The Saltpeter Man.

(Lendon Athenseum.)

The saltpeter man of the first half of the seventeenth century was hated even more, if that be possible, than the "widow peeper" of those more recent days when light was subject to heavy taxation. Before the importation of saltpeter from abroad as an important ingredient in the manufacture of gunpowder it was a crown monopoly, and agents, popularly, known as saltpeter men, were sent all over the country to seek for it in stables, pigeon cots, pigsties and indeed in almost all other places the soil of which was supposed to be impregnated with animal .matter. The injury these men did and the irritation they caused by digging up floors and pulling down fences were great. No householder was free from their visits, which were rendered especially odious from their being empowered to impress carts and horses for the purpos of carrying away the mineral and the utensils employed in its manufacture. tors in the national irritation which made the civil war possible. One great drawback for the mass es here is that the opera season lasts but a few months and that the prices of the limited number of representations during the brief period are so very high that the people generally cannot afford to go. It is dreadful to me to realize that it is the very people whose souls long for music and who sooner or later, I believe, be the chief factors in building it up here as they have been in Europe and who are now denied the opportunity not of satisfying themselves, but of lending their aid to the spread of art feeling and comprehension.
