AFL TELEGRAPHERS' UNION WINS 8-CENT RAISE IN PAY

Washington, D. C. — Adolph Brungs, president of the Western Union Division of the AFL's Commercial Telegraphers' Union, announced the settlement of its wage dispute with the Western Union Company.

Union members voted to ratify an 8-cent wage increase offered by the company. Mr. Brungs said that more than the necessary two-thirds of the union's membership voted for the settlement at local meetings held throughout the country.

Ratification by the union brought to an end the threats of a nation-wide strike which appeared imminent last December, but which was averted when the company agreed at the last minute to submit the issues to a fact-finding panel. Final agreement on the wage question was reached by the parties prior to action by the panel.

The settlement, effective April 1 affects about 40,000 employees in the bargaining unit, which excludes New York City.
