

Commission Delays Action On Franklin St. Rec Center

By SUSIE LEWIS

The Chapel Hill Recreation Commission has taken no action on an offer by Ted Danziger to convert the basement of the building at the corner of Columbia and Franklin Streets to an uptown teenage recreation center.

The Commission discussed the offer at length at its meeting Wednesday, but unresolved problems arising from Mr. Danziger's offer delayed official action.

Mr. Danziger has leased the first floor and basement of the building, which was formerly occupied by Gordon's 5 & 10. The basement, as he envisions it, could serve as an after-school and night-time recreation center for an estimated 200 Chapel Hill and Carrboro teenagers.

But Mr. Danziger's offer was made on condition that the Commission install a new ceiling to meet fire regulations, and rest rooms. Investigation has revealed that regulations would be met, for the center's proposed activities, without these improvements. The Commission agreed to ask Mr. Danziger if he would make the space available without the new ceiling and rest rooms, because the expense would be too great for the six to eighteen months during which the basement could be used.

The center would enable the Chapel Hill Recreation Department to move most teenage recreation activities from Umstead Center to the more convenient uptown location. A small annual fee would be charged each teenager for use of the center.

The Commission considered a request from the Inter-Church Council for Social Service for more space to store used clothes in the Roberson Street Center.

The Council has been storing clothes in the attic of the center for monthly distribution, but recently the space has become inadequate.

The Commission decided that "Because of the growth of the clothes distribution program and the ever-expanding program of the Recreation Department, we feel that the facility in question is no longer adequate for this distribution, and we recommend that the Inter-Church Council seek other quarters for this program."

In other business the Commission: —Decided to make a formal request to the Board of Aldermen for an office for the Recreation Commission in the new Town Hall.

—Adopted revised by-laws under which it will meet on the second Wednesday of every month in the Town Hall.

Group Is Proposed To Care For Needy

By DIANE HILE

A special group to care for needy people in Chapel Hill and Carrboro on a "non-institutionalized basis" was proposed Thursday night at the Chapel Hill Community Council meeting.

Only five of the 15 voting Council members were present so no official action could be taken.

Dr. Loren MacKinney, a pediatrician at Memorial Hospital and member of the council, suggested that the organization would work with the Welfare Department, "but would single out people who need jobs instead of handouts."

"We must take care of the citizens in the community," he said, and added that the County Welfare Department seemed to him to be less interested in getting people jobs than in giving them "handouts."

Welfare Department representatives will be asked to attend the next meeting of the council to give their views on the problem.

Dr. MacKinney also suggested a vocational guidance program in the public high schools.

Sandy McClamroch, chairman of the Community Chest, gave a progress report on the current chest drive. As of Thursday night $21,560 or almost 50 per cent of the goal had been reached, but the majority of the donations had not been turned in.

"There have been some complaints about the Girl Scouts, the Boy Scouts and the Y-Teens selling candy and other such items to make money," said Mr. McClamroch. "I think something must be done about members of the Community Chest that conduct these door-to-door campaigns."

"I am also fighting the ladies who go to their households just to chat, and don't care how much money they get. However, overall the division chairmen and I are tickled to death with the cooperation we have found among the volunteers."

Give to the Community Chest.

The Rev. Horace McKinney stood up and saw his shadow. Like the yearly groundhog appearance, this means something. Specifically that a long, hard basketball season is just around the corner.

The Rev. McKinney, whose nickname and description is Bones, gathered with cage pundits Everett Case of North Carolina State, Vic Bubas of Duke and Carolina's suave Dean Smith to discuss the coming season. Immediately Coach Bones caught his contemporaries off guard.

What, asked the Wake Forest coach, "do they call two men who love each other?"

There were multiple thoughts, but Smith, Case and Bubas agreed it wasn't basketball players.

"The answer is Christians," said Preacher McKinney. By the sparkle in his eyes one could surmise his successive poser was better than a three-point play.

HE'S A CASE: This prompted State's Case to think of the ancient days in Rome when lions partook of lovers in wholesale lots.

"Playing in the ACC this season," moaned Everett, "is going to be worse than facing lions. I've got two lettermen back. They are pretty good ball players. But the talent ends there."

What about the rest of the squad?

"I can't utter the words," Everett said, half acidly.

Coach Case said he planned to form a holding company, but not the kind associated with large corporations.

"We plan to hold the ball," thundered Ev. "I've told my kids we may go through an entire game and see only two shots—one from us, one from our opponent. That way we have a 50-50 chance of winning."

THE DEAN SPEAKS: It was time for Dean to present a few problems.

"My Carolina team," said Coach Smith, "is taking on nothing but rank this season. We must play NYU and Duke, both ranked within the first 10 of the nation. Then there is Kentucky, Indiana, Notre Dame..."

Coach Bubas injected at this time: "Dean forgets to point out his club is also in the Top Ten."

Smith, at this stage, showed real compassion for the Blue Devils.

