert Friday in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m.

Fourteen strings, supplemented by two oboists, two hornists, and a harpsichordist-organist comprise the ensemble. All the musicians are graduates of the Moscow Conservatory. While the repertory's foundation is music of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, this core is augmented by the works of other periods.

The program for Friday night's concert includes: Symphony No. 29 in A Major, K. 201 by Mozart; Divertissement in F Major, by Bartok; Visions fugitives (arranged by Barshai) by Prokofiev; and Concerto in B Minor for Four Violins by Vivaldi.

Good seats are still available and may be purchased at the box office the night of the performance. Students will be admitted by ID cards.

PROGRAM PLANNERS — Chapel Hill-Carrboro teachers plan a program to help UNC graduate students learn to teach mentally retarded children. A course taught on Saturday mornings by Dr. Wayne L. Sengstock of the School of Education, third from right, gives graduate students a chance to gain insight into the nature and behavior of these children with first-hand contacts in the special classes of the Chapel Hill Public Schools. This field experience is part of the laboratory phase of Education 181. Teachers are from left, Dr. Hardwick Harshman, director of special education; Mrs. Sarah Whitty, Chapel Hill Senior High; Mrs. Rhoda Bisbing, Guy B. Phillips Junior High; Mrs. Nancy Bittrich, Lincoln Senior High; Mrs. Evelyn Murdock, West Franklin Elem. School; Mrs. Jessie S. Gouger, Elementary Instructional Supervisor; Mrs. Marlys Mitchell, Lincoln Junior High; Mrs. Frances Hargraves, Northside Elementary School; Dr. Wayne L. Sengstock, Asst. Prof. of Special Education; Mrs. Kay Bishop, West Franklin Elementary School; Dr. Howard Thompson, Superintendent of Chapel Hill Schools.

Halloween Fest At Eastgate Lot

The Chapel Hill Jaycees will sponsor a Halloween carnival at Eastgate Parking lot Thursday night starting at 7.

There will be a costume contest, with judging broken down into four age groups; a house of horrors, a fishing well for candy, apple bobbing, ring tosses, free popcorn, and possibly some rides. A combo will play for teenagers to dance to.

The Halloween carnival is sponsored every year in Chapel Hill by the Jaycees. The carnivals used to be held on Fowler's Food Store parking lot, but the number of children interested has now grown to Eastgate proportions.

Community Chest Helps Recreation

Last March the Chapel Hill Recreation Commission asked that the Community Chest contribute $4000 as a supplement to the tax fund that has been voted for its support. This money will serve to strengthen the existing program of sports and games, arts and crafts, dramatics and other areas by providing a series of "open house" activities which are available to residents of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro area. Among these activities, which include the use of all Recreation Center facilities, are included the dance which are held on an average of once a week throughout the calendar year.

Hundreds of young people have participated in these recreational activities, which have taken place at the Roberson Street Center, Chapel Hill High School, the Umstead Center and various locations at the University.

The Community Chest goal of $43,012.00 provides an allocation of just under 10% for the Chapel Hill Recreation Commission.

St. Thomas More: 'Scholars Mass'

Procession with chanting of the ancient litany of All Saints will introduce a 'Scholars Mass' at St. Thomas More Church on Gimghoul Road Friday evening. UNC Faculty members and students have been invited to take part in the special feast day liturgy, which begins at 5:15 from the chapel undercroft.

Solemn Mass liturgy with subdeacon assisting will follow litany and procession at 5:30. Catholic student chaplain Robert Wilken will celebrate Mass, with James Kelly, C.S.C. and Charles Phipps, S.J., priest students at UNC, as deacon and subdeacon. Kenneth Galbraith, S.J., will serve as master of ceremonies.

Preacher at the academic Mass will be James Devereux, S.J. His subject is "The pursuit of knowledge in the presence of Truth." The student and faculty congregation will sing Gregorian Mass number 16, with proper prayers of the All Saints Liturgy chanted by a student schola.

All Saints Day is one of the official Holy Days of the Catholic liturgical calendar. This year, with the feast day falling on Friday, Catholics are excused from the usual Friday abstinence from meat.
