GAVE UP SUPPORTER.

"I wore a supporter for four years, to keep my womb, which had become very large, down before me," writes Mrs. J. J. Christian, of Nashville, Tenn. "My doctor told me that a supporter would help me. I suffered untold misery, and could hardly walk. After taking two bottles of Cardui I gave up my supporter. Now I am taking my fourth bottle. I feel as well as formerly, and can be on my feet half a day at a time. I strongly recommend Cardui to every suffering woman."

OUR NEW YORK WEEKLY LETTER

Spring Fashions In Colors and Fabrics. Advance Styles In Semi-made Robes and Shirt Waist Patterns.

As soon as the snows of January begin to fall the southern exodus takes place and some of the most fashionable gowns of the season are traveling south to make gay with beauty and color those sunny, southern towns. Snow and ice, sleet and hail are left behind, with slippery sidewalks, to the unfortunate who have to remain. What a pity every one cannot lie away from busy, wintry New York, with trunks filled with fluffy, floating, fascinating things that are only meant for verandas and shaded magnolia walks.

A gown builder on Fifth avenue has just finished one of these gowns for a well known society girl to take south. It is the familiar but ever beautiful combination of white cloth and lace, made up in princess fashion, with a stunning little bolero of lace.

If Paris is the birthplace of novelties, New York can quickly make use of them. A young lady who always does her shopping in Paris and London came home recently congratulating herself on her exquisite gown and costume of the latest Parisian cut, only to find many of her friends wearing the same thing.

Gun metal will be very popular for a spring color, as also will royal blue and pompadour pink. In spring fabrics all the softest shades imaginable are used with the most exquisite colorings. Hand painted muslins with a deep border of pink roses suggested an old fashioned costume of fifty years ago. The tendency toward the embroidery done in the designs of early spring goods, and a very charming thing was a case carreux organdie in pale and deep shades of lavender and pink. French tulle will be worn a great deal. They come in all delicate shades suggestive of spring, with dainty bouquets scattered over them, looking almost like a Dolly Varden, but less pronounced in coloring.

A very serviceable little frock could be made of organdie or of imported embroidered linen, the embroidery done in a small odd design of pale blue or green. Another, equally useful and attractive to any one who likes smart laundered things, was a jacquard gingham in gray, white or blue.

Spring will see the culmination of the silk vogue, and hardly before midwinter is here all the newest weaves will be displayed in their heavy or soft folds. Satin messaline, a very soft clinging material, makes a most beautiful evening gown if combined with rich lace. Hair line stripes in fancy silks make very striking walking costumes, and there is nothing more serviceable for the ever popular shirt waist seems to be here to stay and will stay as long as the coat costume continues its useful career.

In shirt waists there are so many seen that it is bewildering, but some are within reach, really delicately embroidered ones, of the most limited purse. To the girl who can sew a very pretty new idea was seen in one of the shops this week consisting of exquisitely trimmed batiste with material enough in it to make a shirt waist in the average sizes. It was called the "ready to make waist," as a paper pattern was sold with it to save the extra trouble of designing.

But in embroidered things there is nothing that can equal some lingerie semi-made robes that are attracting a great deal of attention. The embroidery is machine made, but put on so cleverly on fine nainsook and batiste that only careful observation could detect any difference from handmade work. Some of them were made of figured batiste or lawn in pale blue or pink, with delicate designs on the flowing sleeves and collar. They range in price from $9 up for the white robes and $12 up for the colored ones.

AUTO WITH KITCHEN ANNEX

In Which Negro Chef Prepares Luncheon While Going Thirty Miles an Hour.

A sensation was created the other day on the Pelham Bay road by a touring car that had a kitchen annex. While the machine was merrily bowling along at some 30 miles an hour a negro chef prepared luncheon over a little oil or possibly electric stove, reports the New York Sun.

Spectators laughed and cheered; small boys ran after the auto. It seemed either the limit of human progress or the quintessence of American humor.

