

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.

When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

POISON CURE FOR...

FORT MOULTRIE.

Harriet Hobson Dougherty.

"What shall withstand the great decree, When a brave nation will be free?"

STANDING on Charleston's beautiful old Battery, and looking over the historic harbor, one sees a narrow strip of land lying far out near the bar on the left, the yellow sand seeming to rise but little above the world of tossing, surging water around it. A small and insignificant place it seems, but around the little pile of sand there clusters some of our country's most tragic history, while linked with the name of Sullivan's Island, and old Fort Moultrie, is the undying fame of such men as Col. William Moultrie, Francis Marion, Sergeant Jasper and Governor Rutledge.

During the memorable year of 1776, when the patriotic Americans were battling so fiercely to throw off England's yoke, news came to South Carolina that the long-talked-of attack on the South was about to be made. Charleston was the principal Southern port, and if the beautiful old city and her magnificent harbor were once in possession of the British, it would give them an almost impregnable position right in the very heart of the Southern colonies. The matter was talked over at great length among the British commanders, and after being assured by the English Governor of South Carolina that the Continental army in the South was composed entirely of raw boys, who would run at the first gun fired by the trained British troops, it was determined to make a grand attack on the stately old "City by the Sea," and thus gain a firm foothold for England on Southern soil.

Wonderful plans were made, and a grand fleet of war vessels, carrying over two hundred and sixty guns, was put in fighting order and started toward the South. In the meantime Governor Rutledge had not been idle by any means, but had promptly fortified the city to the best of his ability, and then sent for the regiment commanded by that splendid fighting machine, Col. William Moultrie. As a result in a short time from the banks of the beautiful Winyah Bay came marching into Charleston a body of determined men, clad in buff and blue, who represented the noblest names of the proud old Palmetto State, and had vowed everything they had—their princely fortunes and their very lives—to freedom's cause.

"Colonel Moultrie, I want you to build a fort on Sullivan's Island and keep the British from reaching the city," was the curt order the Governor gave the minute his eyes rested on the tall, stately officer.

"Certainly, sir. Of what shall I build it?" came the reply.

"Of what?" answered Governor Rutledge, who knew well the man into whose capable hands he was putting not only the safety of the city, but of the whole South. "Of sand—mud—air—water—anything, only build a fort! Then get in it and hold it, even if all England, commanded by King George himself, should try to wrest it from you!"

"Certainly, sir!" came the imperious answer, and as the colonel turned away his companion, Capt. Francis Marion, saw the flash of battle in the quiet gray eyes that meant he would succeed in his heroic task, no matter what the cost might be.

The next few weeks Sullivan's Island was the scene of a strange and interesting activity. There was no hint of shade on this barren shore, and under the blazing tropic sky some of the handsomest young cavaliers in all the colony of South Carolina burrowed day after day in the burning sand, like gophers, laying the foundation of their fort. Then slowly the walls of that famous fortress began to rise and assume shape. They were built of palmetto logs, laid in parallel rows, sixteen feet apart, the inter-spaces being closely packed with sand, and places left for twenty-six large guns. Colonel Moultrie displayed rare wisdom in selecting the material for the fort, for he knew how little effect either shot or shell could have on the spongy fiber of his State's beautiful palm tree. Day after day the patriots toiled, until the faces of the men were burned almost black by the sun, and still their commander said nothing of his plans, seldom speaking except to give his curt orders, but smoked his pipe with a quiet twinkle in his eyes, as he listened to the numerous visitors, who cheerfully assured him that the very first broadside from the British ships would sweep his little fort off the face of the earth and into the depths of the sea. Only once was his habitual calm ruffled. Gen. Charles Lee was on a tour of inspection through the South, and that picturesque personage sailed across the harbor nearly every day to look contemptuously at the little fort and offer numerous suggestions.

"Hadin' you better build a bridge from the island to the mainland, Col. Moultrie?" he asked one day, a faint smooch on his handsome face, as he glanced superciliously about him.

