NO 46.

AN INVITATION

When in the house the day is warm, And dogs lie stretched before the door, Come out to my nerlected farm. And sit upon the grassy floor.

Under the apr is trees' green roof. Laced with the vellow light of mouth. Share nature's joy without reproof. Thou man who art to trouble born!

Alas! 'tis said for price of gold The axe shall hew these leafy towers; The spade shall trample in the mould This fragrant grass, these dewy flowers.

And when this pleasure-house is waste, A mansion built for earthly care, For waiting days and tiresome haste, Shall lift a stately front in air.

And hear the bees among the haven'y the where the early moon entwines Her crescent in my bloomy house. Perhaps before the spade shall wound

This turf, to plant the cares of earth.

Then come, before the day declines,

A smaller plot of torf be found More green to tell our noble birth. Then hasten ere the day shall die. And lay the heart to summer's bliss, And learn whatever joys may fly,

To know the permanence of this.
