

Hugo Sims Says:

YUGOSLAVIA DEFENDS NATO
 A so-called Peace Congress, meeting in Zagreb, Yugoslavia, heard Dr. Josip Vidmar, Yugoslavian official, assert that the last war had hardly subsided when the Soviet Government embarked on a new expansionist policy.

Continuing his theme, Dr. Vidmar pointed out that, in 1948, in addition to Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria, the Soviet Union wanted to subjugate Yugoslavia. Consequently, he said, the world was obliged to oppose "the pretensions of this imperialistic power."

The formation of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization he defended as a justified reaction against Soviet imperialism and said that the rapid rearmament of the world was inevitable despite the "peaceful slogans" that the Soviet Union says it operates upon.

While the Yugoslavian advocated the liberation of colonial and semi-colonial peoples, he reminded the delegates, who came from a number of countries, that the Soviet Union has "its subject colonial and semi-colonial peoples." He called attention to the fate of Baltic and Caucasian peoples, including the Georgians, and the situation that exists in the satellite states of the Soviet Union. These people, he added, have a semi-colonial status."

WINNIE, THE WINNER

The Labor Government, which has ruled Great Britain since 1945, now gives place to the new ministry of the Conservative Party, headed by the veteran statesman, Winston Churchill. The contest was much closer than generally expected but the Conservatives captured a majority of the membership of the House of Commons.

The British election machinery does not take long to put into effect the result of the voting. The new House of Commons assembles six days after the voting and, in less than two weeks, comes the state opening of Parliament. Immediately upon ascertaining the result of the election, the newly-elected Party is called upon to form its government.

Elections in Great Britain are not set by the calendar. In 1945, the Labor Party overwhelmed the electorate with its argument and went into office with an overwhelming majority. In February of last year, it submitted its cause to a general election and managed to win control of the House by less than ten votes. Since the election, something like a split developed between Prime Minister Clement Attlee and one of his ministers, Aneurin Bevan, who objected to the rearmament program and full co-operation with the United States.

To Mr. Winston Churchill, the victory comes as a delightful morsel in his declining years. A veteran of the Boer War, in which he won fame as a newspaper correspondent, an active and influential member of the War Cabinet of the first World War, and head of the government which successfully concluded World War II, the great statesman was surprisingly defeated in 1945, when almost everybody thought that the triumph over Germany, Japan and Italy would give him a longer lease in office.

Mr. Churchill is undoubtedly one of the most remarkable men of his age. An effective public speaker, an accomplished writer of prose and a talented artist at the easel, his long and illustrious behaviour in public office will rank him with the outstanding British leaders of all ages.

The campaign recently concluded did not bristle with clear-cut issues between the two parties but the results constitute something of a setback to the program espoused by the Labor Party. No one expects the Conservatives, when they take office, to undo much of the social legislation which has been placed on the statute books of England but the process of nationalizing major industries will undoubtedly be slowed down.

In the field of foreign affairs, there is not likely to be any major change. The circumstances and conditions that now exist circumscribe the possibility of a strong and independent course in international affairs. Relations with the United States will be continued, as they were during the war and during the Attlee administration.

Mr. Churchill, however, will lend the charm of his personality and the background of his experience to the expression of these policies and, it may be that he will find it possible to restore some of the shattered prestige of the Empire in the far places of the earth.

WORSHIP THE KING

O worship the King, all glorious above!
 And gratefully sing His wonderful love;
 Our Shield and Defender, the Ancient of days,
 Pavilioned in splendor, and girded with praise.

O tell of His might, and sing of His grace,
 Whose robe is the light, whose canopy space;
 His chariots of wrath the deep thunder clouds form,
 And dark is His path on the wings of the storm.

Thy bountiful care what tongue can recite?
 It breathes in the air, it shines in the light,
 It streams from the hills, it descends to the plain,
 And sweetly distills in the dew and the rain.

Frail children of dust, and feeble as frail,
 In Thee do we trust, nor find Thee to fail;
 Thy mercies how tender; how firm to the end!
 Our Maker, Defender, Redeemer and Friend.

—Sir Robert Grant.

tyranny. He emphasized that labor must continue to take the lead in the fight against intolerance, bigotry and Communist aggression.

Freedom, like life itself, suddenly becomes very precious when there is danger of losing it. For many years now we Americans haven't thought much about our freedom, just as healthy people don't worry about sickness. But let us find out that our freedom is in danger—and we'll fight for it just as hard and just as stubbornly as our forefathers did.

Let them not have died in vain

ON ARMISTICE DAY, 1951, let us resolve that every day will be a day of remembering the men who died for us in Korea. And the lesson they gave their lives to teach us: peace is for the strong.

We must make it clear to all men of all nations that no possible gain can come from aggressive action. That we have built and are maintaining a superior strength. And that we stand ready to use that strength whenever our rights or freedom are imperiled.

We must build for our war dead a monument of strength which shall be, in turn, a monument of peace for our generation and those to come.

There is a job for peace that you can do. It's this: Back up our defense forces, and help keep America economically strong, by buying United States Defense Bonds. Buy them regularly—through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work or the Bond-A-Month Plan where you bank. Start today!
