Trusts touch the interesta of eyery class of eitizens in the land, but they operate with stronger emphasis against the poor than any othera. Those who are forceit to live by their daily toll, on seant wages at that, suffer more than ses
those whose station and circumstances in life are better. One trust that operates with tremendous force against the poor, is the paper trust. If there is any elass of persons in the world for whom reading and literature ought to become cheap, it ts the poor, be they in the cities and towns or in the rural in the cities and towns or in the rur district. Among the poor of tr country are many farmers, and the tru on paper has the tendency to make oven the country weekly come higher, and thus ralse it a little out of reach of the farmer. And the only reason the country papers are not higher than they are is because their editiors are suffering the loss which comes from the operation of the trust. It is nothis subject to change in price any day.
All this works a hardship to th and newspaper man and printer; and are clear in our conviction that new paper work and general printing are don at lose profit now'than eyer before in th
