covered with nature's great kaleidoscope of Glorious Cctober. beauty; and when the cool breezes of gladsome autumn time remind us to say farewell to sultry summer and welcome the bracing atmosphere of tall and winter. It is the joyous harvest time when he who has faith!ully and laboriously tilled the soil since the opening of the spring can now realize the results of his year's evertions and rejoice in the plenty that comes to him who has been diligent in the business to which he has for months given thought and labor. With the chatting groups of children who go running over the hills and the sun-tanned toilers in the ripened harvest fields there is gladness and joy in glorious October. One other charm about this good month of October is the fact that it is the busiest month in the year. For the most part there is less Lindrance by reason of heat or cold or rain; and so the round of toil goes on undisturbed. Then there are fewer holidays in October than in any other month. The whole blessed sunshiny days are given to busy work

PRESIDENT Roosevelt was a great here with all men but a few days ago because of his good offices in bringing about reconciliation between Russia Did Mr. Roosevelt Know? and Japan whereby the slaughter of human life by war was stopped. To-day there is a question with the American people whether Mr. Roosevelt knew about how the Equitable life insurance company used the people's money for his election in the last presidential campaign. Recent developments have shown that the managers of the Equitable appropriated large sums of money which belonged to its policy holders for the purpose of aiding the Republican campaign. This was very wrong and not only the policy holders in the Equitable insurance company, but the American people as a whole, condemn it. Yesterday the people were praising President Roosevelt for his great work in bringing Russia and Japan to terms of peace; to-day they are asking the question, Did Mr. Roosevelt know about the unrighteous use of the people's money for his own election? Now, what will President Rossevelt say about it? Surely he will have something to say; for the people almost demand it. If such a great question were before the people concerning a Congressim in who might be canvassing for a reelection, the people would fire questions at him if he would not discuss it otherwise. We believe the people are waiting to see what the President will say about this great insurance scandal which figured in his election.

SCOTLAND NECK, N. C., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1905.

Writer Believes That Not Infrequently Men Employing This Bit of Magic Honestly Have Faith in It.

From time to time during the last 240 years the so-called divining rod has been the subject of public controversy throughout the civilized world. Periodically a newspaper correspondence arises like an epidemic and then dies away, to be resuscitated first time.

I append some brief notes on the subject, tracing the forked rod from its earliest recorded use in history down to the present time.

The origin of the word "dowsing" is obscure. I am inclined to think it arose from the translation of the colloquial German name of the rod-

A DOWSER AT WORK

Schlag-ruthe, striking rod-into the Cornish Celtic or Middle English (M. E., duschen-to strike or fall), finding underground water in Somerset, where a domestic water supply is in many places most difficult to obtain, owing to the nature of the secondary rock formation there; the water existing in fissures or hollows, and not in large beds, as it does in many other places. The pext question was, What was he function of the downing or divining rod? This is of use simply as an index of an unconscious muscular spasm which occurs in the dowser when he is in the neighborhood of underground water, metallic ore, or any other object for which he is accustomed to search by means of the rod. Hence many dowsers do not use a rod at all, trusting entirely to the sensations they experience. These sensations often produce a serious malaise on the part of the dowser when at the object of his search. For two centuries dowsers in all countries have asserted the existence of this malaise.

What, then, gives rise to the spasm and twisting of the rod? Is it a all the diviners or dowsers themselves say it is electricity, just as they would explain boiler explosions, or tricity. To set this question at rest, made a series of experiments on infound that whenever the dowser hought he was insulated the rod would not work, and vice versa, though, as a matter of fact, I had, unknown to the dowser, reversed mat-

It's the greatest comfort After much tedious investigation and discovery of the age. Allen's Foot- experiment I came to the conclusion He decided to take the risk, and, that the motion of the rod in a genuine and successful dowser is due to easy. The Coyote Proves Himself a Coward Existence Little Higher Than That of When Cornered and Runs for Brute Beasts, They Are Dangerous Protection from His Huand Violent and Constantly Unman Friend. der Police Surveillance.

Yesterday I walked through the Blue Mountain forest with Romulus. my prairie wolf. He lives in the great game preserve altogether now, but he comes to the Northwest Gate every night to be fed, and he is never this interesting sect. But not only in so far away but he will come quickly a few years later as if it began for the at a call, pleased as any dog to start out with us for a tramp.

It was about 3 o'clock in the afternoon when I unlocked the forest gate. and the wolf was nowhere in sight. Making a speaking trumpet of my hands, I called his name, drawing it out as long as I could hold my breath. As the echo died away among the hills, I heard the coyote's answering The "Boziaks" are destitute people, howl, and presently I saw him, a speck of gray against the snow, com- and with very little intelligence. In ing at a lope over the crest of some rising ground. His loose hair moved in the wind as he came and gave him the appearance of something blown the indirect outcome of the emancipaalong. When he came up he smelled, shook his head knowingly and pranced about, showing his pleasure in every movement. Then he leaned upon me, seizing my gloved hand in his teeth, and as I moved along, he trotted beside me, holding on to a loose strap of one of my snow shoes, which strap he quickly cut through with his teeth and carried off to play with.

Then Romulus and I went up the hill to the east for half a mile, then south to an open glade in the forest, where I could watch the wild boar when they came in for their evening meal at the feeding ground. In working their way through the snow, they had made deep and narrow trails to and from the places they wished to visit, and along these they were in the habit of passing, sometimes singly and again a dozen together in single file.

It was not long before I heard in the distance a grunting and squealing which told me the wild pigs were comover to Cornwall in the reign of number walking along in Indian file Queen Elizabeth. It was they who well to the east of me. I decided doubtless introduced the use of the to change my position, and quietly rod into England for prospecting the worked my way over to another clump mines of Cornwall and Somerset, of trees, crossing the bear trail be-Nearly 100 years later it was used for fore mentioned and getting to the windward of it. Long before he reached them they got his scent, and "whoofing" disgustedly, anything out of the common, by electihey ran back on their own trail. They did not go far, however, but, coming to a fork in the tracks, turned and sulated and uninsulated dowsers, and again headed for the feeding ground, over the very route I had expected to see them on in the first place. I felt sure they would not pass the point at which I had crossed this trail, but I waited to see what they would do.

On came the boar, two little gray pigs leading, followed by a large one, almost black, possibly their mother, and behind her there were half a dozen more of different sizes. They soon smelt the coyote, and saw him, too, rule, the rooms contain accommodafor that matter, but after halting for about a minute they seemed to decide that there was nothing very dangerous about him, and proceeded on their

Almost before he knew it the first little pig ran into my trail, and he stopped so quickly that he almost fell backward over. With a wild "whoof" of disgust and fear, he turned and ran, the others following his example on the instant. Then he seemed to change his mind, and the whole party stopped, while the first little pig advanced, as though to make sure there was no mistake. As he reached the cross trail, he turned back as before. but, again changing his mind, he seemd to make a desperate resolve. gathering all his strength, he dashed wildly over the hated spot, and sped madly as sped the pigs which ran

All this time the coyote had been but an interesting spectator, but now, seeing the little pig isolated, as it were, he jumped into the trail and started after it at the top of his speed. For that it is due either to (a) a sub- a moment both pig and wolf were lost conscious detection of surface signs of to sight, but then we heard a rushing ited with having been one of them, underground water, which would link sound, and along the trail came the coyote, running for his life, with the almost poetic insight into the abjectlittle gray boar right close behind him.