"What for?" came the laconic query.

"Why, for your men to retreat over," replied Lee, little dreaming of the storm he had raised. There was silence for a second, and then with his eyes flashing gray fire, Col. Moultrie thundered in tones that drowned the roar of the surf, and made his men shake with inward mirth: "My soldiers know how to die, sir, but they have never learned to retreat! Governor Rutledge told me to build this fort and hold it, and I'll do it, though all Europe tried to take it from me."

The discomfited general put his hat on his handsome head, and muttering, "You are mad, uttely mad!" returned to Charleston, while Col. Moultrie put his pipe back in his mouth and went on serenely digging his postholes.

It was the latter part of June, 1776, that eight vessels of the British fleet, under command of Sir Peter Parker, crossed the bar and anchoring three hundred and fifty yards from the little, unfinished fort, opened a deadly fire from over a hundred guns. Inside Fort Moultrie were four hundred and thirty-five men, with only twenty-five guns and scarce twenty-eight rounds of powder. "Do all the damage you can, and hold that fort!" had been the governor's last message, and after ordering his men to strip to the waist, the better to withstand the torrid heat, Colonel Moultrie gave his final command before the battle, "Shoot to kill, and never give up." Three times the great guns of the British war vessels sent their thunder over the water, and still no sign of life came from the pile of palmetto logs, above which streamed a white flag with a blue crescent. Then as a cheer of triumph broke from the English sailors, Col. Moultrie sent his answering message over the waves—a deadly answer that swept the deck of Sir Peter's flagship from end to end, and left dead and wounded in its wake. For hours the battle raged, the little handful of South Carolinians fighting as surely men never fought before. Cut off from the city they were defending, exhausted by the frightful heat, almost out of ammunition, they fought stubbornly on with a coolness and determination that slowly, but surely, won the day. Men with entire limbs torn away loaded, aimed and fired their guns and then fell dead on the blood-soaked sand, their last word being "Liberty!" It was during this battle that Sergeant Jasper made his name immortal by leaping outside the wall and securing the flag, which had been shot away. Then, as the sun went slowly down, the disabled English fleet moved sullenly back, and with its wounded commander groaning as his flagship slowly sailed away, and for three years the South was free from British invasion.

Congress made Col. Moultrie a brigadier-general for his success, and named the fort in his honor, while in the Palmetto seal of his own State his victory was a lasting commemoration. After the revolution the old fort gradually fell into decay, until it was little more than a pile of ruins. Then, after many years, the government had it restored on the old plan, and in 1860, when the war cloud burst over the South, it was occupied by a United States force, under command of Maj. Robert Anderson, who, feeling that he would soon require a stronger fortress, removed on December 26, 1860, to Fort Sumter.

Fort Moultrie is now but a pile of ruins, with little to interest the tourist save its tragic past and the tomb of Oocoo. This great Seminole chieftain was treacherously seized while under the protection of a flag of truce, on October 23, 1837, and sent a prisoner to Fort Moultrie. There he was so prostrated by grief and wasted by fever that he died January 30, 1838. A monument was erected to his memory near the entrance to the fort, and few visitors fail to pause by the lonely grave and pay the tribute of a sigh to the memory of the brave and hapless young chieftain, whose death meant the final overthrow of his nation.

Paine's Celery Compound

Permanently Cures Sick and Nervous Headaches that Make Life Miserable.

Sick and nervous headaches are amongst the worst ills of life. The man or woman who is subject to headache at irregular intervals, goes through life bearing a load of misery and wretchedness that is terrible to think of.

Headaches as a rule, result from a disordered condition of the nervous system. Mental excitement, loss of sleep, bodily fatigue, and disordered digestion are exciting causes. When the brain becomes tired and overworked, the whole nervous system is weakened, and headaches result: If the liver is sluggish, the kidneys inactive, and digestion deranged, headaches invariably follow. To cure and prevent headache, the nervous system must be strengthened and vitalized. The most persistent cases of headache, nervous weakness, and sleeplessness, are permanently cured by Paine's Celery Compound; it is the great reconstructer of the nervous system. Mrs. Henry Westrick, St. Clair, Mich., tells of her release from suffering as follows: "I have been troubled with dyspepsia and sick headache for a number of years. About every week I would have a bad spell of sick headache, but since I began using Paine's Celery Compound, my dyspepsia is gone, and I do not have any more headaches. I feel better than I have for years."