The car was light green, inclosed with glass as to front and sides. Three men and three women passengers sat on the side seats facing one another. Between them a narrow folding table that had been lately used as a card table and a phonograph stand was set with plates, cups, knives and forks. The table had racks like those used on shipboard to keep the dishes from jolting away.

The kitchen was a folding sort of box that hung over and projected from the tail of the car. It was just big enough to contain the small stove and an array of long spoons, pots and pans of aluminum hung on hooks.

The negro chef, belted at the waist and securely strapped, stood on the threshold of the kitchen and manipulated the utensils. Just as the car came near the chef was heard to shout: "Don't go so fast, boss! I done lost a lamb chop back in de road."

"Slow down a little," said a lavender veiled woman to the chauffeur.

"What's that? A lunch wagon?" inquired one of the spectators.

"I'll find the lamb chop, mister," eagerly cried a small boy.

The tourists did not seem to see anything funny in the situation. As the car slowed down they unfolded their napkins and prepared to attack the sizzling chops that were not lost by the way-side.

A rich boarding house aroma mingled with a smell of gasoline and the flowery effluence of country fields. A can of condensed coffee and a tall bottle marked "Rhine" showed that the luncheon would be complete.

When the car had passed on the oldest inhabitant of Pelham Bay turned to another spectator and said:

"I guess this is about the limit of what I'm going to see. Only two things more could happen—to have people born in them 'mobiles' and to throw the corpses of the dead overboard like they do at sea."

CHRISTMAS TREE TEUTON.

Is Probably the Famous Yew-Tree of Norse Mythology—Germans See Luther as Author.

The Christmas tree originated with the Germans, relates the New York Herald. It was probably a dim remembrance of the mysterious Yggdrasil or gigantic yew-tree of Norse mythology, which was fabled to bind together earth, hell and heaven.

German tradition, however, persistently attributes the invention of the Christmas tree to Martin Luther. On Christmas Eve, so the story runs, he was traveling alone over the snow-covered country and was deeply impressed by the contrast it made with the star-bespangled heavens. On arriving home he vainly strove to explain this impression to his wife and children. Suddenly an idea occurred to him. He went into the garden, cut off a little fir tree, dragged it into the nursery, put some candles on its branches and lighted them.

One of the most popular of German prints represents Martin Luther sitting in the bosom of his family, with a lighted Christmas tree in front of him.

As an archaeological fact the Christmas tree can be traced back almost as far as Luther's time, and may consequently have existed then. A manuscript, dated 1608, preserved in a private collection in Friedburg, Hesse, describes an illuminated fir tree as being a recognized feature of the Christmas festivities in that part of Germany.

For 200 years the fashion maintained itself along the Rhine, when suddenly at the beginning of this century it spread over Germany, and 50 years later had conquered all Europe.

Duchess Helena of Orleans introduced it into the Tuilleries in 1840 and it subsequently won the favor of Empress Eugenie. To-day Paris uses some 50,000 trees every Christmas. The French plant the entire tree in a tub, so as to be able to preserve it until New Year, when it is "plundered."

Trying Her.

A Kansas City girl who recently returned from New York, where she studied music several years, was telling her mother's old negro cook about her work in the metropolis.

"So you've been studyin' music, has you?" said the old woman.

"Dat's fine," said the old woman straightening up from her work of rolling dough. "Now, less see how much you've learned in New York. Who write 'Bill Bailey, Won't You Please Come Home'?"—Kansas City Star.

TORTURE OF A PREACHER.

The story of the torture of Rev. O. D. Moore, pastor of the Baptist church, of Harpersville, N. Y., will interest you. He says: "I suffered agonies, because of a persistent cough, resulting from the grip. I had to sleep sitting up in bed. I tried many remedies, without relief, until I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption Coughs and Colds, which entirely cured my cough, and saved me from consumption." A grand cure for diseased conditions of Throat and Lungs. At E. T. Whitehead & Co.'s drug store; price 50c and $1.00, guaranteed. Trial bottle free.