When Hack Tison entered Duke as a freshman, recalled Smith, "he was billed as a seven foot center. I noticed the most recent Duke roster. Tison is down to 6-10. Evidently he has shrunk two inches."

Bubas accused Carolina of unfair tactics. Said the Tar Heels were using an airplane named Billy Cunningham. Commented Vic: "Cunningham leaps in the air and just hangs there."

LENGTHY STAY: The Big Four coaches pulled forth a sharp needle in the discussion of Billy Galantai. "Galantai has been at Carolina since the invention of basketball," one injected. "He has been there through several wars."

Coach Smith agreed that the name Galantai had been familiar for some time, but noted that the sizable lad first entered at Chapel Hill, then switched off to Wilmington College for a spell.

"He actually has been at Carolina only two terms," said Smith. "Eisenhower's and Kennedy's."

League To Hear Mrs. Chanlett

"Alliance for Progress; A New Concept in Foreign Aid," will be the subject of a talk by Mrs. Emil T. Chanlett, U. S. delegate to the Inter-American Commission of Women and an alternate delegate to the United Nations seminar on Family Law, at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Peabody Hall auditorium.

Mrs. Chanlett, who was born in Brno, Czechoslovakia, lived in Brazil for a number of years before moving to Chapel Hill. She represented the League of Women Voters in South America as a consultant for the Overseas Education Fund in 1957 and 1959. From 1959 to 1961 she worked at the Institute of Latin American Studies at the University here. In 1961 she was appointed to her present post as U. S. Delegate to the Inter-American Commission of Women. She was recently named as an alternate delegate to the UN Seminar on Family Law and will attend a meeting of this group during the first two weeks of December in Bogota, Columbia.

Mrs. Chanlett feels that in the Alliance for Progress we are not trying to buy friendship but are attempting to help the people of South America to help themselves. She will discuss the philosophy behind the Alliance for Progress, and will also show how it has been received in OAS countries and how it has implemented.

This talk will be presented at the November General meeting of the Chapel Hill League of Women Voters which is open to the public.

Manning Speaker At DAR Meeting

Davie Poplar Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will meet Wednesday, at 3 p.m. at the home of Mrs. F. C. Shepard, 409 W. Cameron Street.

John T. Manning, attorney-at-law, guest speaker, will discuss the Proposed Constitutional Change and States Rights Amendment.

Co-hostesses will be Mrs. J. B. Linker, Mrs. H. H. Holbrook and Mrs. J. J. Wade.

Celeste Holm Will Appear On Tuesday

Celeste Holm, star of the theater, motion pictures and television, will appear in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m. Tuesday in her new theatrical program "With Love and Laughter." The general public will be admitted at 7:45 for $1.50 if space is available.

Appearing with Miss Holm will be Wesley Addy, Broadway and motion picture performer. The two, with a piano, will explore the question, "Has the relationship between men and women changed?" Music, comedy, and drama will highlight the performance, which draws from the writings of Shaw, Shakespeare, Richard Rodgers, and others.

Miss Holm made her Broadway debut as the lusty and light-hearted Ado Annie in Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Oklahoma!" Afterwards she starred in "Bloomer Girl" and then in Hollywood in "Gentlemen's Agreement," for which she won an Academy Award. Her other film successes include "Come to the Stable," "The Snake Pit," and "All About Eve."

Graveside Service For Mrs. Champion

Graveside services were held Thursday afternoon for Mrs. Edna C. Champion of Chapel Hill, who died Tuesday night in Memorial Hospital after a brief illness. Mrs. Champion, formerly of Fayetteville, was 63.

The services were conducted at Chapel Hill Memorial Cemetery by the Rev. Clyde McCarver.

Mrs. Champion had lived here at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert B. Midgette, for the past two years.

Surviving are her daughter; two sisters, Mrs. E. B. McDaniels of Taft, Calif., and Mrs. Olga Caldwell of San Francisco, Calif.; one brother, Wallace Ioeberg of Taft; and three grandchildren.

Some SAABs don't fly. But they're engineered as solidly as the ones that do.

Swedish Aircraft Company, Ltd. builds all kinds of SAABs. Some fly at Mach 2 and help defend Sweden. Others race the roads of Scandinavia, Europe and America; they get 28-38 mpg and win more rallies than any other car in the world. They are superbly engineered to traditional aircraft reliability and performance standards. SAAB automobiles have:

- 3-cylinder valveless engines (strange but amazingly efficient).
- front-wheel drive (superior road traction).
- abundant safety features (reinforced heavy steel unitized body, padded dash and visors, new dust-braking system, etc.).
- $265 worth of "standard extras" that other cars call options.
- a 2-year or 24,000-mile warranty on engine, transmission and differential.

If you've been wondering what happened to sound automotive engineering, you'll find a lot of it went to Sweden. But it's come back. And our 1964 SAAB has it. Only $1895 p.a.s.
