SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY SHAW A VISITOR IN WINSTON-SALEM.

Distinguished Member President's Cabinet Spends Strenuous Day in the Twin-City

SHAW IS GIVEN A CORDIAL WELCOME

Arrival at the Union Station at 10 o'clock this morning. He was met by Reception Committee of the Chamber of Commerce and the Board of Trade and Taken for Automobile Ride Over the City.—At 11 o'clock he spoke at Elks' Auditorium. Visited Salem Academy at 2 o'clock. Was tendered Reception in City Club Rooms at 3.—Leaves for Salisbury.

Monday's Day.
Leslie M. Shaw, Secretary of the Treasury in President Roosevelt's cabinet and a possible presidential candidate in 1908, arrived in the city at 9 o'clock. During his stay in Winston-Salem he visited several manufacturing plants in the city, gave an address of two hours in the Elks' Auditorium, was given a reception at the rooms of the Twin-City Club and visited the Female College. It was a strenuous day for the distinguished visitor and he appeared to have enjoyed the visit as much as did the people of Winston-Salem in having him as their guest.

Gives Noisy Reception.
The train pulled into the station among its passengers Secretary Shaw, whistles in all sections of the city screamed a welcome, while Winston Cornet band and several citizens crowded the station. Shaw was taken in hand by the reception committee, of which Hon. A. Reynolds was chairman, and a tour of the city in an automobile, stopping at the plant of the R. J. Shanks Tobacco Company, where he was shown the manner in which cigars are manufactured.

At 11 o'clock Mr. Shaw delivered a speech at the Elks' Auditorium to an audience of some 800 people. There were a few ladies present. The audience was a representative one and for hours it gave him the closest attention. Shaw's speech was devoted entirely to the interests of the party of which he is a recognized leader, and an able presentation of the political issues of the day from the standpoint of a Republican. He was introduced by Col. W. A. Blair, vice-president of the Peoples' National

Mr. Shaw opened his address by saying that there was no quarrel between the Democratic and Republican parties—just a difference of opinion as to the best manner of making a country a grander and more prosperous land with each succeeding day. He said he was glad to come to Winston-Salem, as he understood that it seldom had a visitor from the cabinet invited to a cabinet meeting to make a speech here; therefore he felt honored with the cordial reception which he had been tendered. Mr. Shaw spoke in a general way of campaigns as conducted by the great political parties of today, saying that these campaigns were a waste of educating the people and before served a good purpose. He said an earnest plea for intelligent citizenship—not to let prejudice or habit lead into politics, but vote for men whose measures that would be of most benefit to the country and to the voter.

In the course of his plea for intelligent voting, he asked: "How shall the country be safe if we believe one way and vote another?" He said Republican policies were the best for the country and as evidence of this statement compared the administration of the Democrats and the Republicans.

The tariff question was discussed at length by the speaker. He went through figures to prove his assertion that protective tariff was most beneficial to this country. He claimed that the tariff of 1838 and 1892 were due to the measures passed by Democratic Congresses. He paid a tribute to President Cleveland as a man, but said that his administration was wrong on many important questions of government.

Mr. Shaw's sarcasm was used to his advantage when he reached that part of his speech in which the platforms were discussed. He said that the Democratic party had no platform today other than to elect themselves. He charged the Democratic party with inconsistency, saying that it was ready to jump on any old platform for a platform that it thought would win on. He said in 1892 the platform of the Democratic party was to trade in 1896, free silver; in 1900, free trade; in 1904, he didn't know what it was; and in 1908 the platform would be whatever Bryan thought it to be.

He took up Bryan and the Nebraska views on political issues. He said the Nebraska had been tendered a reception second to none ever received by a private citizen. He referred to Mr. Bryan in most complimentary terms and declared that the party could make a platform upon which Mr. Bryan would stand; that the party would make his own platform. He said that Jefferson, whom the Democrats claim as their founder, as opposed to Mr. Bryan's attitude in regard to the election of United States senators by a popular vote. Jefferson also was not in harmony with Mr. Bryan's views on the government ownership of railroads, said the speaker.

"Trusts," said Mr. Shaw, "are awful things on paper, and pretty bad things in fact," and the Republican party is the only party that has ever enacted an anti-trust law—the Sherman anti-trust law—"under which," declared the speaker, "unlawful trusts can and have been prosecuted." He said the greatest trouble was in being able to prove that a trust was a trust; that all that was needed was the evidence to prove the common belief and the combines would be punished. He ridiculed Bryan's theories as to the manner of destroying these combines, saying that individual liberty had to be guarded, and it was a most difficult task to prove some things that were generally believed to exist.

During Mr. Shaw's discussion of the government ownership theory, he was interrupted by J. P. Taylor, leader of the Socialist party in this county, who wanted to know if the government could operate the mail service and the revenue service so satisfactorily why could it not operate the railroads in a like manner. Mr. Shaw's answer was given to some extent on this question. He cited several instances where private enterprise had performed tasks in a much more satisfactory and expedient manner than the government could have done; that it would require $23,000,000,000 to buy the roads and the country would have to pay at least 4 per cent. interest on the money borrowed for this purchase, and even if the government could buy the roads he did not believe the theory would be right. Secretary Shaw's position on the government ownership idea was summed up in the following, which he delivered in a very slow, deliberate manner: "The government should see that each player gets a square deal, but it should not get in the game."

Mr. Shaw's speech was filled with anecdotes which kept the crowd in the best of humor. His sarcasm was keen and used to good effect, and taken as a whole, the speech was of that character which is seldom heard in this section from the lips of a Republican.

