PRINTERS OF LONG AGO WERE PROGRESSIVELY BUILDING FOR FUTURE

The picture above is that of the Charlotte Typographical Union on parade back in the '80's—in the good old "horse and buggy" days.
Quite a large number of printers were employed on the newspapers and in commercial shops back in those days. All the type was then set by hand and long hours were required to produce the type for the daily papers. Members of the Typographical Union were foremost in promoting better working conditions for American workers.
The Typographical Union is the oldest in America. It was the in-itiator of plans to form the American Labor Movement which resulted in the setting up of the American Federation of Labor.
Like Uncle Sam it has quite a few thousands of sons and daughters, nephews and nieces. It is proud of its contribution to the betterment of working conditions for all American workers. Today it has closed shop agreements throughout the United States and Canada and its business with the newspapers and commercial shops is carried on in a business-like and dignified manner. William M. Witter, for many years publisher of The Charlotte Labor Journal, who has retired, is one of perhaps two living charter members of Charlotte Typographical Union. He resides at 600 Marsh Road, Charlotte.

The Union today is headed by Claude L. Albee, president; C. J.
Pridgen, vice president; O. N. Burgess, secretary-treasurer; H. L.
Beatty, recording secretary, and H. B. Alexander, sergeant-at-arms.

PENNSY BALLOTING CON- CLUDED; BIG TASK OF COUNTING STARTS

Philadelphia, Pa.—After nearly a month of balloting, National Mediation Board crews this week wound up the big collective bargaining election among 50,000 shopmen on the Pennsylvania.

Those voting by mail still have a few days to get in their ballots.
However, the job of counting the returns will be a huge one.

First, mediators must check the signatures on the outer envelopes of all mail ballots against names in eight big books containing the carrier's shop payroll.
This is done to guard against any irregularities.

That will take at least a week.
After checking, the mail ballots are thrown with those cast at the polls, and then actual tallying will start. Board officials estimated the final count won't be available until the second week in May.
