Are trembling in your breast. While fortune beckons just before, While hope is in the van. Resolve with all your strength and soul

> The best you can ! The time will come. When that will seem too small-Ambition scarcely worth the pains, So grievous is its fall; To pick the scattered fragments up [-Accept the altered plan ! It almost needs a hero's heart To do the best you can ! Dangers and downfalls lie in store For every soul alive, And life, in truth, is not a case Of three and two are live. But trust me, be, and only he, Is wiser than the rest, Who puts his shoulder to the wheel And simply does his best.

> Some chance is always left at hand, If not the chance we sought, And none can tell what good may fall From the least deed or thought. Then take the troubles as they come, Acquit you like a man. Accept your past with all your heart, And do the best you can ! Comfort at Home.