Secretary Shaw at Academy.
Secretary Shaw visited the Salem Academy and College at three o'clock this afternoon and briefly addressed the faculty and students and a few friends of the institution. Mr. Shaw was introduced by Postmaster C. A. Reynolds. The address was pleasing and happily received. The honored visitor was shown through the buildings and over the Academy grounds.

Reception at Twin-City Club.
At 3:45 this afternoon a delightful reception was tendered Secretary Shaw at the Twin-City Club. Many of Winston-Salem's representative citizens were present and for an hour and a half hospitality reigned supreme. The honored guest entertained the crowd by relating many amusing stories, as well as interesting stories and jokes.

Mr. Shaw left on the 5:03 train for Salisbury, where he speaks tonight.

NO STATEMENT YET BY SENATOR BAILEY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Senator Bailey, of Texas, apparently abandoned, at least for the present, his intention of issuing broadside against William J. Bryan's advocacy of government ownership of railroads. More than a week ago he stated in New York that on reaching Washington he would give out a statement. He returned to Washington Saturday and immediately set upon by an army of newspaper men. Last night he left for New York without making the promised statement. His hesitancy in the matter, it is believed here, is due to the fact that Bailey, as other leaders of the party in the South, will labor privately with Bryan to get him to sidetrack his government ownership of railroad views.

In this connection there is some significance in an interview given out this morning by Senator Raynor, of Maryland, who says: "I do not think, in reading over Bryan's speech, he has come to the unalterable conclusion upon the subject of government ownership of railroads. He regards it as a question for future and so do a great many other people, but he makes no imperative demand that it must be placed in the platform or accepted as a policy of the party."

Looking for His Cow.
Last week County Commissioner D. W. Harmon, of Kernersville, purchased a fine cow from his associate on the board, Dr. E. F. Strickland, of Bethania. The animal was driven from Bethania to Kernersville Saturday. That night the cow broke out of the barn, knocking down the door and then a gate. Mr. Harmon and his uncle, Rufus H. Harmon, tracked the animal to East Salem. The new owner is persuaded to believe that the cow is endeavoring to get back to her old home, where she left a young calf. The animal is a valuable one and Mr. Harmon is willing to pay a reward for her return or information leading to recovery.

Later—Upon his return home today Mr. Harmon found his cow. The animal had been taken up by a farmer.

ELECTIONS IN STATE OF MAINE.

Democrats Are Much Encouraged By The Showing They Made Monday.

Majority of the Republican Candidate for Governor the Smallest Any Republican Candidate for This Office Has Had Since 1882.—Congressman Littlefield Has Majority of 1100 Votes, a Considerable Decrease from His Majority in 1904.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 11.—While the Democrats of Maine are telling their countrymen that the result of yesterday's election pre-argues a general movement toward the old party which will culminate in a Democratic national victory in 1908, the Republicans insist that a reduction of Governor Cobb's majority was due to local causes only. Cobb's majority is 7,500, the smallest the party ever received since it captured the state from the Greenbackers in 1882. Cobb's and his managers declare that the Democratic gains must be accounted for mainly by the unpopularity of liquor legislation. As evidence of this they point to the result in cities and large villages, nearly all of which went Democratic. Had it not been for the small towns Cyrus W. Davis, Democratic candidate, would have been elected governor.

Congressman Littlefield's majority is 1100. Portland, the largest city in the state, elected its entire Democratic county ticket with a solid Democratic representation in the legislature.

Federation Encouraged.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—At headquarters of the American Federation of Labor the narrow escape of Representative Littlefield, of Maine, from defeat in yesterday's election, is regarded as a victory for Gompers and his fellow spell-binders. They point out the fact that although Secretary Taft, Speaker Cannon, Senator Beveridge and other top-notch Republicans went to the field for Littlefield, the latter's plurality was cut down nearly five thousand. It is stated that the campaign against other candidates alleged to be unfriendly to the demands of organized labor will be conducted with renewed energy.

MAN DEAD WITH PISTOL AT SIDE.

GREENSBORO, Sept. 11.—Watt C. Cavill, Southern, whose home is in this city, was found dead six miles south of Reidsville yesterday morning. By his side a pistol was lying, and in his head was a bullet hole. The bullet had entered his brain and caused instant death. It is thought that it was suicide.

The man left home early Sunday morning without telling his wife where he was going. She was greatly shocked when the message announcing his death reached her yesterday evening.

Southern was for some time in employ of the Wyland-Newman Machine Company. His fellow-workers say that he had often spoken of ending his life, but no one gave him any attention, thinking that he was only jesting.

Warns Wealthy Men.
CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 3.—John D. Rockefeller sat in the Euclid Avenue Baptist church yesterday and heard his pastor, the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, inveigh against "money riches."

"Some of the poorest people I know are the richest, in a money sense," said the preacher, and all eyes turned toward Mr. Rockefeller. There was a smile on his face and an almost imperceptible nod, as if he agreed with the sentiment.

Dr. Eaton said the world was richer than ever from the viewpoint of money, but in the race for wealth men had failed to build for the hereafter.

"Men today in their fight for wealth and recognition have turned their backs upon the oldtime sanctuary of the soul; have shut their hearts to all but the call of gold," said the pastor. "They may have wealth of goods, position, recognition. They may be judged great world powers, but most of them are poor, miserably poor, I say. They are not living for the hereafter."

Dr. Eaton said the public today based everything upon a monetary value, but money was the last of all things needed in life. He would put first sanctuary of the soul, love of the beautiful, knowledge, power, and last of all, money.
