DEATH IN TERRIBLE SHAPE

Horrible Imaginings of Edgar Allan Poe.

The wife of one of the most repected citizens-a lawyer of eminence and a member of congresswas seized by a sudden and unaccountable illness which completely baffled the skill of her physicians. After much suffering she died, or was supposed to die. For three days the body was preserved unburied, during which it acquired a stony rigidity. The funeral, in short, was hastened on account of the rapid advance of what vas supposed to be decomposition.

The lady was deposited in her famly vault, which for three years was undisturbed. At the expiration of this term it was opened for the reception of a sarcophagus; but, alas; how fearful a shock awaited the husband, who personally threw open the door. As its portals swung outwardly back, some white appareled object fell rattling within his arms. It was the skeleton of his wife in her yet unmoldered shroud.

A careful investigation rendered it evident that she had revived within two days of her entombment, that her struggles within the coffin had caused it to fall from a ledge or shelf to the floor, where it was so broken as to permit her to escape. On the uppermost steps which led down to the dread chamber was a large fragment of coffin, with which it seemed that she had endeavored to arrest attention by striking the iron door. While thus occupied, she probably swooned or possibly died through sheer terror; and in falling her shroud became entangled in some iron work which projected interiorly. Thus she remained and thus she rotted erect.—Edgar Allan Poe.

Did as He Was Told.

Some years ago the Yankee schooner Sally Ann, under command of Capt. Spooner, was beating up the Connecti cut river. Mr. Comstock, the mate, was at his station forward. According to his notion of things the schooner was getting a "leetle" too near certain mud flats which lay along the larboard shore, so aft he went to the captain and with his hat cocked on one side said: "Cap'n Spooner, you're getting a
