Russian's Talk Here Not Illegal

A Russian expert on statistics spoke Monday at the University after UNC officials concluded his appearance would not be in violation of the state's Gag Law. V. V. Petrov, a professor at Leningrad State University, spoke at a gathering on statistics. Chancellor William B. Aycock said Dr. George Nicholson, head of the Statistics Department, had "determined to his own satisfaction" that Dr. Petrov's appearance did not violate the law which bans Communists or Fifth Amendment pleaders from speaking at State-supported colleges. Dr. Nicholson had stated that Dr. Petrov, an exchange scholar in this country on a three-month visit under the auspices of the State Department, had been investigated by the State Department and the FBI.

"There is no reason to think that he is politically affiliated or a member of the (Communist) party," said Dr. Nicholson.

Chancellor Aycock said that under policy laid down by the University trustees, the person who invites a speaker—in this case Dr. Nicholson—is responsible for seeing that the law banning Communist speakers is not violated.

Dr. Petrov, an expert on the science of probability, will remain at Chapel Hill for several more days.

Chancellor Aycock said the faculty, student organizations and the administration are making every effort to comply with the speaker ban "even though we think it is injurious to the University."

He added, "We're going to do everything we can to get it removed."

Chancellor Aycock said a performance on the campus Friday by the Moscow Chamber Orchestra did not violate the law. "We decided at the very beginning," he said, "that it would not eliminate concerts, ballets, operettas and things of that sort."

So Wooley Sent It Back To Try Again

Town and Country Service Station was broken into early Monday morning, and thereby hangs a trail of stolen cars.

The thief broke the glass in the service station door to enter, and stole $40 in cash from the cash register. When police were called, a car stolen in Durham was found abandoned at the station.

But the thief also found in the cash register a set of keys for a 1952 Packard belonging to Lloyd Wooley of Severin Street. Mr. Wooley's car had been left at Town and Country for brake repair. The thief stole the Wooley car.

Mr. Wooley was called from his job at Duke Hospital to give police his license and registration numbers, but on the way back to Chapel Hill he spotted his Packard abandoned at Howard Johnson's on the Chapel Hill-Durham Boulevard. After police had examined the car for fingerprints, Mr. Wooley retrieved his car and sent it back to Town and Country to have the brake repairs finished.

Chapel Hill police are working with Durham police on the break-in, which is similar to several that have occurred in Durham recently.
