

Eric Salmon Will Speak Wednesday

The newly created Division of Fine Arts of the University will sponsor a lecture by visiting British director Eric Salmon at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Gerrard Hall. Mr. Salmon will speak on the topic, "Are the Young Men Still Angry?" The lecture is described as a reappraisal of British theatre since John Osborne's famous drama of the "Angry young men" entitled "Look Back in Anger."

Mr. Salmon is currently on the campus of the University under the joint auspices of the Department of Dramatic Art and Radio, Television, and Motion Pictures. His experience in the theatre includes the areas of acting, directing, lecturing and playwriting. Among his many directing credits in both England and the United States are "Coriolanus," "School for Scandal," Marlowe's "Edward II," and Shakespeare's "Henry IV, Part I." He has served as a lecturer and director at the University of Wisconsin and the University of Rhode Island in this country. At Wisconsin he directed "Great Plays in Rehearsal," a series of programs for National Educational Television. He is the author of several plays and, with his wife, actress Janet Crowder, he has given numerous recitals of poetry and dramatic readings in England and the United States.

While at the University, Mr. Salmon has appeared as guest lecturer in several courses offered by the two departments which share his sponsorship. He has also conducted a number of workshops in acting and directing. Plans for the future include the direction of a full length drama to be produced on television during the spring semester.

Seniors Win 'Powderpuff'

By EVE CAMPBELL AND GAIL POE

Wednesday afternoon the senior girls defeated the junior girls 12-6 in the third annual powderpuff football game at CHHS. The first score came late in the first quarter when "Jumpin'" Jane Graham intercepted a senior pass and ran for the only junior score. Both of the senior touchdowns were scored by quarterback Jill "Hopalong" Hickey.

Jane Pettis and Susan Barron acted as co-captains for the juniors while Susan Culbreth and Jill Hickey led the seniors. Jamie Gutierrez, Tony Chapin, Eugene Hines, and Tim Farmer coached the junior team and the winning seniors were coached by Glenn Blackburn, Grove Burnette, Phillip Partin, and Joe Dicostanzo.

There were a few revisions in the usual rules of football. For instance, the football field was about 150 feet long. Instead of tackling, the girls had rags in their back pockets which were pulled out to signify their being tackled.

Another big switch were the male cheerleaders dressed in the regular cheering uniforms. Dickie Dickinson, Peter Bream, Terry Blake, and Joe Spransy were among the boys cheering the seniors on, and Scott Thompson, Janson and Kern Buckner, Donnie Clark, and Steve Oakley cheered for the juniors.

During the half, junior and senior powderpuff kings were crowned. Mrs. Jane Basile crowned Donnie Clark as junior king and Phillip Partin as senior king.

Next Saturday night the sophomores will sponsor a Sadie Hawkins Dance, their first money-making project, in the high school gym. Also during the evening a Dogpatch Hootenanny with instrumental music will be held.

The girls will not only invite dates, but will also provide transportation and pay admission. It is hoped that those attending will dress in patched bluejeans, overalls and other similar styles.

Forty-five Y-Teens will be in the Christmas parade on Tuesday. The girls will be dressed in the colorful costumes of nursery rhyme characters that were used in the Macy's Parade in New York.

Public Health Art Show To Continue

Art and public health will continue a novel adventure in culture next year.

The second annual art exhibit in the corridors and offices of the University School of Public Health will extend through the 1964 calendar year.

The art show is open to all practicing artists in North Carolina and adjoining states. The first show this year—and ending next month—has 165 paintings by 100 artists.

Unlike some other art exhibits, the show here accepts all entries. However, each artist is limited to no more than two paintings.

Entry blanks are being mailed now to all participants in this year's show. Other interested artists may obtain entries by writing Mrs. Mary Hamilton at later date, will select on Feb. 1 the UNC School of Public Health.

A jury, to be announced at a the paintings to hang in the corridors and other public areas of the school. Other paintings will be used in faculty offices.

All offerings are for sale and the exhibit is open to the public.

Following this year's practice, the jury will select one or more pieces from the art collection for purchase by the school. The school this year bought an abstract oil, "Composition with Lake," by Joe Cox of the School of Design at N. C. State College in Raleigh.

The "daddy" of the art show here is Dr. Dan A. Okun, who found during his travels in Holland that the Dutch display works of art on their office walls rather than degrees, citations and Chamber of Commerce slogans. The innovation was welcomed when the School of Public Health opened its new building late last year.
