Democrat Mr Fillmore does carry four or five small Southern States, and by this means the election of President is thrown into the House of Representatives, which is most certainly the nearest success his (Mr. Fillmore's) friends can hope to approach; who, yes, I say, who, among them all will be found bold enough to say that he is not chargable in a high degree for this much to-be-dreaded result. We are now speaking of an incidence which might, possibly happen, but it is with pleasure we say it will not probably happen. Should such a result be brought about what will be our condition then? Could the most sanguine of Mr. Fillmore's supporters hope to elect him by the Honse, composed as that House now is, he going there with the Electoral votes of only four or five States? Certainly not, for he would stand no more chance there than before the people if even so much .---The course then for every Southern man is clearly, almost to a demonstration, pointed out; and that is, to rally to the support of Mr. Buchanan, as the only available means by which Fremont, with his negro Worshippers and Black Republican Host, can be defeated and the Union preserved.

In making this appeal to Mr. Fillmore's Southern triends, I do not pretend, nor intend to ask them to forsake entirely, their old party or par ties, and join themselves permanent ly to the Democratic Party, I have no.
