Mrs. Deward Pepper and Mrs. Jerry Pilarski honored their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Bradshaw, with an open-house Sunday in celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary. For the occasion Mrs. Bradshaw wore a brown satin dress flecked with gold and a corsage of yellow carnations. All the attendants wore corsages of yellow mums. The golden color scheme was carried out throughout the home in beautiful arrangements of flowers and autumn leaves. At the register, presided over by Mrs. Donnie Ward, was an arrangement of golden giant mums interspersed with smaller mums and autumn leaves. In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw, Mrs. Deward Pepper, Mrs. Jerry Pilarski, and Mrs. Mallie Ray. Mrs. Ray was an attendant at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw. At the dining room door was an arrangement of autumn leaves in an old-fashioned straw hat.

The dining table was laid with a white cloth decorated with huge bows of gold ribbon and net. An arrangement of gladiolas, roses and carnations in a gold container flanked by gold candelabra centered the table while a wedding cake topped with the traditional miniature bride and groom was displayed at one end. At the other punch, cake squares iced in yellow, and nuts were served. Mrs. Laura Bradshaw and Mrs. Emma Parker presided at the punch bowl. In another room Mrs. Jane Bradshaw opened and displayed gifts.

During the afternoon approximately a hundred relatives and friends called to honor Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw. Among those from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Willard Parker, and Mrs. Domitila Friddle of Raleigh; Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Gibbs of Franklin; Mr. and Mrs. Lenord Gibbs of Durham; and Mrs. Josephine Aguerre of Raleigh. Mrs. Winslow Williams was in charge of the floral arrangements.

Rev. H. Grady Head of Norfolk, Va., and Mr. Julian Head of Greensboro visited relatives here Sunday.

I wouldn't exactly say I am an indifferent housekeeper, but when the phone rings it is difficult to uncover it from a pile of papers, books, and unanswered mail. Seems like things have a way of piling up around my house, dust, cobwebs and the like. Seems like everytime I turn around I run into a new cobweb, and every time I sit down to type a cobweb tickles the back of my neck. But then I'm still working on my novel; only a few more chapters and I can write FINIS. But then there are so many more books I want to write—guess I'll just have to learn to live with spiders. Since I've already had considerable experience, it shouldn't be hard.

Report just received on a Halloween party given Mike Mann by his mother, Mrs. Kay Mann, was that five of Mike's friends gathered at his house on Halloween night to celebrate the occasion before trick or treating. The front porch was ablaze with scowling jack-o-lanterns and the Halloween theme was carried out throughout the house. The first to arrive was Don Sparrow, a dead-ringer for a pig, next to arrive were Ray and Sara Ruth Dunn, completely disguised in bright, gay costumes. Kathy Vance was dressed as a colorfully plumed bird. Randy Register came as a clown. All the guests were greeted by a spooky skeleton who was Mike Mann.

Activities were centered around Mike's room where various games were played, prizes distributed, and chilling ghost stories were told, and songs were sung. Each guest was given a trick or treat bag which were displayed on a table in Mike's room. The dining table was laden with cookies, orange and black cupcakes and soft drinks. Favors were Halloween noisemakers. Then the guests and host went out to trick or treat.

Others attending were Mrs. Bertha Lou Dunn, Mrs. Zinda Vance; Mike's aunt, Mrs. Pam Talbert, and his mother, Mrs. Kay Mann.

Mrs. S. C. Wilson fell at her home Tuesday and broke one arm and cracked the bone in the other. She is in Memorial Hospital, but expects to return home in three or four days. It will be a month or more before she can use her arms.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Glosson have moved to New Bern where Mr. Glosson is manager of the Colonial Store. Mr. Glosson is a son of Mr. Mrs. Dan Glosson, and Mrs. Glosson is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Troy Hackney. They have three children.

University Study Shows 'Going Steady' Is Contributor To Illegitimate Births

By DEMONT ROEMAN JR.

Most women whose babies are born out of wedlock either have made wedding plans or have been going steady with the "alleged father" even before becoming pregnant.

