The Weather and the Crops.

Cotton prices which had been weakening under great pressure in New York and by the bear allies over the country have rallied and taken an upward turn. While nothing like so many bales have gone to market this year as last year for the same date, still the farmers are marketing more cotton than they should in view of the short price and the prospects for higher figures. In fact, the indications and the confidence that 15 cents will be reached are so strong, that it is believed that Hearse Service any Time the bear speculators in many cases are buying cotton to hold.
