Now you don't need fishhooks lining your pockets!

If you've always needed a sharp reminder not to squander your dough, borrow your wife's scissors right now.

You're not going to need fishhooks in your pockets any more after—

You sign up for U. S. Savings Bonds under your firm's Payroll Savings Plan or your bank's Bond-A-Month Plan. Then, the temptation to blow a buck on something you don't need won't mean a thing. Your savings will be taken care of automatically and regularly.

And thanks to the magic of compound interest, every $3 you put into this investment grows into a whopping $4 in 10 years.

So start using those fishhooks for fishing and have yourself some fun. They're biting good!

HOW MUCH LONGER IS BUTLER GOING TO SIT IN THE U. S. SENATE?

How much longer will John Butler (R., Md.) be allowed to remain in the Senate?

Butler's campaign manager, Jon Jonkel, pleaded guilty in Baltimore Criminal Court June 4 to six violations of the Maryland elections laws. He was fined $5,000.

Jonkel disregarded the law while working last year to elect Butler. Butler defeated Sen. Millard Tydings (D.). Jonkel bragged to a Senate Elections Subcommittee in March he practically put Butler into office single-handedly.

Butler is a stooge for Sen. Joseph McCarthy (R., Wis.) and Col. Robert Robert McCormick, who runs the Chicago Tribune, New York Daily News, and Washington Times Herald.

Although law violations were a part of Butler's campaign, the other 95 Senators refuse to kick him out of "the world's most exclusive club." Only Senators themselves can decide who is fit to sit in the Senate.

Trade unionists supported neither Butler nor Tydings. Both are anti-labor. But no trade unionist wants to see people like Jonkel, McCarthy and McCormick do to anyone what they did to Tydings in order to elect a stooge.

Jonkel failed to report $27,100 in campaign contributions until hearings on the Maryland Senate election began last February. Such reports are required under Maryland law within 30 days after an election.

The Federal election laws are about the same as those in Maryland. That means Jonkel probably violated Federal laws. It is not certain whether he will be prosecuted for the Federal violations.

Jonkel is a former Chicago press agent who was imported to Maryland to do a hatchet job on Tydings by Mrs. Ruth McCormick Miller Tankersley, a niece of Col. McCormick and ex-editor of the Washington Times-Herald.

The Senate Elections subcommittee investigated the Maryland campaign last winter and spring. It is expected to issue a report soon.

A fake picture showing Communist leader Earl Browder and Tydings in intimate conversation figured prominently in the campaign. Jonkel took full responsibility for the phony photo, published in a campaign paper prepared and printed by the Times-Herald.

Again, we ask: How much longer will Sen. Butler be allowed to remain in the U. S. Senate?

MAY BUILDING PERMITS TOTAL OVER $10 MILLION

Non-residential building authorized during May included 31 stores, 18 factory buildings, three school buildings, two public utilities, one public building, 13 office buildings, two institutional buildings, 49 private garages, three commercial garages, two service stations, ten churches and one recreation building.

The total amount of non-residential building authorized during May was nearly twice that of April. However, addition, alteration and repair jobs were down to less than half of the April total. The amount for housing was down about a half-million dollars from the April figure. Charlotte and Raleigh reported permits totaling more than $1 million. All other cities and towns were below $1 million.

New Controls Needed Over Defense Production

The need for increasing controls over defense production was explained by NPA Administrator Manly Fleischmann during an interview on the CBS television program, "The Facts We Face," on May 6.

Transition from the present controls imposed through simple limitation orders to more detailed controls under the Controlled Materials Plan beginning in July has become necessary, Mr. Fleischmann said, to insure that end-products for defense purposes will be delivered on schedule.

"We do not want to face a situation," he said, "where a tank is inoperative because it lacks a hearing; or an airplane isn't functioning because it lacks an aluminum fitting; or a radar device is unable to operate because of the need for copper."

1952 Will Be Critical Year
Mr. Fleischmann predicted that the full effect of CMP will not be felt until next year when "shortages will be most intense." He pointed out that more than $8 billion dollars in military orders will be placed between now and June, 1952, and this will make controls "more than ever necessary."

"If we are not forced into all-out war," he added, "it may very well be possible to relax controls by early 1953."

The heart of the defense program, Mr. Fleischmann said, is to increase our supply of materials so that we can have both a top-flight military establishment and a high civilian economy.

Two approaches, he said, are being taken to accomplish these objectives: (1) conservation of materials by restricting non-essential uses and by stockpiling, and (2) expansion of our production resources.

Bigger Production Goals Set
"It is almost unbelievable how much American industry has already grown," he stated, "but it still isn't enough to do our present job."

"For example, we were producing steel at the rate of 100 million tons a year in June, 1950. Our goal is 117 million tons by 1953. We had 750 thousand tons of aluminum capacity in June last year. Our goal by 1953 is 1,300,000 tons."

"While we have steadily increased our electric power production capacity to the high figure of 67,500,000 kilowatts, we need 22 million more kilowatts."

Mr. Fleischmann reviewed the help that Government has given private industry in plant expansion through quick tax write-offs and by lending funds or guaranteeing loans. He expressed the opinion that these aids "may not be enough."

Asked whether an over-expansion of our industrial machine might not plunge the nation into a severe depression, Mr. Fleischmann answered:

"I do not think so. I do not agree that any nation can ever over-produce. Productive effort is what increases the standards of living of everyone. I do not believe a strong nation, like the United States, will ever waste its ability to create."

GEORGE M. HARRISON IS RE-ELECTED BY RAIL CLERKS SAN FRANCISCO.—The AFL Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks re-elected AFL Vice-President George M. Harrison to another term at the quadrennial convention.

It voted a boost in the per capita tax to the grand lodge from 70 cents to $1, first increase in 10 years, and adopted a comprehensive act of future goals.

A calm but implacable determination to carry on the progress of the past characterized the 19th regular convention attended by 1,138 delegates, the largest assembly in the unit's history.