This indicates, contrary to popular belief, that illegitimate births usually do not result from fly-by-night sex affairs.

A study at the University shows that only about one in 10 unwed mothers had been going with the unwed fathers on a now-and-then, infrequent basis at the time pregnancy occurred.

Dr. Hallowell Pope of the UNC Department of Sociology and Anthropology said in a preliminary report of a study of unwed mothers in North Carolina that nearly nine of every 10 out-of-wedlock pregnancies resulted from "a stable relationship between the boy and the girl."

He said about half of the 900 unwed mothers interviewed said they were in love with the man involved before they became pregnant. An even higher percentage said they were either in love, "thought they were in love" or "liked him a lot."

Dr. Pope said analyses of the data collected in field interviews for the North Carolina study are still in process and will continue for another year. The study began in 1961.

He emphasized, as a prelude to his report, that "middle-class, nice girls" get into trouble as well as "poor, uneducated girls." The reasons in both cases, he said, are complex and involve much more than just psychiatric or social disorders.

He cited other studies which show that over one-third of women have sexual relations prior to marriage. This occurs, he pointed out, in a society in which many people condemn the results of premarital sex play more than they condemn the intercourse itself.

Interviews for the North Carolina study, conducted in the summer of 1962, involved white unwed mothers in 26 Piedmont and mountain counties and Negro unwed mothers in 20 counties from three regions—the Piedmont, the Eastern tobacco area and the Northeastern peanut section. Only women who had children out of wedlock in 1960 and 1961 were contacted.

The median age of the women interviewed was 20. No one was under 16 years of age. Dr. Pope pointed out that North Carolina had almost 40,000 illegitimate births in 1960, about four of every five of them from the non-white population.

The problem of obtaining accurate figures on illegitimacy—particularly among the upper-class groups which condemn it the most—was referred to. Higher class families, he said, are most likely to have an out-of-wedlock birth recorded as officially legitimate.

Interviewers for the North Carolina study were not able to contact all of the mothers they sought, so Dr. Pope said the results should be interpreted with caution.

Other preliminary findings of the study were as follows:—The Negro unwed mother is more likely to remain unmarried than the white mother. And if she does marry after her baby is born, the Negro woman is more likely than the white woman to marry the alleged father.

(Dr. Pope said it isn't unusual for the white woman to marry the alleged father during her pregnancy—after the baby is conceived but before it is born.)

—Broken homes are not the only reason why girls "get into trouble." Sixty-three per cent of white unwed mothers and 45 per cent of Negro unwed mothers lived with both parents at least up to the time they were 18.

—Most unwed mothers interviewed remained unmarried and kept their children (interviews were conducted about 18 months after the illegitimate children were born). More than 25 per cent of the white mothers placed their children for adoption, but only one per cent of the Negro mothers gave up their children.

—The unwed mother and father usually are of the same age and educational background. In many cases, the girl's parents knew the boy before the pregnancy took place.

—Two of every five unwed mothers had gone with the alleged fathers for over six months before they became pregnant. One in five white mothers and more than one-third of the Negro mothers had been dating the alleged fathers exclusively for two years or more before pregnancy occurred.

(Dr. Pope said that many partners who go together a long time apparently develop a strong affection for one another and, as a result, tend to feel that sex relations are all right.)

—Two of every five white unmarried mothers said they and the alleged fathers had planned marriage before their pregnancies. The same was true for about one of every three Negro women.

—Three-fourths of the unwed white mothers who were still unmarried at the time they were interviewed had stopped seeing their sex partners after their babies arrived. This was true among half the still unmarried Negro mothers.

—Among the women who remained unmarried and kept their children, the Negro alleged father was twice as likely as the white alleged father to provide support for the family. Thirty-three per cent of the white and 68 per cent of the Negro unwed mothers said that alleged fathers were providing at least some of their financial support.

The preliminary report of the study was presented by Dr. Pope at a meeting of the Maternal and Child Health Department of the UNC School of Public Health.
