Town Aldermen, Planners Discuss Sign Restrictions

The Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen and Planning Board in a joint quarterly hearing Monday night, considered the sign size formula for regional commercial and suburban commercial districts proposed by the planners.

The new formula would ease the present restrictions on signs in these zones. It was worked out by the planners some weeks ago.

Ted Danziger objected to the formula, and suggested that a provision be made for signs for businesses set closer to front property lines than the formula anticipates. Mr. Danziger was referring to his Ranch House Restaurant, which has a non-conforming front yard.

The formula may be considered arithmetically taxing by persons with a non-mathematical turn of mind. According to the formula, the area of a sign would be one-twelfth the distance from the center of the right-way a business faces to the center of the base of the sign, squared. Signs would be allowed as close as 15 feet to a 175-foot or wider right-of-way, no closer than 25 feet to a narrower right-of-way.

The matter was referred to the Planning Board for further consideration.

The planners and the Aldermen also heard objection to a requested rezoning on Eastwood

Lake Road from residents of the area.

C. A. Ellinger has requested rezoning of 9.68 acres on the East side of Eastwood Lake road between Franklin Street and the Old Oxford Road from Agricultural to RA-10. Mr. Ellinger did not state what he intends to do with the land, but objections were based on the assumption that he plans to subdivide.

Objections were only to the rezoning as requested. Residents of Lake Forest and Coker Hills, which are zoned RA-20, gave their opinion that land in the same area should be zoned higher than RA-10.

The matter was referred to the Planning Board for further consideration.

Three discrepancies in the Zoning Ordinance were considered for correction, as recommended by the planners.

The planners recommended a change in wording which at the moment permits parking in suburban commercial, regional commercial and industrial front yards, as well as requiring parking space in back yards. The planners do not intend that parking be permitted in front yards in these zones.

Ted Danziger objected, stating that building close to the front property line should be able to provide parking just as close to the property line as the building itself.

The planners recommended amendment of the definition section of the Zoning Ordinance to bring the definition therein of a land fill into conformity with the definition of a land fill in the Table of Regulations for Special Use Permits.

The planners also recommended that a discrepancy in building height regulations be eliminated, which states that in suburban commercial and central business zones a building can be built up to the side property line, but that the height of the building can be no more than the sideyard distance.

The planners' recommendation was that in the central business district, buildings be built up to the side property line if desired, but that in suburban commercial zones the sideyard must be equal to the height of the building.

Mr. Danziger again objected, asking that the central business district rule be applied also to suburban commercial zones.

All three discrepancy recommendations were referred back to the Planning Board.

Law Review Prints Civil Rights Articles

The North Carolina Law Review, published here by the University of North Carolina Press, will contain a series of articles on "Civil Rights and the South" in its first quarterly issue of the academic year to come out in late December.

The project is unique because a U. S. law review has never before completed a series of essays on this topic, according to George C. Cochran, UNC Law School senior and editor in chief of the Law Review.

"We decided that civil rights was something that the South needed education on and what North Carolina needed education on," said the Maysville, Ky., senior.

The special articles on civil rights will be contributed mainly by legal experts. The material, covering the various points of view regarding the civil rights problem, will be presented in such a way that any member of the interested public can understand it, according to Cochran.

The members of the Law Review staff are calling the special series a symposium.

To meet demands for reprints of this symposium which have come from most states throughout the country, the Law Review editors are having reprints made of the article. The reprints will be available for distribution in early December.

U. S. Attorney-General Robert F. Kennedy will write the introduction for the symposium. Other contributors and their topics are: U. S. Senator Sam J. Ervin and Harvard Prof. Arthur E. Sutherland on the constitutionality of the proposed civil rights legislation; Martin E. Sloane of the U. S. Housing and Home Finance Agency on civil rights and housing; John G. Field of the Potomac Institute, on equal employment; constitutional lawyer R. Carter Pittman on the import of the Brown decision; Berl E. Bernhard, staff director of the U. S. Civil Rights Commission, on the commission after five years; Lawrence W. Knowles, former attorney advisor of the U. S. Civil Rights Commission, now a professor at the University of Louisville, on school desegregation; Charles J. Bloch, constitutional lawyer, on property rights; M. A. Wright, vice president of the Southern Regional Council, on sociological aspects of integration; and Paul R. Ervin, former member of the Civil Rights Commission's 50-state advisory committee, on integration in North Carolina.
