Lessen The Danger Of Christmas Fires

To lessen the danger of a disastrous Christmas tree fire, the National Arborist Association offers the following suggestions:

1. Choose a tree with pliant and lustrously green needles. Such needles are filled with moisture and are more fire-resistant than those that are dried, brittle and yellowish in color.
2. Keep the tree standing in a pail of water outdoors in a spot protected from the sun and wind until you are ready to set it up in the house.
3. Saw several inches off the base of the trunk before bringing the tree indoors. Place the tree in the coolest spot in the room, well away from a radiator or warm air vent.
4. Keep the container in the tree-stand filled with water during the entire time the tree is in the house. A surprising amount of water will be absorbed and retained in the needles.
5. Arrange the light bulbs on the tree so that none will be in direct contact with the needles. If the needles near a bulb start turning brown, change the location of the bulb.
6. If Christmas gifts are unwrapped near the tree, don't let the wrappings accumulate under the branches where a dropped match or a misplaced cigarette could start a serious fire.
7. Observe such precautions as using an electric outlet well away from the tree, inspecting the light cords for frayed or worn spots in the insulation, turning off the tree lights when you leave the house, and keeping a fire extinguisher where it can be reached easily and quickly in case it is needed.

DEAN RETIRES

Dr. Alan K. Manchester, a prominent Duke University official will retire from two administrative posts on Aug. 31, 1964, to devote full time to teaching and research.

Dr. Manchester will relinquish the posts of Dean of Trinity College and Associate Dean of Arts and Sciences, according to Dr. Douglas M. Knight, president of the University.

In announcing the retirement, Dr. Knight said a special faculty committee has been named to recommend a successor, and that the appointment of a new dean is expected by the end of the current academic year. Dr. Arlin Turner, chairman of the English Department, is committee chairman.
