For Women Only

By POLLY EDISON for L.L.P.E.

Topic A.
These days everyone seems to be sounding off about us women. What to do for and about us threatens to become Topic A. Among the advice we liked best is what the Dean of Women at Columbia University had to say. When we're downhearted, she recommends we remember Mother Eve. "She worked hard, worried about her family, and founded the human race. All this, for an orphan without psychologists to adjust her, is pretty good going and we'd better set out after her."

High Level
In Utah's 2nd District, two women ran against one another for Congress. The outstanding feature of their battle was the high level on which they fought it out. They stuck to the issues, did not indulge in personalities. Conceding her defeat, Mrs. Ivy Priest, the Republican candidate, congratulated her victorious opponent; Democrat Reva Beck Bosone, for conducting a "clean campaign."

More Praise
A chairman of one of the large railroads complimented his women employes for their graciousness, poise and dignity. It was their viewpoints, he pointed out, that were responsible for many of the new features in today's modern trains.

A Long Way
And Ms. Eleanor Roosevelt, who believes in us, says we've come a long way. As proof, she refers to the position of women in the UN as advisers, heads of commissions and delegates. "They have graduated," she says, "from exclusion from business and the professions to almost complete acceptance and equality and are now generally treated as virtually on a par with men in the political world at home and abroad."

Peace and Progress
In two recent speeches by public officials, we found much food for thought. Associate Justice William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court urged us to invest in international progress, not only money, but also sympathy

EMPTY LIVES
We see so many empty lives, Throughout the land today, Where nothing great and noble thrives,
Nor goodness seems to stay, Until we wonder what to do To help the sinful throngs, That they might have a higher view
And overcome their wrongs. They're empty of the love of God, Of grace that is Divine, And so the path of sin they trod Where glories never shine; Nor where true values fill the soul,
Nor beauty's found the most, But where the gems of life are stole
By Satan and his host. They're empty of the finest traits, Of righteousness and truth, But take the way our Master hates That wrecks them in their youth. They're empty of uplifting aims,

Who oft resort to idle games
That bring them to their fate.

O empty soul and heart and mind,
There is a pathway bright,
