which the people of the South are resenting, is the efforts of some to sell them imitations of the real Simmons Liver Regulator, because they make more money by the imitation; and they care little that they swindle the people in selling them an inferior article.

FROM SHADOW--SUN.

I learn as the years roll onward And leave the past behind, That much I have counted sorrow But proves that our God is kind;

The clouds but cover the sunshine, They cannot banish the sun; And the earth shines out the brighter When the weary rain is done.

We must live through the dreary winter If we would value the spring; And the woods must be cold and silent Before the robins sing.

So the heart from the hardest trial Gains the purest joy of all, And from lips that have tasted sadness The sweetest songs will fall.

"How to Live Long." Dr. Richardson, an English scientist of high degree, has been giving to the world some advice which, if followed strictly, he thinks, there is no reason why a large number of people may not live to see 100 or more years and yet lose but little of the bloom of youth.

Briefly stated as the Atlanta Journal remarks, his ideas of the means to be employed to attain such an end are a life of serene cheerfulness and scientific physical culture.

He looks upon extreme physical vigor as an art to be learned like dancing or whist. The muscles may be cultivated like early vegetables, and with results almost as astonishing.

Nobody need be afflicted with a torpid liver, imperfect lungs or flaccid muscles. In every man there is a possible Hercules.

Man may make his body a finely strung and exquisitely poised machine, with every part graceful in contour and in a state of perfect working efficiency.

He argues that no man need be particularly abstemious in regard to the use of any particular food, all that is necessary is the cultivation of a happy disposition, linked with plenty of sleep, physical exercise, and that all appetites shall be temperately indulged.

Breathing should be done scientifically and a daily cold bath should be taken.

We take care of our health, we lay up money, we make our roof tight and our clothing sufficient, but who provides wisely that he shall not be wanting in the best property of all—friends.

A HEROINE OF '63. MISS CARRIE E. CUTTER.

The Only Lady Furnished with a Soldier's Headstone.

New Berne Journal 14th. EDITOR JOURNAL.—Having arrived in town for the purpose of visiting the National Cemetery here located, my attention was called to certain statements in the "New Berne City Directory, 1893," concerning my late sister, Miss Carrie E. Cutter, nurse, 21st Regt. Mass. Vols.

Miss Carrie E. Cutter, daughter of Surgeon Calvin Cutter, author of Cutter's School Physiologies, was born in New Hampshire, July 28th, 1843. She was educated at Prof. Russell's Private Seminary at Lancaster, Mass., at Mount Holyoke Female Seminary, Mass., and at a Private German School in Pennsylvania.

In the month of October, 1861, at her earnest, repeated requests she was permitted to join her father in camp at the Naval Academy, Annapolis. When the Burnside Expedition was ready to sail, her elderly lady companion, Mrs. Studley, decided not to go forward.

During the action at Roanoke Island, Feb. 8th, she was on board the "North-erner" caring for a dying scout—a man who enlisted from her home-town, Charles Plummer Tidd. This scout had lived in my father's family from 1860 to the time of his enlistment in the 21st Regt. in July, 1861.

After the action at Roanoke Island, Miss Carrie went ashore and labored untiringly in the care of the sick and the wounded. Being able to use the German language she had special charge of three young Germans, who in their delirium, had forgotten the English language.

By order of Gen'l. Burnside her remains were forwarded on a special steamer to Roanoke Island where she was buried with the military honors bestowed upon a colonel. At her request she was interred by the side of her friend, Orderly Sergeant Charles P. Tidd.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable.

Guiding Principles.

Men of mature minds who are distinguished for prompt decision of moral, social and political questions are men who have developed fixed principles from their experiences.

With there are some men without principles; they are so politic that they change their opinions to meet every exigency as it arises; they have no fixed notions as to right or wrong, and hence are irresolute and uncertain.

The man with strong beliefs has character and the man of determination must have guiding principles. The young man who wants to become a guide and teacher, one who leads rather than follows, must develop these qualities.

The stock of principles thus gained will grow gradually until they form a kind of philosophy ingrained in the fibre of one's being. The young man can not be expected to exhibit such philosophy at the outset of his career, but when he has reached maturity if he should possess it he will be a leader of his fellows.

But against all this reactionary spirit and sluggish statesmanship the New South is persistently coming to the front. We have had the "boom measles" and the "bankruptcy mumps" and between the two we have, we trust, cut our wisdom teeth.

Par example, who would have dreamed, in ante-bellum days, of New Orleans claiming and contesting for her proper rating as one of the "manufacturing cities of the Union?"

Give a child the habit of sacredly regarding the truth, of carefully respecting the property of others, of scrupulously abstaining from all acts of improvidence which can involve him in distress, and he will just as likely think of rushing into an element in which he can not breathe, as of lying, or cheating, or stealing.

There is a foolish resistance in some minds against the "New South" idea, but the "New South" transformation is inevitable. The sentiment for the old south may linger and be long in decadence, but the common sense of the new South is imminent, irrefragable, inevitable.

The Inevitable New South.

There is a foolish resistance in some minds against the "New South" idea, but the "New South" transformation is inevitable. The sentiment for the old south may linger and be long in decadence, but the common sense of the new South is imminent, irrefragable, inevitable.

The old South of slavery, of secession and harvest only, of cotton seasons and social symposia, of factorage finances, yearly credits and omnipresent politics, is dead. The new south of freedom, of diversified industries, of the development of natural resources and the manipulation of raw materials, of daily energy and monthly accountings, of measures superior to men and prosperity supreme over politics and partisanship, is here.

That man is a "fool"osopher, not a philosopher, who refuses to recognize these facts, and sets himself to deny and defy them. The signs of the times are infallible. The unrest and repression of years have broken through all restraints in Alabama, in South Carolina, in North Carolina, in Tennessee, and are struggling out of bondage, slowly but surely, in other states of the south.

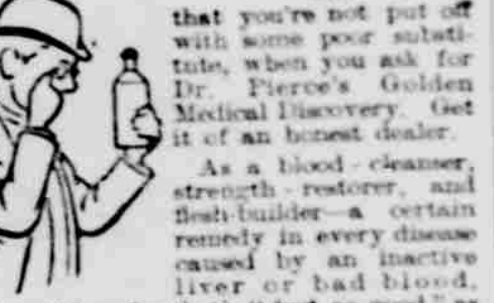

It is the consensus of every true statistician, statesman and industrial expert that the south is the richest and most promising field on the globe for enterprises of every profitable kind and for the rapid accumulation of wealth and the powers that inhere in wealth.

But against all this reactionary spirit and sluggish statesmanship the New South is persistently coming to the front. We have had the "boom measles" and the "bankruptcy mumps" and between the two we have, we trust, cut our wisdom teeth.
