what will be the tone of and the recommendations contained in the message In one special we are told that the document will be an earnest appeal for peace, and in another that it will be distinctively aggressive. This triend and confidant of the President is quoted as saying that he will push the Maine disaster to the front, and that one is given as authority that he will continue to treat the whole subject of the exfrom other issues. Here we are informed that he will make no recommendations at all, but simply review all the facts in the case ; there it is affirmed that he will not only make various recommendations, but back his recommendations by communicating impor tant information bearing upon certain features of the situation that he has nificance of which even some of his