THE WASTES OF THE BODY

Every seven days the blood, muscles and bones of a man of average size loses two pounds of worn-out tissue. This waste cannot be replenished and the health and strength kept up without perfect digestion. When the stomach and digestive organs fail to perform their functions, the strength lets down, health gives way, and disease sets up. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure enables the stomach and digestive organs to digest and assimilate all of the wholesome food that may be eaten into the kind of blood that rebuilds the tissues and protects the health and strength of the mind and body. Kodol cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. It is an ideal spring tonic. Sold by E. T. Whitehead & Co.

QUESTION ANSWERED.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. You can get this reliable remedy at E. T. WHITEHEAD & CO'S. Price 25c and 75c.

What American Girls Need.

February Woman's Home Companion.

What American girls need is a high ideal—I shall I say a new ideal—of womanhood.

To be pretty, to be daintily dressed, to be courted, flattered and coddled is the dream of most girls. The dream must be replaced by determination, energy and effort to be a helpful, hopeful, useful members of society. Womanly beauty and charm will grow of itself when character has been formed on lines of eternal truth, self-reliance and gracefulness. Every girl should be helped at home and in school, before she is far in her teens, first to become an expert in all the work which enters in the home and in the care of the wardrobe, and second to study some occupation, trade or profession by which she can earn a comfortable living for herself and those who may be dependent upon her. I put domestic work first because, no matter what her wage-earning occupation may be, and no matter what riches she may seem to have in reality or in prospect, every girl should be practically prepared to be the wife of a poor man. In no other way than by strict training in cooking, laundrywork and general house keeping, plain sewing and dress-making, can such preparation be made. This doesn't sound romantic, but it is really dictated by the very heart of romance; namely, belief in marriage for love, and for love alone. "Love in a cottage," in a cabin—may, in a city tenement, and a fast bedside—is a reality; but when a slattern sits by the fire, when a peevish woman serves burnt fried steak every day, when unkempt children clamor and the window-shades are all awry, then poor Loves flies away and never comes back, and to our helpless, dreaming girl how hard the reality seems!

Headaches as a rule, result from a disordered condition of the nervous system. Mental excitement, loss of sleep, bodily fatigue, and disordered digestion are exciting causes. When the brain becomes tired and overworked, the whole nervous system is weakened, and headaches result: If the liver is sluggish, the kidneys inactive, and digestion deranged, headaches invariably follow. Portraits of Washington.

Youth's Companion.

The change of one portrait of Washington for another on the two-cent stamp recalls the fact that there are many portraits of The Father of his Country,—more than of most of his contemporaries,—and some of them are excellent. Washington was very kind to artists, and spent many hours sitting to painters, who must have enjoyed putting in oils that fine face with the even brows, the large, straight nose, and the solid, kind mouth drawn grayly in at the corners.

Beside Hoodon's bust and Gilbert Stuart's portrait, there is the excellent picture by Edward Savage, for whom Washington is said to have stopped work for three hours one very busy day. It gives a "three-quarters" view of the face, and shows a mild, deep, generous eye. St. Memin's crayon profile was probably the last portrait made before Washington's death. The face is somewhat fuller than in most pictures, and reveals an ample double chin.

In John Trumbull's portrait the chin is not so strong as in other pictures, and the cheek and the stanch base of the jaw that are so excellent in Hoodon's bust are concealed under the side-whiskers. Trumbull knew Washington well, for he served on his staff.

There are some amusing portraits of Washington that are not portraits at all. One is a Dutch painting on glass in brilliant colors. Another spurious portrait
